House Slices Farm Bill $300 Million

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House slashed $300 million off the cost of a rural economic emergency farm bill Wednesday night and crushed a Republican-backed compromise on key crop price supports.

The House then adjourned after a long day's debate on the controversial farm legislation, leaving its final decisions for Thursday, when a disputed section on dairy supports is due for action.

At the end of an opening series of votes, the cost estimated for the bill was cut to $582 million, compared with the $882-million figured for the version recommended to the House by its Agriculture Committee.

The $300-million cut in the cost came on a 321-97 vote as the House voted to set the government-guaranteed target price of cotton at 45 cents a pound, up from present law's 38 cents, and to boost the cotton loan level to 38 cents a pound, compared with the existing 34 cents.

The Agriculture Committee had recommended a 48-cent-per-pound cotton target price and a 40-cent-per-pound cotton loan level.

A target price is a government guarantee to the producer of a product — meaning that if the free market price for a commodity falls below the law's fixed target price, the government would make up the difference with direct payments to the producer.

The loan level is the amount which a farmer can borrow from the government using the crops as security.

By 306 to 105, the House rejected a Republican-sponsored compromise which would set target prices as $1.68 a bushel for corn and other feed grains; at $2.51 a bushel for wheat; and at 44 cents a pound for cotton, while setting a corn and feed grains loan level of $1.34 a bushel and a wheat loan level of $1.67 a bushel.

Backers of the GOP compromise insisted it offered Congress the best chance for the final farm measure to avoid a veto by President Ford.

Earlier, by 260 to 159, the House rejected an amendment to leave cotton's target price at 38 cents a pound and loan level at 34 cents a pound. An attempt to set a minimum target price for wheat at $2.42 a bushel was defeated, 56 to 52.

The Ford administration maintains that the bill, which is designed to boost farm price supports on key crops and milk, would be costly to consumers and could lead to surplus production at taxpayer expense.

Backers of the bill, led by Rep. Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., said farm expenses have risen so sharply that emergency action is needed to help stave off financial chaos among the nation's wheat, cotton, feed grain and dairy producers.

Foley, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, which endorsed the bill last week, said the one-year emergency program would provide the assurance needed by farmers to keep producing commodities needed by all Americans.

As initially presented, the bill would raise the government's milk price support from 80 per cent of parity currently in effect to 85 per cent and require adjustments each three months to keep it at the specified rate.

Ed Dept. Budget Is $111 Million

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

The Legislature's Appropriations Committee Wednesday approved a $111 million budget for the Department of Education, which includes $4 million in additional funding for the troubled special education programs.

Special education funding would increase from $9.3 million during the current fiscal year to $13.2 million. The department had requested $18.5 million.

Payment of this year's funding for education of handicapped children has been delayed by administrative snarls.

The $110.8 million Department of Education budget also includes a continuation of state aid to public school districts at its current level of $55 million.

Due to the lapse of federal revenue sharing funds, continued funding at the current level will place an additional $15 million burden on state tax funds.

$9 Million Increase

The department's total budget represents an increase of $9 million over 1974-75 appropriations.

At the suggestion of Sen. Harold Simpson of Lincoln, the committee voted to sponsor a bill which would transfer the vocational rehabilitation program from Education to the Department of Public Welfare.

Legislature stories on Pages 18-20

The Department of Correctional Services has experienced difficulty in gaining cooperation from the vocational rehabilitation program.

If the Legislature accepted the bill and held it for possible enactment in 1976, Simpson said, it "might improve things." Simpson did not specifically mention past problems involving Correctional Services.

The Exon administration would have direct control over the operation of the vocational rehabilitation program if it were moved to Public Welfare. The program is now under the direction of the State Board of Education.

Simpson's proposal would also transfer Social Security disability determination responsibilities from education to Public Welfare.

Budget OKd, 7-1

The Education budget was approved on a 7-1 vote, with Chairman Richard Marvel of Hastings dissenting.

The committee also wrapped up its decisions on the Department of Administrative Services, adding nearly $800,000 to the agency's request.

The $12.6 million proposal won 8-0 endorsement, but Marvel questioned the 10-year record of the state government control agency which he helped father in 1965.

"What in the h- is DAS doing?" Marvel asked Legislative Fiscal Analyst Eldin Ehrlich. "What are we getting for our dough?"

Marvel said the data processing, accounting and auditing systems envisioned with creation of the department have not reached expectations.

Tools, Framework Provided

But Ehrlich suggested that DAS provides "the basic tools and basic framework from which to operate."

A highly sophisticated data processing system is not being utilized effectively by many state agencies, he said.

And the accounting system needs upgrading because state government is a more complex operation than it was when the system was established a decade ago, Ehrlich suggested.

Sen. Glenn Goodrich of Omaha said many of the problems he has encountered in state government relate to the "low quality" of some state agency staff personnel, including specifically some of them in Education and Public Welfare.

"Management is the key problem" Marvel agreed.

The DAS budget includes $100,000 earmarked for improvements in data processing, accounting, auditing and communications.

A $200,000 addition was earmarked for the purchase of new state cars, and $200,000 will be tied to implementation of the Nebraska employment information system.

Joseph Aliotos Together Again

San Francisco (AP) — Mayor Joseph Alioto is living again with his wife, ending a separation that began when Mrs. Alioto filed for divorce Feb. 26.

A spokesmand for Alioto, who had been staying with his daughter and son-in-law, said the mayor's wife, Angelina, had instructed her attorney not to take action on the divorce papers.

Mrs. Alioto disappeared for 18 days in February 1974. When she reappeared, she said she wanted to punish her husband for neglecting her.

Trio Taken For A Ride On Ice Floe

Three young Sioux City adventurers got carried away on an icy cruise down the Missouri River Wednesday.

An ice floe broke away from the shore while they were standing on it, and the river's eight-knot current swept them about a mile downstream before a Nebraska game warden's boat could come to their rescue.

The involuntary drifters were identified as Steven Dugdale, Don Bailey and Gary Etmonson, ranging in age from 17 to 21.

They said they planned to swim to shore if the floe broke up. Water temperature was about 34 degrees.

15 Compete For Council

Fifteen political hopefuls will square off in the April primary election with the hopes of coming out winners in the Lincoln City Council race.

Three candidates for mayor will be whittled down to two in the primary race.

And one political newcomer is seeking to unseat one of the two incumbents seeking re-election to the Airport Authority board.

The last day to file for office was Wednesday.

The April 8 primary will narrow the field of council candidates down to eight who will seek four City Council seats in the May 6 general election.

Four Seek Re-Election

All four council members whose terms expire this spring are seeking re-election. However, there will be one vacancy on the council since Council President Helen Boosalis is leaving her post of 16 years in an attempt to unseat incumbent Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf.

Schwartzkopf, 59, is seeking his third term in office. Joining Mrs. Boosalis, 55, on the primary ballot will be Jo Bragg, 30, a former social worker.

Schwartzkopf is expected to urge voters to put him back in office again so he can continue the programs begun by the city during his latest term of office.

Mrs. Boosalis says it's time to have better and more visible leadership out of City Hall.

And Bragg is campaigning on a platform to provide more human services and leadership.

Councilmen Richard Baker, Steve Cook and Bob Sikyta are seeking their second four-year terms.

Airport Authority

Businessman Don Geis is seeking to unseat either Richard Joyce or Richard Chapin from the Airport Authority Board. Geis said it is time for some new blood to be fused into the board's membership.

Although 15 candidates are seeking council seats, there are less people running than two years ago. In 1973, 18 people fought for three council seats.

Several unsuccessful candidates from that battle are trying it once again. Attorney William Thierstein came in fourth in the 1973 general election race and just missed being elected. Businessmen John King and plumber Bob Muggy didn't make it past the primary in 1973.

Candidates range in age from 25 to 65. Only one woman is seeking a council post this spring. Two years ago, two women were elected in the primary, and one, Sue Bailey, was the top vote getter in both the primary and general election races.

Winners in the council race will take home an annual paycheck of $4,000, while the mayor will earn $28,000 a year for the next four years. Airport Authority members receive no pay.

Candidates for the council are:

— Rudolph Deinert, 65, a real estate broker.
— Ron Kurtenbach, 32, a newspaper editor and janitor.
— Steve Tiwald, 25, a health planner for the state.
— Stephen Marx, 36, a pharmacist.
— Mary Rogge, 32, a part-time pharmacist and housewife.

Parochial Handicapped May Benefit

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Local school districts may offer special classes for handicapped students in private schools, Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas said in an opinion obtained by The Star Wednesday.

The opinion carries particular significance for the Lincoln Public School District, since thus far the district has refused to offer special education programs in Lincoln parochial and private schools under a law funded by the 1974 Legislature.

Father James Dawson, superintendent of Lincoln Catholic schools, said he hopes the opinion means special programs for the handicapped can begin soon in Lincoln parochial schools.

Constitutional Question

In the past, school district officials have contended it would violate the state constitution's separation of church and state to offer LB403 services in private schools.

Consequently, private school students with learning handicaps have had to go to the public schools if they wanted the state's special education program.

A school district official said Wednesday 38 private school students are presently enrolled in special education programs in the Lincoln Public Schools.

Father Dawson said there are 2,357 students in Lincoln parochial schools; he said he did not know how many of them might need special education programs.

Statewide, roughly 7% of public school students are enrolled in the new special education program. Assuming the incidence of learning handicaps is the same in Lincoln parochial schools, it would mean roughly 165 students will need special education programs in their schools.

Precedent Cited

In the opinion, Asst. Atty. Gen. Harold Mosher cited the Hartington School case as a precedent for the public school district's leasing space in private schools.

"It is settled law that school districts may lease a classroom in a private school building . . . Consequently, it would appear that the board of education of a public school district may offer the therapeutic programs enumerated (in law) in a leased classroom in a private school building.

"It does not, however, have an unqualified duty to do so," Mosher wrote.

Father Dawson said the leased classroom concept is not new. He noted that public schools are now offering reading disability courses under the federal Title I program in Blessed Sacrament, Sacred Heart and St. Mary's parochial schools in Lincoln.

Reports Unconfirmed

According to unconfirmed reports, other school districts in the state are offering special education programs in parochial schools under the state's special education law. State Education Commissioner Anne Campbell, who requested the opinion, said she does not know if any school districts are providing LB403 programs in parochial schools.

Father Dawson said the state law speaks of providing the educational services in the "best possible way." To him, he said, that means in the private school classroom.

Parents of parochial school students generally have refused to enroll their children in public schools for special courses because of problems it has created, he said.

"Often it compounds the problem by making the student who already has some handicap leave the school where he feels secure go to another unfamiliar school," Father Dawson said.

Father Dawson said the Lincoln parochial schools are doing all they can within their budgets to provide services for handicapped students. But, he said, there are services available under LB403 the parochial schools cannot provide.

'Had Its Problems'

In the past, Dawson said, "We didn't want to bring a lot of pressure to bear on the state and the school district because the program was just getting started and had its problems.

"My feeling is the Lincoln Public Schools will provide the services," Father Dawson said.

He added he would hate to see the district put off any special education programs in the parochial schools until the fall term of 1975.

Phillips, Five Other Refiners Indicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Phillips Petroleum Co. and five other oil refiners were indicted Wednesday on federal charges of conspiring to raise and fix wholesale gasoline prices in five Western states from mid-1970 through 1971.

The indictment, returned by a grand jury in U.S. District Court in Los Angeles, accused the companies of suppressing price competition and depriving customers of the benefit of a free market.

The Justice Department leveled similar allegations against the refiners in a companion civil suit seeking a permanent injunction prohibiting any future price-fixing scheme.

Along with Phillips, based in Bartlesville, Okla., the defendants are Douglas Oil Co. of Costa Mesa, Calif., a wholly owned subsidiary of Continental Oil Corp. of Houston; Powerine Oil Co. of Santa Fe Springs, Calif.; Fletcher Oil & Refining Co. of Wilmington, Calif.; Golden Eagle Refining Co. Inc. of Los Angeles, a wholly owned subsidiary of Ultramar Co. Ltd. of London; and MacMillan Ring-Free Co. Inc. of New York City.

The indictment and lawsuit involved the sale of gasoline in California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada and Arizona from at least July 1970 through 1971.

The fuel involved is commonly referred to as "rebrand" gasoline because it is ultimately sold at retail stations under a trade mark or brand name which is not controlled by the refiner.

The department said the six companies sold more than $90 million worth of gasoline at wholesale in the five states in 1970.

The civil and criminal complaints said "various other corporations, firms and individuals" were co-conspirators, though not named as defendants. They were not identified.

The alleged conspiracy "has consisted of a continuing agreement, understanding and concert of action among the defendants and co-conspirators, the substantial terms of which have been to increase, fix, stabilize and maintain the price of rebrand gasoline," the complaints said.

The effect has been to raise prices to artificially high levels, the government charged.

"Customers buying rebrand gasoline have been deprived of the opportunity to buy rebrand gasoline in a free and unrestricted market," the complaints asserted.

Each company faces a maximum penalty of a $50,000 fine if convicted on the criminal charge.

The effect has been to raise prices to artificially high levels, the government charged.

"Customers buying rebrand gasoline have been deprived of the opportunity to buy rebrand gasoline in a free and unrestricted market," the complaints asserted.

Each company faces a maximum penalty of a $50,000 fine if convicted on the criminal charge.

S. Vietnam Abandoning Hue

SAIGON (AP) — The South Vietnamese government is abandoning its old imperial capital of Hue on the northern coast in the face of a major North Vietnamese buildup, government officials disclosed Thursday.

Tens of thousands of refugees were reported streaming out of the city southward to Da Nang and the small group of Americans there was reported evacuated. Hue has a population of about 200,000 — many of them refugees from Quang Tri to the north which is also being given up

Officials said there are still civilians and government troops in Hue but President Nguyen Van Thieu has given the go-ahead to abandon it as indefensible — part of a strategy that has seen the Saigon government give up Pleiku, Kontum and Darlac provinces in the central highlands and Quang Tri and Thua Thien on the northern coast below the demilitarized zone.

Hue is the major city in Thua Thien province.

The Saigon command said the flood of frightened civilians trying to escape the encroaching North Vietnamese in the relinquished areas was the biggest of the long Vietnam war.

U.S. officials said there had been eight Americans in Hue, but four who were government employes were evacuated Wednesday to Da Nang They said the four American civilians still in the old imperial capital, one believed to be a teacher, had not yet been located.

The Saigon command reported that half a dozen North Vietnamese divisions were threatening Quang Tri City and Hue, outnumbering the South Vietnamese by 3 to 1.

U.S. Marines in 1968 spearheaded a bloody siege to retake Hue after it fell to the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong during the Tet offensive. Two years later mass graves were uncovered containing some 2,700 bodies massacred during the one-month occupation by the Communist-led forces.

Analysts said President Nguyen Van Thieu approved the decision to abandon Quang Tri City for strategic reasons. Rumors persisted that Thieu did it as part of a political accommodation with the Communist side, but both U.S. and Saigon government spokesmen denied any deal.

By pulling out of Quang Tri, the government has now abandoned or lost five of 44 provinces since the Paris cease-fire accord more than two years ago. It has lost or abandoned 24 of its 244 district capitals.

While Quang Tri, Kontum, Pleiku, Ban Me Thuot and Phuoc Binh City have been lost, the government still controls Saigon, Da Nang and Qui Nhon, the nation's three biggest cities, and other major cities such as Can Tho in the Mekong Delta, Bien Hoa, Tay Ninh, Phan Thiet, Nha Trang and Cam Ranh Bay.

The five provinces that have fallen or been abandoned have a total population of less than one million, or one twentieth of South Vietnam's 20 million people. Phuoc Long province north of Saigon fell last January to the North Vietnamese.

In other developments:

—The Philippine government announced that South Vietnam's deputy prime minister had asked President Ferdinand Marcos to help bring about a new cease-fire in South Vietnam. The announcement said he made the request during a courtesy call.

1,000 Students Oppose Aid

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — About 1,000 Cambodia students demonstrated against continued U.S. aid to Cambodia Wednesday and declared they were for "any government, Communist or not, as long as it brings peace."

"American military aid has not made for peace, joy or well-being for our country," declared Koun Thann Thanarak, the president of the National Student Association "On the contrary it has caused misery, pain and suffering."

On the fighting front, Communist-led gunners rained shells on refugee-choked Neak Luong, the government's last bastion on the Mekong River 32 miles southeast of Phnom Penh. Military sources said government troops and some 25,000 refugees were crammed into a perimeter of about one square mile.

"It looks like a carnage there," said a U.S. source.

In other developments

—For the third time this week, a French air force plane flew French nationals out of Phnom Penh

— A political impasse went into its eighth day as Premier Long Boret wrestled with various political factions over the formation of a new government. Political and diplomatic sources said the infighting has interrupted a scenario formulated by Long Boret and a handful of other civilian politicians to eventually dump Lon Nol, make the prime minister a temporary chief of state and form a peace government.

"We don't want any kind of foreign aid any more, on either side," said Thanarak, a 25-year-old philosophy student. "We demand that all nations stop interfering in Khmer problems."

Senate OKs Less For Indochina And More For Humanitarian Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate passed a $3.9 billion foreign aid appropriation bill Wednesday after increasing funds for humanitarian aid and reducing aid to Indochina.

The measure, providing funds for the current fiscal year ending June 30, was passed on a 57-40 roll call vote

It is $2 billion below administration requests and $446.9 million above appropriations voted by the House last week.

On motion of Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., the Senate rejected 64 to 31 a $59 million increase recommended by the Senate Appropriations Committee in the $440 million allowed by the House for the administration's postwar reconstruction program in Indochina.

McGovern called the reconstruction program a misnomer, asserting that it provides economic budget support for the South Vietnamese government and contributes to prolongation of the fighting there.

Adopted 53 to 41 was an amendment by Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., allowing $450 million for food and nutrition programs for poor countries, in place of $234 million approved by the House and $350 million recommended by the Senate Appropriations Committee

The bill will go to a House-Senate conference to adjust differences

The bill includes more than $1 billion in special assistance for Middle East nations, including $300 million in military credit sales and grants and $324.5 million supporting assistance to Israel, $250 million economic aid for Egypt, $77.5 million for Jordan and $100 million in a special requirements fund from which Syria might share

Refugee Movement Spreads Like Fire

©The New York Times

By MALCOLM W. BROWNE

Saigon — The migration of refugees that began last weekend from South Vietnam's Central Highlands spread like brushfire Wednesday to encompass most of the northern two-thirds of the country Estimates of the number of people on the move ranged up to one-half million.

Families were leaving their homes Wednesday in cities as far apart as from the former imperial capital of Hue at the northern end of the country, to Dalat, a mountain resort 140 miles northeast of Saigon.

The mass movement received its main impetus from the growing public impression (supported by considerable evidence) that Saigon feels that the northern two-thirds of the country may soon have to be sacrificed to save the core of the nation in the south

Contrasted with the panic-stricken floods of refugees swept before the Communist advances in 1968 and 1972, the movement Wednesday was for the most part orderly No major Communist attacks, no large-scale battles and no massive aerial bombing are now impelling the flight

Instead, the refugees generally seemed fearful of being left behind as others fled past them

The refugees lucky enough to be near functioning airports and with money to buy black market plane tickets at four times the normal price were coming to Saigon

Another part of the people's fear was that the government seemed to be abandoning huge areas everywhere The voluntary surrender of Pleiku, Kontum and Darlac provinces this week has shocked most Vietnamese

New York Times News Summary

Crude Oil Case Cracked

Washington — The Federal Eenergy Administration disclosed that it has cracked its first major case of overcharging for crude oil under the two-price system — "old" oil and "new" oil — that the government applied to producers 18 months ago. The agency said that a Kansas producer, I. G. Stephenson of Wichita, agreed Tuesday to refund $468,000 to a refiner and pay a civil penalty to the government of $35,000.

Kissinger Said Gloomy

Jerusalem — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger would have refused to negotiate the Vietnam cease-fire if he had known that, two years later, Congress would deprive Saigon of needed economic and military aid. This was one of the statements made to newsmen aboard Kissinger's airliner during a round trip Wednesday between Jerusalem and Riyadh, Saudi Arabia. With news reports of South Vietnam's declining fortunes creating a sense of fatalistic gloom among the Kissinger party, newsmen were given their most pessimistic appraisal of the overall world situation in some time.

CIA Connection Sought

New York — Robert F. Maheu, a former high aide to Howard R. Hughes, has said the eccentric industrialist had been looking for years for a Central Intelligence Agency connection that would expand his influence with the government before the agency signed his company to try to recover a sunken Soviet submarine.

Jumbo-Jet Changes Eyed

New York — The government told the nation's aviation industry Wednesday it has decided to put forward a program for major modification of all jumbo-jet airliners to minimize the type of hazard that led to the DC-10 crash a year ago in which 346 were killed. The changes to the 500 jumbos now flying would cost at least $250,000 a plane, for a total of over $125 million.

'Populists' Go Wooing

Washington (Washington Star) — Advocates of a "populist" movement with a leaning toward Alabama Gov. George Wallace were wooing neighborhood-school backers in Washington Wednesday for a national rally and some full-scale lobbying.

Britain Cutting Defense

London — The British government says it's going ahead with large-scale cuts in defense spending to save some $11 billion over the next 10 years.

(c) New York Times News Service

Social Security Must Be Paid To Widowers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled Wednesday that the government must pay Social Security benefits to widowers as well as widows when they are left with children in their care.

In an 8 to 0 decision, the court said a federal law restricting the benefits to widows is unconstitutional sex discrimination.

The government has estimated that it would have cost $20 million in 1974 alone to extend the payments to widowers.

In other action, the court:

—Edged back again, as it did in a case four years ago, from the protections for criminal defendants which were laid down in its controversial Miranda decision of 1966.

—Ruled 7 to 1 that a commuter tax imposed by New Hampshire on workers from out of state is unconstitutional.

In the Social Security case, the Supreme Court agreed with a three-judge federal panel that Stephen C. Wiesenfeld of New Brunswick, N.J., should have been granted benefits after his wife died in childbirth in 1972. Mrs. Wiesenfeld was a school teacher.

"The fact that a man is working while there is a wife at home does not mean that he would, or should be required to, continue to work if his wife dies," Justice William J. Brennan Jr. said for the court.

"It is no less important for a child to be cared for by its sole surviving parent when the parent is male rather than female," Brennan added.

Justice Lewis F. Powell and Chief Justice Warren E. Burger agreed in a separate opinion, although expressing doubt that "fathers generally will forgo work and remain at home to care for children to the same extent that mothers may make this choice." The law grants survivors' benefits based on the earnings of a deceased husband and father, both to his widow and to the couple's minor children.

In cases where the wife dies, benefits based on her earnings have been provided for the minor children but not for the widower.

An advisory committee studying the Social Security System reported two weeks ago that 15,000 men would be eligible in the first year if the benefits were extended to widowers.

The surviving spouse receives full benefits as long as they are not earning more than $2,520 a year. Anyone earning more than that loses $1 in benefits for every $2 additional earned.

The court's further retreat from the Miranda ruling came in the case of William Robert Hass of Oregon, convicted of stealing two bicycles.

Police had told him, as required by the Miranda decision, that he was entitled to remain silent and have a lawyer present during questioning. After Haas asked for a lawyer, police continued questioning him and told him he could see a lawyer later.

With Love And Daisies

Miami (UPI) — Swami Vishnu Devenanda, operator of a yoga retreat on Paradise Island at Nassua, Bahamas, said he would fly to Cuba in his personal "peace plane" Wednesday to "bomb Havana with Daisies."

The swami said he had not advised Cuban authorities of his plan to drop flowers and leaflets onto Havana.

Senate Votes Down Two Corporate Tax Breaks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted Wednesday night to tax away an additional $1.6 billion of the profits earned by U.S. companies abroad. But Republicans blocked an effort to add a Social Security benefits increase to a $29.2 billion tax-cut bill.

Before the Social Security fight, the Senate by voice vote adopted an amendment by Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., repealing the foreign tax credit for U.S.-based oil companies.

Then, on a 73-24 roll call, senators approved a second Hartke proposal eliminating a tax break for all U.S. firms — not just the oil companies — which operate abroad.

If the two votes are upheld in a Senate-House conference, the taxes of the giant multinational corporations would be raised by at least $1.6 billion a year — and most of the extra burden would fall on the oil companies.

In approving by voice vote the Hartke amendment repealing the foreign tax credit, the Senate agreed to take away one of the oil companies' most important tax breaks.

Under present law, a U.S. corporation can subtract from its U.S. tax bill any tax paid to a foreign government. For example, if Exxon Corp. makes a $100-million tax payment to Saudi Arabia, Exxon can subtract $100 million from its American taxes.

"This is a big rip-off — the single biggest tax loophole," said Hartke. "In effect, the U.S. taxpayers subsidize American companies for operating abroad."

But, while the amendment repeals the tax credit, it also reduces the U.S. tax rate on foreign oil income from 48 per cent to 24 per cent. The net result is a $1-billion increase in the tax liability of the giant oil companies.

The second Hartke amendment repeals the provision which allows U.S. companies to escape taxation on income earned abroad until the money is returned to the United States.

The amendment requires the firms to pay taxes on foreign profits in the year in which they were earned. It would mean an extra $600 million a year to the U.S. Treasury.

New York Times News Summary

Crude Oil Case Cracked

Washington — The Federal Eenergy Administration disclosed that it has cracked its first major case of overcharging for crude oil under the two-price system — "old" oil and "new" oil — that the government applied to producers 18 months ago. The agency said that a Kansas producer, I. G. Stephenson of Wichita, agreed Tuesday to refund $468,000 to a refiner and pay a civil penalty to the government of $35,000.

Kissinger Said Gloomy

Jerusalem — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger would have refused to negotiate the Vietnam cease-fire if he had known that, two years later, Congress would deprive Saigon of needed economic and military aid. This was one of the statements made to newsmen aboard Kissinger's airliner during a round trip Wednesday between Jerusalem and Riyadh, Saudi Arabia. With news reports of South Vietnam's declining fortunes creating a sense of fatalistic gloom among the Kissinger party, newsmen were given their most pessimistic appraisal of the overall world situation in some time.

CIA Connection Sought

New York — Robert F. Maheu, a former high aide to Howard R. Hughes, has said the eccentric industrialist had been looking for years for a Central Intelligence Agency connection that would expand his influence with the government before the agency signed his company to try to recover a sunken Soviet submarine.

Jumbo-Jet Changes Eyed

New York — The government told the nation's aviation industry Wednesday it has decided to put forward a program for major modification of all jumbo-jet airliners to minimize the type of hazard that led to the DC-10 crash a year ago in which 346 were killed. The changes to the 500 jumbos now flying would cost at least $250,000 a plane, for a total of over $125 million.

'Populists' Go Wooing

Washington (Washington Star) — Advocates of a "populist" movement with a leaning toward Alabama Gov. George Wallace were wooing neighborhood-school backers in Washington Wednesday for a national rally and some full-scale lobbying.

Britain Cutting Defense

London — The British government says it's going ahead with large-scale cuts in defense spending to save some $11 billion over the next 10 years.

Social Security Must Be Paid To Widowers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled Wednesday that the government must pay Social Security benefits to widowers as well as widows when they are left with children in their care.

In an 8 to 0 decision, the court said a federal law restricting the benefits to widows is unconstitutional sex discrimination.

The government has estimated that it would have cost $20 million in 1974 alone to extend the payments to widowers.

In other action, the court:

—Edged back again, as it did in a case four years ago, from the protections for criminal defendants which were laid down in its controversial Miranda decision of 1966.

—Ruled 7 to 1 that a commuter tax imposed by New Hampshire on workers from out of state is unconstitutional.

In the Social Security case, the Supreme Court agreed with a three-judge federal panel that Stephen C. Wiesenfeld of New Brunswick, N.J., should have been granted benefits after his wife died in childbirth in 1972. Mrs. Wiesenfeld was a school teacher.

"The fact that a man is working while there is a wife at home does not mean that he would, or should be required to, continue to work if his wife dies," Justice William J. Brennan Jr. said for the court.

"It is no less important for a child to be cared for by its sole surviving parent when the parent is male rather than female," Brennan added.

Justice Lewis F. Powell and Chief Justice Warren E. Burger agreed in a separate opinion, although expressing doubt that "fathers generally will forgo work and remain at home to care for children to the same extent that mothers may make this choice." The law grants survivors' benefits based on the earnings of a deceased husband and father, both to his widow and to the couple's minor children.

In cases where the wife dies, benefits based on her earnings have been provided for the minor children but not for the widower.

An advisory committee studying the Social Security System reported two weeks ago that 15,000 men would be eligible in the first year if the benefits were extended to widowers.

The surviving spouse receives full benefits as long as they are not earning more than $2,520 a year. Anyone earning more than that loses $1 in benefits for every $2 additional earned.

The court's further retreat from the Miranda ruling came in the case of William Robert Hass of Oregon, convicted of stealing two bicycles.

Police had told him, as required by the Miranda decision, that he was entitled to remain silent and have a lawyer present during questioning. After Haas asked for a lawyer, police continued questioning him and told him he could see a lawyer later.

With Love And Daisies

Miami (UPI) — Swami Vishnu Devenanda, operator of a yoga retreat on Paradise Island at Nassua, Bahamas, said he would fly to Cuba in his personal "peace plane" Wednesday to "bomb Havana with Daisies."

The swami said he had not advised Cuban authorities of his plan to drop flowers and leaflets onto Havana.

Senate Votes Down Two Corporate Tax Breaks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted Wednesday night to tax away an additional $1.6 billion of the profits earned by U.S. companies abroad. But Republicans blocked an effort to add a Social Security benefits increase to a $29.2 billion tax-cut bill.

Before the Social Security fight, the Senate by voice vote adopted an amendment by Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., repealing the foreign tax credit for U.S.-based oil companies.

Then, on a 73-24 roll call, senators approved a second Hartke proposal eliminating a tax break for all U.S. firms — not just the oil companies — which operate abroad.

If the two votes are upheld in a Senate-House conference, the taxes of the giant multinational corporations would be raised by at least $1.6 billion a year — and most of the extra burden would fall on the oil companies.

In approving by voice vote the Hartke amendment repealing the foreign tax credit, the Senate agreed to take away one of the oil companies' most important tax breaks.

"This is a big rip-off — the single biggest tax loophole," said Hartke. "In effect, the U.S. taxpayers subsidize American companies for operating abroad."

But, while the amendment repeals the tax credit, it also reduces the U.S. tax rate on foreign oil income from 48 per cent to 24 per cent. The net result is a $1-billion increase in the tax liability of the giant oil companies.

The second Hartke amendment repeals the provision which allows U.S. companies to escape taxation on income earned abroad until the money is returned to the United States.

The amendment requires the firms to pay taxes on foreign profits in the year in which they were earned. It would mean an extra $600 million a year to the U.S. Treasury.

More Drivers Here On Foot

A comparison of 1974 driver's license revocation figures shows that 34 more drivers from Lancaster County had their licenses revoked on points last year than did drivers from Douglas County. Yet Douglas County has more than twice the population of Lancaster County.

The figures — which reflect revocations on point accumulation alone and do not include court-ordered suspensions for offenses like driving while intoxicated — for this last February even more dramatically illustrate Lancaster County's seemingly disproportionate share of license revocations.

Last month this county of 180,000 people accounted for one-third of the statewide license revocation total (some 52 out of 156). Nebraska's total population is estimated at 1.5 million.

Why is the revocation rate so much higher in Lancaster County?

Maybe we have a lion's share of the bad drivers, although that doesn't seem to be a particularly plausible answer. Perhaps law enforcement here is on the ball to a greater degree and judges more strict than elsewhere. Conversely, it could be that outside of Lancaster County judges are too lenient and law enforcement too lax.

Certainly the officials interviewed for The Star's story which appeared Wednesday couldn't come up with any concrete answers.

The drivers' license revocation figures for Lancaster County as compared to the rest of the state are disproportionate, however. That's a fact.

One explanation may be the Lincoln Police Department's relentless focus on traffic and liquor enforcement. And this comes at a time when other figures show major crime in the Lincoln area on a dramatic 24% increase.

It is possible that local law enforcement officials are concentrating too much on the small fry while big fish activity is on the upswing.

Keep Your Perspective

At a recent Washington meeting Mrs. Virginia Smith, Nebraska congresswoman from the Third District talked about a "depression of the national spirit" brought about by morbid concentration on short-term problems.

"If we just take the time to speak up for what is right with America, our task of correcting what is wrong will be infinitely easier," Mrs. Smith said.

Right on, Mrs. Smith. Only we hope you and those who follow your advice keep your perspective.

We hate to follow such a bright and happy thought with a gruesome reminder of the bad old days, but it is pertinent.

It was the leadership — mainly Messrs. Nixon and Agnew — of the gang of burglars, dirty tricksters and power abusers who used to incessantly harp about talking up what is right with America "What is right with America" was as much a part of their phony act as "law and order."

We all know the result of the law and order theme.

It is a fine thing, wholesome and necessary and uplifting of the spirits to recognize the blessings of liberty and the abundance and opportunity in America.

So long as we also acknowledge what is wrong with America. That is a point that many patriotic critics of this nation have had difficulty in putting across. Criticism is meant as a means to improve.

The law and order and what's right with America team taught us to be wary of the superficial patriots who wrap themselves in the flag and talk, only talk, about respect for the law and the need to have order.

We're all for talking up what is right with this country but we hope that kind of talk is never again so cynically used as a smokescreen.

We know Mrs. Smith would never use it that way and hopefully others of responsibility will likewise have good intentions.

Mr. Ford And The Domino Theory

RADFORD

NIXON

DULLES

. . . Ike rejected the advice of all three . . .

WASHINGTON — In trying to drum up support for giving more military aid to Cambodia, President Ford revived at Notre Dame University the other day the old "Domino Theory": If Cambodia falls to the communists, it may knock over Thailand, and then maybe the Philippines, and so on until the last domino, the United States, is standing alone in a wintry world.

The President at Notre Dame also fell back on another popular argument of the cold war era, namely, that opposition to his foreign economic aid program was evidence of opposition to all foreign aid programs and an alarming revival of American "isolationism."

These are the vivid simplistic analogies of the Hitler '30's, and the Stalin '40's, but in the mid-'70's, it's like saying that if Notre Dame loses one game, all other games are lost. There is something to what the President says, but the domino theory — one down, all down — is almost as obsolete as the game of dominoes itself.

You have to go back to the history of the "Domino Theory" to understand the dangers of applying it to Cambodia. It comes out of the tragic experience of Munich appeasement before the second world war. If you tolerate Hitler's Anchluss in Austria, you get Hitler's demands on Czechoslovakia, and if you put Chamberlain's umbrella over that, you get Hitler's demands on Poland, the second world war, the collapse of the old empires and of the old order, and the emergence of Soviet Russia as a dominant force in the world.

It's a valid argument if you think any country is as important to the vital interests of the United States as any other country, that Southeast Asia is as important as Europe or Japan, that the fall of Lon Nol and Cambodia are as important now as the fall of Czechoslovakia and Benes and Masaryk were in the days before the last world war. This seemed to be what President Ford was suggesting at South Bend — maybe good politics but bad history.

President Eisenhower, stealing the phrase from Joe Alsop, was the first president to talk about the "Domino Theory" in 1954. My colleague, Bill Safire, recalls in "The New Language of Politics," that Ike said in arguing for economic aid to Saigon: "You have a row of dominoes set up. You knock over the first one, and what will happen to the last is that it will go over very quickly . . ."

But Ike didn't go into Vietnam. He fiddled with the notion of dominoes, but he refused to rescue the French at Dien Bien Phu, despite the recommendations of his secretary of state, John Foster Dulles, his vice president, Richiard Nixon, and his head of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Admiral Radford. He said he thought it was a bum idea to get the United States involved in a war on the Asian continent, 10,000 miles from home, rejected the advice of Dulles, Nixon and Radford, and went out to Burning Tree and played golf. He listened to the "Domino Theory" on Cuba too, and stayed out of there as well.

It's not surprising that Jerry Ford, confronted by hard questions on the Notre Dame campus, goes back to the old political answers he used to make as opposition leader in the House of Representatives, but as president in 1975, these old political cliches sound a little odd and out of date.

The doubt in the allied world about American action now is not about Washington's courage but about its judgment. The unmajor allies in Europe, Japan and Israel are not condemning the United States for pulling out of Southeast Asia but for persisting in a war that divided and weakened America. There is obviously an element of selfishness in this, but the allies in Europe are not saying that if Washington won't fight to the end for the capital of Cambodia or South Vietnam, it won't fight for London, Paris, or Jerusalem. On the contrary, they are afraid that Washington will get trapped again in Southeast Asia, and lose sight of the major strategic problems in the United States itself, and in Europe and Japan.

"While we pursue a world in which there is unity and diversity," President Ford said at Notre Dame, "we must continue to support security against aggression and subversion. To do otherwise would invite greater violence. We are counseled to withdraw from the world and go it alone. I have heard that song before. I am here to say I am not going to dance to it."

But very few people are asking him in America today to dance to the tune of isolation, or to abandon his allies or the nation's commitments. They are merely asking him to choose between what is primary and what is secondary, not to confuse Saigon or Lon Nol or Southeast Asia with the really critical strategic areas of Europe, the Middle East and Japan.

Mainly, the allies are appealing to President Ford not to divide the American people again over Southeast Asia, especially in a time of economic troubles, but to unify America, concentrate on its economic stability, and choose between America's primary and secondary interests.

This is precisely what he did not do at Notre Dame. He argued for Cambodia and Saigon, for foreign aid for everybody, and suggested that all might be lost if his recommendations were not adopted. And the funny thing about this is that he doesn't really believe, or at least doesn't say in his private conversations, that the dominoes will fall or the "new isolationist" will take over if the Congress doesn't go along.

The trouble is that he is stuck with the old rhetoric. He wants to understand the universities and have them understand him, but when they ask him questions, he goes back to the old answers of the cold war — "dominoes" and isolation.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE

TV May Be Facing Comic Opera

NEW YORK — "Can a lonely congressman from a small state find happiness on the floor of the U.S. Senate? Will he show up for the big debate on the oil embargo bill? Tune in tomorrow, folks, and find out."

The latest blurb for a new soap opera? Not on your Nielsen, friends. It's worse than that. Congress is thinking about crashing into show-biz.

Yep. Right there on your home screens. In living color. Just flick the switch and catch the boys in action as they go about their daily task of spending, spending, spending.

Now Mama won't be the only one sobbing in front of the set during the daily disaster hour; night sessions will give Pop a good cry now and then, too.

This is not a wild dream on the story boards of a producer desperate for something to replace those idiotic daytime game shows. The Senate is actually considering a resolution that would bring the TV cameras into their hallowed chamber on a one-year experiement.

If the idea catches on (and it has possibilities that could wipe "As the Stomach Churns" off the charts) you can bet the House will be right in there, scrambling for its equal share of prime-time exposure.

Senate-watchers seem to think there's a good chance the experiment will be okayed this year. The top biggies are all for it, right up to party leaders Mike Mansfield and Hugh Scott. Not to mention that long-time guardian of Senate tradition, Democratic whip Robert Byrd.

You have to give them Brownie points for a certain amount of bravery here. Congressmen have always been reluctant to let the public watch them at work. And for good reason. Being on camera will mean a lot of our lofty leaders will have to mend their ways.

Just for openers, they'll have to show up. That's a big change, right there. Traditionally, floor debates drone on before a vast area of empty desks. And twice this month leaders have had to call it a day because they couldn't dredge up enough bodies for a quorum call.

But, with the cameras turning, how will that play in Peoria?

What's more, the bodies will have to be sober. Which, if you can believe insiders, isn't always the case now. But no congressman who's grown fond of the good life is going to risk a hiccup that will be heard by all the folks out there in TV-land.

They're out there, all right. A handful of obscure senators found that out last summer when, after the Watergate hearings, they weren't so obscure any more. For one or two, sudden fame was a mixed blessing: The home folks got to know them so well they tossed them out of office.

Even the House, where only a handful hang around long enough to become famous, discovered that putting its judiciary committee on live TV for the impeachment hearings made household words out of nobodies.

The possibilities of all this are mind-boggling. For congressmen, always jealous of the attention concentrated on the White House, it could mean bigger headlines and a new importance. (They might even commission a composer to whip up a catchy theme to rival "Hail to the Chief.")

For the public, it would be a chance to get a closeup, warts and all, of the way they really operate up there on Capitol Hill. There's something about the camera eye that has a spooky way, sooner or later, of pricking through the inevitable grandstanding and demagoguery to the real man underneath. We may be in for a few surprises.

As for the networks, the financial potention is endless. If nothing else, they're bound to make a fortune on headache and upset-stomach commercials.

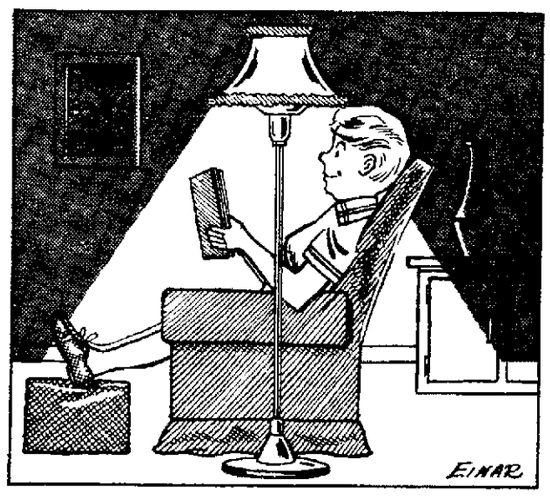
LA VERNA HASSLER

Patchwork Prairie Country

What can one say about the ninth of March snowstorm such as fell all day that Sunday, except that it was filled with much needed moisture, heavy and wet and came with spring so near at hand.

However, as I looked out through the big windows I thought of the lines Lowell wrote about a snowfall . . . "I stood and watched by the window the noiseless work of the sky." Flake by flake they fell as if their mission in life must swiftly be completed. Sometimes several flakes banded together because the air was so thickly laden with feathery flakes they bumped into each other.



The sky was leaden as if it were placing a temporary blanket about the shoulders of the world until a softer white blanket of ermine could be wrapped in place.

The pines were soon cloaked in ermine, too, and in the words of Lowell again, "And the poorest twig on the elm tree was ridged inch-deep with pearl."

While the world became silent outside my door, I reveled in the close confines of my snug house with books invitingly beckoning from the table at the side of my big chair. I needed a light for the gloom outside did not penetrate the room. There was a warm glow shedding a circle of heat from the table lamp, leaving the remainder of the room in pleasant dimness.

While the snow grew deeper around the doorway, I jotted a line from here and there into my notebook from the book that I was reading. It was not a new book from the best-seller list but a very old one written by David Grayson titled, "Adventures in Contentment."

Some day in the future as I stand at the ironing board, I may find a line that mellows my day and gives me some measure of contentment. An old book remembered with pleasure is like the old home revisited with gladness.

The farmers in our area were especially happy that the snow was so wet, giving the soil added moisture for spring planting. The wind did not blow it from the wheat fields This likewise added to the farmers' pleasure for there were not the drifts heaped high about barns and farmyards.

The first day of spring is near and if no other signs are visible, I can read the message from the sun. Though the land may remain barren and chill, there is a sense of pulse and stirring felt but not seen . . . a sort of magic through the warmth of the sun. The sky is a bluer shade of azure, crystal clear as a window newly washed and always dominated by the sun. I feel its warmth penetrate deep, lending a balmy atmosphere to the out-of-doors. If there is a cold spell, I know it can't last for the violets are impatient now and the barren trees are eager to become feathered spires of delicate blossoms and leaf buds.

Spring is like that: slow and sweet-smelling from meadow grassland where a fringe of grass is green and growing at the crusted edge of snow. Most of the ice is gone from the pond and the clear dark water reflects the soft spring sky dominated by a brilliant glare of light . . . the sun.

The lifeblood of our peaceful countryside so long congealed by the frost is beginning to stir. The water is no longer silent but a haven for the wild geese that have started their migratory flight.

The larks perched on the fallen trunk of a tree at the corner of the farmyard send a cascade of notes ringing in the air. When they pause, it is to preen their feathers and let the warm sunlight sift over their mottled bodies.

The sun dominates the twilight also for when it slips away beyond the horizon, it leaves our orchard in the cold blue light of a fading day. It is then the ghostly ground fogs begin chasing each other. But comes the morning and the sun and the fog disappear.

Comes the morning and the sun and I blink. "Is spring here yet?" I ask.

The Cold Facts

Lincoln, Neb.

O.K., let's get all the records straight on blizzards!

In the March 11 Lincoln Star there was a cartoon on Page 25 stating that "today is the anniversary of the Great Blizzard of 1888!" A local radio announced it as being the Midwest blizzard, not the New York event. On January 12, 1888, the famous Midwest blizzard hit in all its fury. This became the title of the book, "In All Its Fury," by W. H. O'Gara which pertained to this specific blizzard. (It contains personal accounts and actual facts.)

On March 11 that same year, 1888, an entirely different blizzard hit New York. Since the cartoonist is syndicated with the New York papers, apparently the cartoon is referring to that blizzard and not the one that hit us in January, 1888.

A novel written by Albert E. Idell titled, "The Great Blizzard," was printed by Henry Holt and Co., Inc. in 1948.

Other famous blizzards were the Easter Blizzard of 1873, the 1948-49 Blizzard, and our more recent Jan., 1975, one. Our January 12, 1888, Blizzard Club took a bit of ribbing from the news media when I called in to cancel the annual meeting which was to be held on January 11, due to the blizzard that was building up on the 10th of January. We were told that if we would quit having the annual meetings, maybe we wouldn't have the blizzards! Let me say, we will continue to have our meetings as long as the decendants of those hardy pioneers want to have meetings to commemorate that historical event.

The book, "In All Its Fury", was reprinted, and I am still collecting stories from people who were in that blizzard or from their descendants.

Pride In Rural School

Broken Bow, Neb.

Mr. Holman's article on the front page of The Star of March 13 rouses me to comment. Ms. Fowler must have done considerable researching to find such an antiquated school as she reports. Why did not she or the "unidentified" teacher examine our rural school? She would have found a two-room building — two teachers — separate cloakrooms and toilets for the boys and girls — finished and tiled basement complete with kitchen facilities — hot and cold water — electric range and refrigerator.

This, of course, would not have given her ammunition to make her point, that point being that we should have laws requiring our pupils to travel the 15 or 17 miles (by bus, I suppose) to the nearest K12 school.

How easy it is for the "big boys" in D.C. to tell the farmer how to farm and the "educators" to tell the rural pupils how to learn! Even so, she says nothing about the quality of education taught in rural schools. It well may be that if some of the rules of grammar and English were taught as they used to be, one could hear speakers (even those with "degrees") who could say what their speech was all about without any "er's" and "well, er, you know's", who could diagram a sentence, and knew that a paragraph had to have a subject and predicate with proper adjectives and adverbs. We learned those rules in the eighth grade and we memorized the times tables, too. Memorizing makes things easier when you're in your 70s!

So let the educators work on getting quality education in the schools instead of trying to get embarrassing legislation passed. I am a college graduate as is my daughter. I have four grandchildren with college degrees (two with journalism majors), another still in N.U. I taught school so I have some idea of what I'm talking about.

Mass Transportation is Answer

Lincoln, Neb.

I read with much interest The Star's article published March 13, 1975, headed: "Traffic-clogged streets seen in Lincoln's future."

When are the citizens of Lincoln, the City Council, and the transportation planners going to accept the warnings of knowledgeable scientists that our natural resources are being depleted at an alarming rate, and most important, our very existence threatened by pollution caused mainly by the over-use of the automobile?

The automobile for moving people about is rapidly becoming a very expensive, ineffectual mode of transportation. Why are we again and again threatened by the transportation planners with the destruction of neighborhoods to construct additional streets for moving the population from place to place?

Why, instead are we not hearing their plans for improved, innovative mass transportation — serving not in the future but beginning right now?

Lincoln is not a huge metropolis, but certainly will grow in the years to come. Mass transportation is and always will be the best method for meeting citizens' needs to travel from one place to the other.

City planners should get on the right track now. Lincoln will be able to provide for its transportation needs in a realistic, ecologically-positive, financially sound manner.

Teachers Have Their Nerve

Lincoln, Neb.

I don't believe the "Full-Time Professor" should feel bad in turning out the "Ex-Full-Time Student" who told it like it is. He on the contrary should be proud this person can think for himself, but of course this is what so many of the full-timers and tenure people want, isn't it? We all tell it like it is and this is also against what President Varner and other Lincoln teachers and their associations want.

It is hard for one to understand in these times, when people are having less work, higher costs of food and everything else, and just about every agency in the government is advocating and begging for everyone to economize and hold down spending of all kinds, that professors and teachers have the nerve to cry for more money. Where do they think we are going to get it? The fact of the matter is that none of them is underpaid but more like overpaid. Now, if people in the teaching profession sincerely feel they are worth more money, certainly other institutions must think so and will offer them higher salaries.

I sincerely hope the Legislature stops and thinks and begins to run this annual salary squeeze as they would their own businesses.

More Drivers Here On Foot

A comparison of 1974 driver's license revocation figures shows that 34 more drivers from Lancaster County had their licenses revoked on points last year than did drivers from Douglas County. Yet Douglas County has more than twice the population of Lancaster County.

The figures — which reflect revocations on point accumulation alone and do not include court-ordered suspensions for offenses like driving while intoxicated — for this last February even more dramatically illustrate Lancaster County's seemingly disproportionate share of license revocations.

Last month this county of 180,000 people accounted for one-third of the statewide license revocation total (some 52 out of 156). Nebraska's total population is estimated at 1.5 million.

Why is the revocation rate so much higher in Lancaster County?

Maybe we have a lion's share of the bad drivers, although that doesn't seem to be a particularly plausible answer. Perhaps law enforcement here is on the ball to a greater degree and judges more strict than elsewhere. Conversely, it could be that outside of Lancaster County judges are too lenient and law enforcement too lax.

Certainly the officials interviewed for The Star's story which appeared Wednesday couldn't come up with any concrete answers.

The drivers' license revocation figures for Lancaster County as compared to the rest of the state are disproportionate, however. That's a fact.

One explanation may be the Lincoln Police Department's relentless focus on traffic and liquor enforcement. And this comes at a time when other figures show major crime in the Lincoln area on a dramatic 24% increase.

It is possible that local law enforcement officials are concentrating too much on the small fry while big fish activity is on the upswing.

Keep Your Perspective

At a recent Washington meeting Mrs. Virginia Smith, Nebraska congresswoman from the Third District talked about a "depression of the national spirit" brought about by morbid concentration on short-term problems.

"If we just take the time to speak up for what is right with America, our task of correcting what is wrong will be infinitely easier," Mrs. Smith said.

Right on, Mrs. Smith. Only we hope you and those who follow your advice keep your perspective.

We hate to follow such a bright and happy thought with a gruesome reminder of the bad old days, but it is pertinent.

It was the leadership — mainly Messrs. Nixon and Agnew — of the gang of burglars, dirty tricksters and power abusers who used to incessantly harp about talking up what is right with America. "What is right with America" was as much a part of their phony act as "law and order."

We all know the result of the law and order theme.

It is a fine thing, wholesome and necessary and uplifting of the spirits to recognize the blessings of liberty and the abundance and opportunity in America.

So long as we also acknowledge what is wrong with America. That is a point that many patriotic critics of this nation have had difficulty in putting across. Criticism is meant as a means to improve.

The law and order and what's right with America team taught us to be wary of the superficial patriots who wrap themselves in the flag and talk, only talk, about respect for the law and the need to have order.

We're all for talking up what is right with this country but we hope that kind of talk is never again so cynically used as a smokescreen.

We know Mrs. Smith would never use it that way and hopefully others of responsibility will likewise have good intentions.

Mr. Ford And The Domino Theory

WASHINGTON — In trying to drum up support for giving more military aid to Cambodia, President Ford revived at Notre Dame University the other day the old "Domino Theory": If Cambodia falls to the communists, it may knock over Thailand, and then maybe the Philippines, and so on until the last domino, the United States, is standing alone in a wintry world.

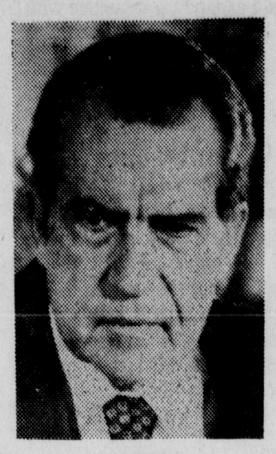
The President at Notre Dame also fell back on another popular argument of the cold war era, namely, that opposition to his foreign economic aid program was evidence of opposition to all foreign aid programs and an alarming revival of American "isolationism."

These are the vivid simplistic analogies of the Hitler '30's, and the Stalin '40's, but in the mid-'70's, it's like saying that if Notre Dame loses one game, all other games are lost. There is something to what the President says, but the domino theory — one down, all down — is almost as obsolete as the game of dominoes itself.

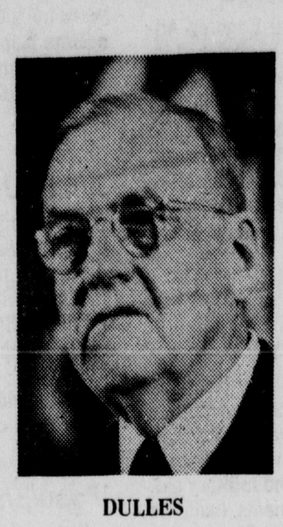
☆ ☆ ☆

You have to go back to the history of the "Domino Theory' to understand the dangers of applying it to Cambodia. It comes out of the tragic experience of Munich appeasement before the second world war. If you tolerate Hitler's Anchluss in Austria, you get Hitler's demands on Czechoslovakia, and if you put Chamberlain's umbrella over that, you get Hitler's demands on Poland, the second world war, the collapse of the old empires and of the old order, and the emergence of Soviet Russia as a dominant force in the world.

RADFORD



NIXON



DULLES

. . . Ike rejected the advice of all three . . .

It's a valid argument if you think any country is as important to the vital interests of the United States as any other country, that Southeast Asia is as important as Europe or Japan, that the fall of Lon Nol and Cambodia are as important now as the fall of Czechoslovakia and Benes and Masaryk were in the days before the last world war. This seemed to be what President Ford was suggesting at South Bend — maybe good politics but bad history.

President Eisenhower, stealing the phrase from Joe Alsop, was the first president to talk about the "Domino Theory" in 1954. My colleague, Bill Safire, recalls in "The New Language of Politics," that Ike said in arguing for economic aid to Saigon: "You have a row of dominoes set up. You knock over the first one, and what will happen to the last is that it will go over very quickly . . ."

But Ike didn't go into Vietnam. He fiddled with the notion of dominoes, but he refused to rescue the French at Dien Bien Phu, despite the recommendations of his secretary of state, John Foster Dulles, his vice president, Richiard Nixon, and his head of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Admiral Radford. He said he thought it was a bum idea to get the United States involved in a war on the Asian continent, 10,000 miles from home, rejected the advice of Dulles, Nixon and Radford, and went out to Burning Tree and played golf. He listened to the "Domino Theory" on Cuba too, and stayed out of there as well.

It's not surprising that Jerry Ford, confronted by hard questions on the Notre Dame campus, goes back to the old political answers he used to make as opposition leader in the House of Representatives, but as president in 1975, these old political cliches sound a little odd and out of date.

The doubt in the allied world about American action now is not about Washington's courage but about its judgment. The unmajor allies in Europe, Japan and Israel are not condemning the United States for pulling out of Southeast Asia but for persisting in a war that divided and weakened America. There is obviously an element of selfishness in this, but the allies in Europe are not saying that if Washington won't fight to the end for the capital of Cambodia or South Vietnam, it won't fight for London, Paris, or Jerusalem. On the contrary, they are afraid that Washington will get trapped again in Southeast Asia, and lose sight of the major strategic problems in the United States itself, and in Europe and Japan.

"While we pursue a world in which there is unity and diversity," President Ford said at Notre Dame, "we must continue to support security against aggression and subversion. To do otherwise would invite greater violence. We are counseled to withdraw from the world and go it alone. I have heard that song before. I am here to say I am not going to dance to it."

But very few people are asking him in America today to dance to the tune of isolation, or to abandon his allies or the nation's commitments. They are merely asking him to choose between what is primary and what is secondary, not to confuse Saigon or Lon Nol or Southeast Asia with the really critical strategic areas of Europe, the Middle East and Japan.

Mainly, the allies are appealing to President Ford not to divide the American people again over Southeast Asia, especially in a time of economic troubles, but to unify America, concentrate on its economic stability, and choose between America's primary and secondary interests.

This is precisely what he did not do at Notre Dame. He argued for Cambodia and Saigon, for foreign aid for everybody, and suggested that all might be lost if his recommendations were not adopted. And the funny thing about this is that he doesn't really believe, or at least doesn't say in his private conversations, that the dominoes will fall or the "new isolationist" will take over if the Congress doesn't go along.

The trouble is that he is stuck with the old rhetoric. He wants to understand the universities and have them understand him, but when they ask him questions, he goes back to the old answers of the cold war — "dominoes" and isolation.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE

TV May Be Facing Comic Opera

NEW YORK — "Can a lonely congressman from a small state find happiness on the floor of the U.S. Senate? Will he show up for the big debate on the oil embargo bill? Tune in tomorrow, folks, and find out."

The latest blurb for a new soap opera? Not on your Nielsen, friends. It's worse than that. Congress is thinking about crashing into show-biz.

Yep. Right there on your home screens. In living color. Just flick the switch and catch the boys in action as they go about their daily task of spending, spending, spending.

Now Mama won't be the only one sobbing in front of the set during the daily disaster hour; night sessions will give Pop a good cry now and then, too.

This is not a wild dream on the story boards of a producer desperate for something to replace those idiotic daytime game shows. The Senate is actually considering a resolution that would bring the TV cameras into their hallowed chamber on a one-year experiement.

If the idea catches on (and it has possibilities that could wipe "As the Stomach Churns" off the charts) you can bet the House will be right in there, scrambling for its equal share of prime-time exposure.

Senate-watchers seem to think there's a good chance the experiment will be okayed this year. The top biggies are all for it, right up to party leaders Mike Mansfield and Hugh Scott. Not to mention that long-time guardian of Senate tradition, Democratic whip Robert Byrd.

You have to give them Brownie points for a certain amount of bravery here. Congressmen have always been reluctant to let the public watch them at work. And for good reason. Being on camera will mean a lot of our lofty leaders will have to mend their ways.

Just for openers, they'll have to show up. That's a big change, right there. Traditionally, floor debates drone on before a vast area of empty desks. And twice this month leaders have had to call it a day because they couldn't dredge up enough bodies for a quorum call.

But, with the cameras turning, how will that play in Peoria?

What's more, the bodies will have to be sober. Which, if you can believe insiders, isn't always the case now. But no congressman who's grown fond of the good life is going to risk a hiccup that will be heard by all the folks out there in TV-land.

They're out there, all right. A handful of obscure senators found that out last summer when, after the Watergate hearings, they weren't so obscure any more. For one or two, sudden fame was a mixed blessing: The home folks got to know them so well they tossed them out of office.

Even the House, where only a handful hang around long enough to become famous, discovered that putting its judiciary committee on live TV for the impeachment hearings made household words out of nobodies.

The possibilities of all this are mind-boggling. For congressmen, always jealous of the attention concentrated on the White House, it could mean bigger headlines and a new importance. (They might even commission a composer to whip up a catchy theme to rival "Hail to the Chief.")

For the public, it would be a chance to get a closeup, warts and all, of the way they really operate up there on Capitol Hill. There's something about the camera eye that has a spooky way, sooner or later, of pricking through the inevitable grandstanding and demagoguery to the real man underneath. We may be in for a few surprises.

As for the networks, the financial potention is endless. If nothing else, they're bound to make a fortune on headache and upset-stomach commercials.

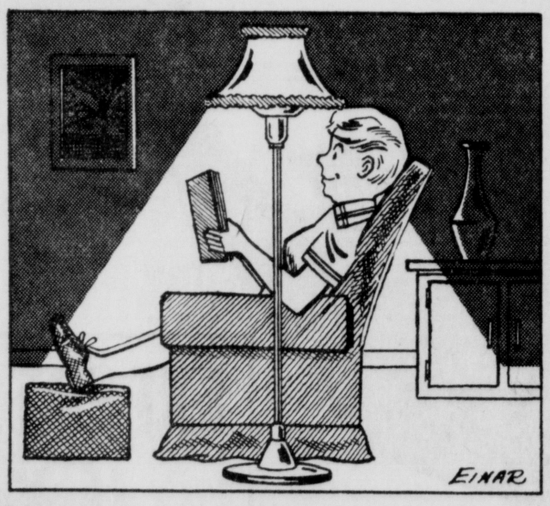
LA VERNA HASSLER

Patchwork Prairie Country

What can one say about the ninth of March snowstorm such as fell all day that Sunday, except that it was filled with much needed moisture, heavy and wet and came with spring so near at hand.

However, as I looked out through the big windows, I thought of the lines Lowell wrote about a snowfall . . . "I stood and watched by the window the noiseless work of the sky." Flake by flake they fell as if their mission in life must swiftly be completed. Sometimes several flakes banded together because the air was so thickly laden with feathery flakes they bumped into each other.



The sky was leaden as if it were placing a temporary blanket about the shoulders of the world until a softer white blanket of ermine could be wrapped in place.

The pines were soon cloaked in ermine, too, and in the words of Lowell again, "And the poorest twig on the elm tree was ridged inch-deep with pearl."

While the world became silent outside my door, I reveled in the close confines of my snug house with books invitingly beckoning from the table at the side of my big chair. I needed a light for the gloom outside did not penetrate the room. There was a warm glow shedding a circle of heat from the table lamp, leaving the remainder of the room in pleasant dimness.

While the snow grew deeper around the doorway, I jotted a line from here and there into my notebook from the book that I was reading. It was not a new book from the best-seller list but a very old one written by David Grayson titled, "Adventures in Contentment."

Some day in the future as I stand at the ironing board, I may find a line that mellows my day and gives me some measure of contentment. An old book remembered with pleasure is like the old home revisited with gladness.

The farmers in our area were especially happy that the snow was so wet, giving the soil added moisture for spring planting. The wind did not blow it from the wheat fields. This likewise added to the farmers' pleasure for there were not the drifts heaped high about barns and farmyards.

The first day of spring is near and if no other signs are visible, I can read the message from the sun. Though the land may remain barren and chill, there is a sense of pulse and stirring felt but not seen . . . a sort of magic through the warmth of the sun. The sky is a bluer shade of azure, crystal clear as a window newly washed and always dominated by the sun. I feel its warmth penetrate deep, lending a balmy atmosphere to the out-of-doors. If there is a cold spell, I know it can't last for the violets are impatient now and the barren trees are eager to become feathered spires of delicate blossoms and leaf buds.

Spring is like that: slow and sweet-smelling from meadow grassland where a fringe of grass is green and growing at the crusted edge of snow. Most of the ice is gone from the pond and the clear dark water reflects the soft spring sky dominated by a brilliant glare of light . . . the sun.

The lifeblood of our peaceful countryside so long congealed by the frost is beginning to stir. The water is no longer silent but a haven for the wild geese that have started their migratory flight.

The larks perched on the fallen trunk of a tree at the corner of the farmyard send a cascade of notes ringing in the air. When they pause, it is to preen their feathers and let the warm sunlight sift over their mottled bodies.

The sun dominates the twilight also for when it slips away beyond the horizon, it leaves our orchard in the cold blue light of a fading day. It is then the ghostly ground fogs begin chasing each other. But comes the morning and the sun and the fog disappear.

Comes the morning and the sun and I blink. "Is spring here yet?" I ask.

The Cold Facts

Lincoln, Neb.

O.K., let's get all the records straight on blizzards!

In the March 11 Lincoln Star there was a cartoon on Page 25 stating that "today is the anniversary of the Great Blizzard of 1888!" A local radio announced it as being the Midwest blizzard, not the New York event. On January 12, 1888, the famous Midwest blizzard hit in all its fury. This became the title of the book, "In All Its Fury," by W. H. O'Gara which pertained to this specific blizzard. (It contains personal accounts and actual facts.)

On March 11 that same year, 1888, an entirely different blizzard hit New York. Since the cartoonist is syndicated with the New York papers, apparently the cartoon is referring to that blizzard and not the one that hit us in January, 1888.

A novel written by Albert E. Idell titled, "The Great Blizzard," was printed by Henry Holt and Co., Inc. in 1948.

Other famous blizzards were the Easter Blizzard of 1873, the 1948-49 Blizzard, and our more recent Jan., 1975, one. Our January 12, 1888, Blizzard Club took a bit of ribbing from the news media when I called in to cancel the annual meeting which was to be held on January 11, due to the blizzard that was building up on the 10th of January. We were told that if we would quit having the annual meetings, maybe we wouldn't have the blizzards! Let me say, we will continue to have our meetings as long as the decendants of those hardy pioneers want to have meetings to commemorate that historical event.

The book, "In All Its Fury", was reprinted, and I am still collecting stories from people who were in that blizzard or from their descendants.

Broken Bow, Neb.

Mr. Holman's article on the front page of The Star of March 13 rouses me to comment. Ms. Fowler must have done considerable researching to find such an antiquated school as she reports. Why did not she or the "unidentified" teacher examine our rural school? She would have found a two-room building — two teachers — separate cloakrooms and toilets for the boys and girls — finished and tiled basement complete with kitchen facilities — hot and cold water — electric range and refrigerator.

This, of course, would not have given her ammunition to make her point, that point being that we should have laws requiring our pupils to travel the 15 or 17 miles (by bus, I suppose) to the nearest K12 school.

How easy it is for the "big boys" in D.C. to tell the farmer how to farm and the "educators" to tell the rural pupils how to learn! Even so, she says nothing about the quality of education taught in rural schools. It well may be that if some of the rules of grammar and English were taught as they used to be, one could hear speakers (even those with "degrees") who could say what their speech was all about without any "er's" and "well, er, you know's", who could diagram a sentence, and knew that a paragraph had to have a subject and predicate with proper adjectives and adverbs. We learned those rules in the eighth grade and we memorized the times tables, too. Memorizing makes things easier when you're in your 70s!

So let the educators work on getting quality education in the schools instead of trying to get embarrassing legislation passed. I am a college graduate as is my daughter. I have four grandchildren with college degrees (two with journalism majors), another still in N.U. I taught school so I have some idea of what I'm talking about.

Mass Transportation is Answer

Lincoln, Neb.

I read with much interest The Star's article published March 13, 1975, headed: "Traffic-clogged streets seen in Lincoln's future."

When are the citizens of Lincoln, the City Council, and the transportation planners going to accept the warnings of knowledgeable scientists that our natural resources are being depleted at an alarming rate, and most important, our very existence threatened by pollution caused mainly by the over-use of the automobile?

The automobile for moving people about is rapidly becoming a very expensive, ineffectual mode of transportation. Why are we again and again threatened by the transportation planners with the destruction of neighborhoods to construct additional streets for moving the population from place to place?

Why, instead are we not hearing their plans for improved, innovative mass transportation — serving not in the future but beginning right now?

Lincoln is not a huge metropolis, but certainly will grow in the years to come. Mass transportation is and always will be the best method for meeting citizens' needs to travel from one place to the other.

City planners should get on the right track now. Lincoln will be able to provide for its transportation needs in a realistic, ecologically-positive, financially sound manner.

Teachers Have Their Nerve

Lincoln, Neb.

I don't believe the "Full-Time Professor" should feel bad in turning out the "Ex-Full-Time Student" who told it like it is. He on the contrary should be proud this person can think for himself, but of course this is what so many of the full-timers and tenure people want, isn't it? We all tell it like it is and this is also against what President Varner and other Lincoln teachers and their associations want.

It is hard for one to understand in these times, when people are having less work, higher costs of food and everything else, and just about every agency in the government is advocating and begging for everyone to economize and hold down spending of all kinds, that professors and teachers have the nerve to cry for more money. Where do they think we are going to get it? The fact of the matter is that none of them is underpaid but more like overpaid. Now, if people in the teaching profession sincerely feel they are worth more money, certainly other institutions must think so and will offer them higher salaries.

I sincerely hope the Legislature stops and thinks and begins to run this annual salary squeeze as they would their own businesses.

Ed Board Hopefuls Total 6

The six candidates for the Lincoln Board of Education are assured of smooth sailing until the May 6 city general election.

Because two candidates may be nominated in the April 8 primary election for each of the three board terms expiring this year, that means all six hopefuls will be elected in primary balloting.

Filing deadline for the race was Wednesday.

Only one incumbent board member is seeking to stay in office. Williamette Shafer, 2906 Plymouth, has already begun her campaign in her first voter race. Mrs. Shafer, 40, was appointed to the board in 1973 to fill an unexpired term. A housewife, she is a former teacher.

Incumbents John Lux and Marvin C. Stewart decided to step down from board service, opening their unsalaried seats to competition among five more candidates seeking a four-year term (in order of filing):

Jo Ann Maxey, 35, 2800 S, is a housewife. She and her husband Police Lt. Al Maxey have four children. Mrs. Maxey has been active in numerous school, civic and church organizations.

Jeffrey M. Poley, 34, 4845 Ginny Ave., is a community planner with the State Office of Planning and Programming. A 14-year Lincoln resident, Poley is a University of Nebraska-Lincoln graduate. He and his wife Janet, a UNL faculty member, have one daughter.

Mrs. Lu Pansing, 55, 2033 S. 33rd, is a lifetime Lincoln resident. Mother of five children, she has been active in civic affairs, and involved in work with dyslectic children who suffer from perceptual disorders.

Milan Wall, 29, 1260 S. 22nd, is a former Lincoln Star education reporter, now public affairs director for the University of Mid-America, a post he also held with the State University of Nebraska project. Active in civic and church affairs, Wall is a graduate of UNL (where he also has taught journalism, is a seven-year Lincoln resident, and he and his wife Sue Ellen have two sons.

Oscar A. Sandberg, 37, 2453 Sewell, has worked in investments for First Mid America Inc. since 1969. An Ashland native, Sandberg is an NU graduate, married and has three children

Council Candidate Douthit Wants Scrutiny Of Police

Bruce Douthit

Lincoln Attorney

Attorney Bruce Douthit, 28, has entered the City Council race and is calling for a review of police procedures and the budget of the city attorney's office.

Douthit, a former assistant city attorney, said the council should keep a closer watch over the policies of the police department. When he served in the city prosecutor's division, Douthit said, "It became apparent to me that the exposure of the legitimate instances of mistreatment of driving while intoxicated offenders was only touching the surface."

He also criticized council members for not scrutinizing city departments, such as the city attorney's office, more closely. He said the office's $340,000 budget is too high because the attorneys are "grossly underworked."

Douthit also was critical of the council for retaining two former city attorneys to do legal work.

He was referring to Norman Krivosha, who has been hired by the Lincoln Electric System Administrative Board and the Lincoln General Hospital Board, and to Dick Wood, who will take charge of all lawsuits filed against the city on the Centrum project. The Centrum is a proposed downtown parking garage and merchandising complex.

Western Grain Sold

Tokyo (AP) — Marubeni Corp., a major Japanese trading firm, said it has purchased a 51% interest in Western Grain Exchange Inc.

Goodyear Employe Laws Enters City Council Race

Goodyear employe Hale E. Laws became the 15th person to enter the City Council race Wednesday.

Laws, 47, 4004 N. 66th, said he is concerned with implementing community development programs in Lincoln neighborhoods. Particularly, Laws said he is concerned with getting streets paved and repaired in Havelock.

He said the biggest problem the city is facing is unemployment. As a councilman, he would help oversee where federal money would be spent to ease the unemployment situation.

Laws said he believes "everybody should be treated equally."

Sandberg Seeks Seat On Ed Board

Oscar A. Sandberg, 2453 Sewell, announced Wednesday he is a candidate in the spring city elections for a seat on the Lincoln Board of Education.

Oscar Sandberg

In Investment Business

Sandberg, 37, said his campaign will "emphasize the efforts to maintain the high quality of the Lincoln (public) school system and the people who operate and work for it.

"My primary hope," he said, "is to continue the efforts to open up the lines of communication between citizens and the Board of Education, and between teachers and the board."

Sandberg, in the investment business with First Mid America Inc. since 1969, praised efforts to encourage public knowledge about Lincoln's schools and participation in their programs.

An Ashland native, Sandberg is a University of Nebraska graduate. He is married and has three children.

Music news is covered thoroughly in the "Sunday Journal and Star."

Past Goals, Policies Head Jeambey Council Candidate

The past president of the Goals and Policies Committee entered the City Council race Wednesday.

Robert W. Jeambey, a Presbyterian minister, said he supports efforts to consolidate city and county government.

Jeambey says more low income housing should be provided and supports downtown and neighborhood redevelopment and better police-community relations.

Robert Jeambey

Presbyterian Minister

Jeambey, 44, is executive secretary of the Interchurch Ministries of Nebraska, an agency supported by nine denominational bodies, and is the program director of the Lincoln Fellowship of Churches. He also is serving as an interim pastor at the First Presbyterian Church in York.

Jeambey chaired the citizens Goals and Policies Committee during the compilation of the document which will become a part of the Comprehensive Plan.

A member of a citizens committee studying city-county merger, Jeambey said county government may have to be strengthened first before consolidation with the city can take place. Rural interests and services must be preserved, he said.

He also said that the city has "an excellent police force." But Jeambey maintained that no agency should be beyond the reach of accountability or able to ignore the just complaints of the people."

Jeambey, 400 Skyway Rd., is married and has two children.

In Investment Business

Sandberg, 37, said his campaign will "emphasize the efforts to maintain the high quality of the Lincoln (public) school system and the people who operate and work for it.

"My primary hope," he said, "is to continue the efforts to open up the lines of communication between citizens and the Board of Education, and between teachers and the board."

Sandberg, in the investment business with First Mid America Inc. since 1969, praised efforts to encourage public knowledge about Lincoln's schools and participation in their programs.

An Ashland native, Sandberg is a University of Nebraska graduate. He is married and has three children.

Past Goals, Policies Head Jeambey Council Candidate

The past president of the Goals and Policies Committee entered the City Council race Wednesday.

Robert W. Jeambey, a Presbyterian minister, said he supports efforts to consolidate city and county government.

Jeambey says more low income housing should be provided and supports downtown and neighborhood redevelopment and better police-community relations.

Robert Jeambey

Presbyterian Minister

Jeambey, 44, is executive secretary of the Interchurch Ministries of Nebraska, an agency supported by nine denominational bodies, and is the program director of the Lincoln Fellowship of Churches. He also is serving as an interim pastor at the First Presbyterian Church in York.

Jeambey chaired the citizens Goals and Policies Committee during the compilation of the document which will become a part of the Comprehensive Plan.

A member of a citizens committee studying city-county merger, Jeambey said county government may have to be strengthened first before consolidation with the city can take place. Rural interests and services must be preserved, he said.

He also said that the city has "an excellent police force." But Jeambey maintained that no agency should be beyond "the reach of accountability or able to ignore the just complaints of the people."

Jeambey, 400 Skyway Rd., is married and has two children.

Council Candidate Douthit Wants Scrutiny Of Police

Attorney Bruce Douthit, 28, has entered the City Council race and is calling for a review of police procedures and the budget of the city attorney's office.

Douthit, a former assistant city attorney, said the council should keep a closer watch over the policies of the police department. When he served in the city prosecutor's division, Douthit said, "It became apparent to me that the exposure of the legitimate instances of mistreatment of driving while intoxicated offenders was only touching the surface."

Bruce Douthit

Lincoln Attorney

He was referring to Norman Krivosha, who has been hired by the Lincoln Electric System Administrative Board and the Lincoln General Hospital Board, and to Dick Wood, who will take charge of all lawsuits filed against the city on the Centrum project. The Centrum is a proposed downtown parking garage and merchandising complex.

He also criticized council members for not scrutinizing city departments, such as the city attorney's office, more closely. He said the office's $340,000 budget is too high because the attorneys are "grossly underworked."

Douthit also was critical of the council for retaining two former city attorneys to do legal work.

Western Grain Sold

Tokyo (AP) — Marubeni Corp., a major Japanese trading firm, said it has purchased a 51% interest in Western Grain Exchange Inc.

Goodyear Employe Laws Enters City Council Race

Goodyear employe Hale E. Laws became the 15th person to enter the City Council race Wednesday.

Laws, 47, 4004 N. 66th, said he is concerned with implementing community development programs in Lincoln neighborhoods. Particularly, Laws said he is concerned with getting streets paved and repaired in Havelock.

He said the biggest problem the city is facing is unemployment. As a councilman, he would help oversee where federal money would be spent to ease the unemployment situation.

Laws said he believes "everybody should be treated equally."

Valmont Will Lay Off 220, Furlough 200

Valley (UPI) — Valmont Industries, Inc., Wednesday announced a three-phase work reduction program in its agricultural products division involving 620 employes

Paul Lienemann, senior vice president of finance, said 220 plant and administrative employes will be laid off indefinitely at the end of the workday Friday, and 200 plant employes will begin two-week furloughs

At the end of the two-week furlough period, Lienemann said those employes affected will return to work and another 200 will go on two-week furloughs

After the 220 employe layoff, Lienemann said Valmont will have a total employment of approximately 1,200, including the 420 involved in the furloughs, compared with 1,055 in March of 1974

We hired more employes in anticipation of a very strong demand for center pivot irrigation equipment in the first half of 1975," Lienemann said. "And the demand ahs been greater than 1974, but it has not been at the level we had anticipated."

Of the layoffs, Lienemann said from 170-175 were plant workers, while the balance involved middle management on down

Nebraska City Food Processor To Shut Down

Nebraska City (AP) — One of Nebraska City's largest employers, Morton House Kitchens Inc., Friday will shutdown operations for an indefinite period

Company officials cited high inventory levels and unfavorable economic conditions as the reasons for the shutdown.

The plant will reopen officials said but a firm date for resumption of operations was not given

The plant had been operating on a reduced workforce after the layoff of about 65 workers several weeks ago. About 100 employes are affected by the latest announcement

Office personnel will continue to handle the paperwork needed to fill orders, and products will continue to flow from the plant's inventory.

A skeleton crew will also be kept on to keep the plant ready for reopening

The plant produces beef stew chili sloppy joes baked beans beef and gravy and pork and gravy

Kearney Firm To Recall 30 To Workforce

Kearney (AP) — Saying most major auto making firms have reduced inventories sufficiently, officials at the Eaton Corp. plant here Wednesday announced the recall of another 30 employes, effective March 31

The plant workforce was reduced by a total of 90 employes late last year. But 20 workers were recalled about one month ago

The latest recall will bring the total number of workers to 279, and will allow the plant to expand to two full shifts daily

At its peak last November 315 workers manned a three-shift operation

Northwestern Bell Called Inflation Victim, Not Cause

Omaha (UPI) — Northwestern Bell Telephone Co. is "the victim of inflation, not a cause," Ben R. Morris, Bell vice president and Nebraska chief executive officer, testified Wednesday on Bell's request for a $16 million increase in Nebraska telephone rates.

He described the rate of inflation as the highest in the past 100 years and said inflation "has so severely affected our business."

Morris' testimony came in the first of three scheduled days of Omaha hearings before the Nebraska Public Service Commission on Bell's request to increase annual revenues in the state by 23%.

Charge Denied

Under questioning by attorneys representing groups opposed to the rate increase, Morris denied that Bell's proposal, if approved, would contribute to inflation.

He said, "Northwestern Bell is a victim of inflation, not a cause."

During his presentation, Morris said, "I had no choice except to file this rate application.

"It is my responsibility to see that my company continues to provide high quality telephone service in this state," Morris said. He said Bell could not do this "under today's economic conditions without an increase in the now outdated rate levels."

Bell requested a $6 million increase in Nebraska rates in January 1974, and the Public Service Commission allowed a $2.5 million increase on annual revenues.

The commission also took testimony from Mary Alice Race, who represented a group calling itself "The Gray Panthers," and Willard Riley, owner and operator of the Benkelman Telephone Co., Inc.

Problems Of Elderly

The Gray Panthers was described as a group working to help solve the problems of the elderly.

The commission had received 50 to 60 letters of protest against the proposed increase, and the U.S. Defense Department was admitted as an intervener in the rate case.

William Schaphorst

U.S. Atty. Schaphorst Resigns

Omaha (AP) — William K. Schaphorst, U.S. district attorney for Nebraska, Wednesday announced his resignation to join an Omaha law firm.

Schaphorst, 42, said he is leaving the office with "great reluctance."

"But I feel I've served in the office long enough and should accept this opportunity to re-enter private practice," Schaphorst added.

Daniel E. Wherry, 31, now an assistant to Schaphorst, is considered the favorite for the vacancy.

Wherry, nephew of the late U.S. Sen. Kenneth Wherry, is getting backing for the job from the state's delegation to the U.S. Senate, Roman Hruska and Carl Custis. Wherry has been in charge of the district attorney's office in Lincoln for the past three years, but will move to Omaha if he wins the appointment.

Death Of Omaha Teen Said 'Apparent Suicide'

Omaha (AP) — The death of one Omaha teen-ager has been ruled an "apparent suicide" and an autopsy has been ordered in the death of another.

Acting Douglas County Coroner James Keenan ruled the death of Philip Clark, 17, who died Monday, was an "apparent suicide." Clark had been in critical condition since last Thursday when he was found unconscious in the hallway at Millard Senior High School. Keenan said he apparently died from a poisonous substance.

Keenan ordered an autopsy to determine the cause of death of Gregory Casler, 18, who was found dead Tuesday in the garage of a vacant house.

Police said the body was discovered lying next to an automobile which had been left running. Police said the death appeared to be accidental.

Ambulance Drivers Class Reinstated

North Platte (UPI) — Mid-Plains Community College has agreed to fund classes for emergency medical technicians who operate ambulances. Jack Freiberg, the North Platte Fire Department's trainer, noted the classes were cancelled earlier when federal funds for the state-administered project ran out. The temporary halt to the training program came just after several communities had either purchased their first ambulance or had bought new ones. The one-a-week classes for six months will begin Monday at North Platte's Fire Station No. 1.

Open Burning Forbidden For West Nebraska

By The Associated Press

Citing very dry conditions, the Nebraska state fire marshal's office Wednesday clamped a ban on open burning over most of western Nebraska.

The ban was placed in effect less than 24 hours after a prairie fire raged out of control north of Maxwell, blackening 4,500 acres of pasture land. One man died of a heart attack while fighting the 15-mile-long blaze.

Officials said the ban went into effect immediately, and covers all of the state west of Highway 281, which runs north-south through Red Cloud, Grand Island and O'Neill.

Despite the ban, local fire chiefs may authorize limited open burning, but only if the fire is strictly supervised, officials noted.

Young Named Head Of Section At Med School

Omaha (AP) — Dr. Paul R. Young, a 1958 graduate of the University of Nebraska College of Medicine, has been named the new chairman of his alma mater's department of family practice.

Young, 42, is currently the assistant director of the University of Missouri's family practice program, and medical director of Missouri's continuing medical education program.

Young, a native of Fairfield, Neb., will succeed Dr. Frank Land, who resigned several months ago.

Young will join the University of Nebraska Medical Center staff as a full professor, and will be paid $45,000 annually.

Ambulance Drivers Class Reinstated

North Platte (UPI) — Mid-Plains Community College has agreed to fund classes for emergency medical technicians who operate ambulances. Jack Freiberg, the North Platte Fire Department's trainer, noted the classes were cancelled earlier when federal funds for the state-administered project ran out. The temporary halt to the training program came just after several communities had either purchased their first ambulance or had bought new ones. The one-a-week classes for six months will begin Monday at North Platte's Fire Station No. 1.

Open Burning Forbidden For West Nebraska

By The Associated Press

Citing very dry conditions, the Nebraska state fire marshal's office Wednesday clamped a ban on open burning over most of western Nebraska.

The ban was placed in effect less than 24 hours after a prairie fire raged out of control north of Maxwell, blackening 4,500 acres of pasture land. One man died of a heart attack while fighting the 15-mile-long blaze.

Officials said the ban went into effect immediately, and covers all of the state west of Highway 281, which runs north-south through Red Cloud, Grand Island and O'Neill.

Despite the ban, local fire chiefs may authorize limited open burning, but only if the fire is strictly supervised, officials noted.

Young Named Head Of Section At Med School

Omaha (AP) — Dr. Paul R. Young, a 1958 graduate of the University of Nebraska College of Medicine, has been named the new chairman of his alma mater's department of family practice.

Young, 42, is currently the assistant director of the University of Missouri's family practice program, and medical director of Missouri's continuing medical education program.

Young, a native of Fairfield, Neb., will succeed Dr. Frank Land, who resigned several months ago.

Young will join the University of Nebraska Medical Center staff as a full professor, and will be paid $45,000 annually.

Boys Town $4.5 Million Loss Covered By Income

Boys Town (AP) — Boys Town reported Wednesday that it had an operating loss of $4 5 million in 1974, but increased its net worth by $2 1 million to $28 8 million

The home said the operating loss came about because expenses of $15,677,572 exceeded income of $11,160,468 from contributions, bequests and a few other sources.

The operating loss was, however, more than offset by $10,990,462 in income from the home's endowment fund This came mainly from interest and dividends on investments

Cutting into the net worth was a $4,644,177 expense to finance the home's pension program for employes

Archbishop Daniel E. Sheehan, president of the Boys Town board of directors, said the endowment fund which now stands at $200 1 million has been instrumental in maintaining Boys Town's traditional programs and in starting new services.

Boys Town currently has a speech-hearing institute under construction in Omaha, and construction of a center for youth development is scheduled to begin this year at Boys Town

Edwin Hewitt, deputy director for finance, said Boys Town will spend more than $50 million in the next three years for new facilities and programs, and the bulk of the money will come from the endowment fund

The financial report said the current net worth of $228,827,921 includes the endowment fund of $200,150,917, plus $25,995,179 in capital assets, plus other investments. The capital assets include Boys Town's 1,500-acre campus, its 50-plus buildings and other real estate.

Morgan Seeks Probe On Douglas Contracts

Omaha (AP) — Douglas County Commissioner P J Morgan says he will ask a county grand jury to investigate ' the county s procedures and contractual arrangements with architects and engineers '

A grand jury, first to be convened in the county in a decade, is currently investigating various areas of criminal activity in the city and county, and possible government corruption

In recent months, Morgan has been critical of procedures used in the authorization of payments for work on various projects

More specifically, Morgan has been critical of John Latenser and Sons, architects for several county expansion and remodeling projects

However, Morgan said Wednesday he will not divulge the names of the specific firms or cases he wants investigated, adding that his call for the probe does not imply that there has been criminal activity involved

During the county board's first meeting in the new City-County Building Tuesday, Morgan again criticized the Latenser firm Morgan claimed Latenser did not make sure a new sprinkler system in the County Hospital annex was inspected by the state fire marshal s office before those during the work on the system were paid

Nes Latenser said the responsibility for obtaining inspection and approval of the system was with the contractor on the job

School Board Offer Splits Difference

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

Negotiators for the Lincoln Board of Education Wednesday opened formal talks on 1975-76 teacher contracts by offering slightly more than half the dollars for pay increases requested by the Lincoln Education Association (LEA).

The LEA had asked for a 14.14% overall increase in the salary budget, or more than $2.3 million. The board's counter offer was 7.69%, or a total teacher pay increase of $1,284,087.

The board offer would increase the base or starting pay for a beginning teacher with a bachelors degree from $7,825 annually to $8,225, a $400 boost. The LEA had proposed increasing the base to $8,550, or $725.

LEA Executive Director Robert F. Peterson told the board negotiating team that because of increases in the cost of living, the board offer is "just absolutely not acceptable to the association."

Peterson said while inflation, based on the government's consumer price index, is dipping a bit now, "cost-of-living figures could skyrocket" in mid-contract, with teachers locked into salaries, and unable to cope because of those economic factors.

The board's salary proposal "shows the board isn't attempting to help teachers" simply meet inflation, Peterson said, noting settlements elsewhere range from 11% to 14% — a signal the LEA will fight if offered less.

The board team introduced a surprise item into the talks: guidelines for reducing the teaching staff if required because of enrollment declines, budget limitations or program changes.

'Legitimate Stake'

Peterson said he was "amazed to see it in the proposal." But Terry Workman, chief board negotiator, said, "We believe the LEA has a legitimate stake in this . . . if it ever does come."

Carroll Sawin, assistant superintendent for personnel, said, "We don't see a tornado coming," but want procedures for staff reductions just in case. Peterson acknowledged, "It does make sense, while things are peaceful," rather than to draft a plan amid controversy after reductions are necessary.

The LEA also maintained its earlier stance on procedures to handle student assaults on teachers, which — with discipline problems — Peterson said represent "a very significant political problem for us."

Workman, administrative assistant for management services, agreed: "We see a need for this." He said the board is "willing to work with the LEA" on the problem, but "outside (the) negotiations."

'Appendage' Suggested

Supt. John Prasch, who chairs the talks, suggested a compromise, an "appendage" to the final settlement listing items and concerns the board and the LEA agree to work on cooperatively, outside the bounds of the negotiated contract.

The board rejected the LEA's proposals for a sick leave bank, paid civic leave with benefits, personal leave on the building level, maternity leave, and a "cafeteria-style" package of insurance benefits.

The board and the LEA reached agreement Wednesday on making changes in the personnel handbook, jury duty, movement on the salary schedule, payment for intramural supervision and other hourly wages, and minor housekeeping items.

The two teams met halfway on an LEA proposal for early teacher retirement after age 62 with incentive pay. Still at issue are retaining health benefits after leaving the classroom.

Board counter proposals the LEA took major exception to include deviation from the pay plan, staff development courses applying to pay raises, sabbatical leave pay, days off for conferences and conventions, notification of an outside job, nine or twelve paychecks, and broader grievance procedures.

The teams set the next round of talks for 7 p.m. March 31.

Senators Split

Washington (AP) — Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., voted against a tax bill amendment to limit an exemption from the proposed repeal of the oil depletion allowance to the first 3,000 barrels of oil and 18 million cubic feet of gas produced by independent producers. Sen. Roman Hruska, R-Neb., voted for the amendment, which was adopted 47-41.

Thone Votes For Strip Mining Bill

Washington (AP) — Rep. Charles Thone, R-Neb., voted with the majority as the House approved 333 to 86 a bill to impose federal controls on the strip mining of coal. Reps. John McCollister and Virginia Smith, both R-Neb., voted against the environmental and reclamation controls.

School Board Offer Splits Difference

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

Negotiators for the Lincoln Board of Education Wednesday opened formal talks on 1975-76 teacher contracts by offering slightly more than half the dollars for pay increases requested by the Lincoln Education Association (LEA).

The LEA had asked for a 14.14% overall increase in the salary budget, or more than $2.3 million. The board's counter offer was 7.69%, or a total teacher pay increase of $1,284,-087.

The board offer would increase the base or starting pay for a beginning teacher with a bachelors degree from $7,825 annually to $8,225, a $400 boost. The LEA had proposed increasing the base to $8,550, or $725.

LEA Executive Director Robert F. Peterson told the board negotiating team that because of increases in the cost of living, the board offer is "just absolutely not acceptable to the association."

Peterson said while inflation, based on the government's consumer price index, is dipping a bit now, "cost-of-living figures could skyrocket" in mid-contract, with teachers locked into salaries, and unable to cope because of those economic factors.

The board's salary proposal "shows the board isn't attempting to help teachers" simply meet inflation, Peterson said, noting settlements elsewhere range from 11% to 14% — a signal the LEA will fight if offered less.

The board team introduced a surprise item into the talks: guidelines for reducing the teaching staff if required because of enrollment declines, budget limitations or program changes.

'Legitimate Stake'

Peterson said he was "amazed to see it in the proposal." But Terry Workman, chief board negotiator, said, "We believe the LEA has a legitimate stake in this . . . if it ever does come."

Carroll Sawin, assistant superintendent for personnel, said, "We don't see a tornado coming," but want procedures for staff reductions just in case. Peterson acknowledged, "It does make sense, while things are peaceful," rather than to draft a plan amid controversy after reductions are necessary.

The LEA also maintained its earlier stance on procedures to handle student assaults on teachers, which — with discipline problems — Peterson said represent "a very significant political problem for us."

Workman, administrative assistant for management services, agreed: "We see a need for this." He said the board is "willing to work with the LEA" on the problem, but "outside (the) negotiations."

'Appendage' Suggested

Supt. John Prasch, who chairs the talks, suggested a compromise, an "appendage" to the final settlement listing items and concerns the board and the LEA agree to work on cooperatively, outside the bounds of the negotiated contract.

The board rejected the LEA's proposals for a sick leave bank, paid civic leave with benefits, personal leave on the building level, maternity leave, and a "cafeteria-style" package of insurance benefits.

The board and the LEA reached agreement Wednesday on making changes in the personnel handbook, jury duty, movement on the salary schedule, payment for intramural supervision and other hourly wages, and minor housekeeping items.

The two teams met halfway on an LEA proposal for early teacher retirement after age 62 with incentive pay. Still at issue are retaining health benefits after leaving the classroom.

Board counter proposals the LEA took major exception to include deviation from the pay plan, staff development courses applying to pay raises, sabbatical leave pay, days off for conferences and conventions, notification of an outside job, nine or twelve paychecks, and broader grievance procedures.

The teams set the next round of talks for 7 p.m. March 31.

Senators Split

Washington (AP) — Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., voted against a tax bill amendment to limit an exemption from the proposed repeal of the oil depletion allowance to the first 3,000 barrels of oil and 18 million cubic feet of gas produced by independent producers. Sen. Roman Hruska, R-Neb., voted for the amendment, which was adopted 47-41.

Thone Votes For Strip Mining Bill

Washington (AP) — Rep. Charles Thone, R-Neb., voted with the majority as the House approved 333 to 86 a bill to impose federal controls on the strip mining of coal. Reps. John McCollister and Virginia Smith, both R-Neb., voted against the environmental and reclamation controls.

Train Engineer Reports Narrowly Missing Bus

Central City (AP) — The engineer on the Union Pacific railroad's high-speed Arrow freight train said he narrowly missed colliding with a school bus at a crossing in Central City Wednesday.

Engineer Charles Welch of North Platte said the westbound freight was moving through Central City at about 45 miles per hour when a school bus pulled up to the crossing and stopped for the flashing red lights. However, Welch said, the bus then pulled out across the tracks when the train was only about 150 feet from the bus. The bus was loaded with school children.

Welch said the woman bus driver and her passengers were "just plain lucky." He said if the bus had paused five seconds longer before moving onto the tracks, a collision could not have been avoided.

Union Pacific spokesman Barry Combs said in Omaha that the railroad sent a special agent from Grand Island to Central City to talk with the driver and the superintendent of schools after the near miss.

The agent said the bus driver said she saw the train before pulling across the tracks, but believed she had adequate time to cross before the train reached the crossing.

Exon Describes Ag Policy As Neither Fair, Workable

Gov. J. James Exon Wednesday criticized farm policy voiced by U.S. Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz as "neither fair nor workable" and asked Butz to reconsider his announced opposition to higher target prices.

In a letter to Butz, Exon said he had "noted with alarm your statements that you will recommend a presidential veto of the present action being considered in the House with regard to raising target and loan rates for wheat and feed grain, and strengthening price supports for dairy products."

Exon said the Ford administration and former President Nixon had urged farmers to produce the maximum possible, "but you have steadfastly opposed even minimum guarantees to producers whose resources you are calling on for full production."

"Such a policy is neither fair nor workable," Exon said.

Exon's letter also said he was asking Nebraska's congressional delegation to oppose current administration positions on agriculture.

School Funding Meeting Delayed

The Governor's Commission on University Funding meeting scheduled for Thursday has been postponed until Wednesday, March 26, at 1:30 p.m. in Regents Hall, 3835 Holdrege, according to Chairman Gus Lieske of Omaha.

He said the agenda will include a review of the agriculture subcommittee report and a state appropriations report.

NWU Prof Writes Ed Tax Credit Bill

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

The hand of Antony Mark Ruprecht might put some dollars back into the pockets of low- and middle-income Americans who are strapped by the costs of higher education.

The Nebraska Wesleyan University political science professor went to Washington, wrote a bill that would amend the 1954 Internal Revenue Code, and Rep. Charles Thone of Lincoln introduced it in the House on March 12.

HR4727 would allow individual income tax credits for tuition and fees, books, supplies and equipment at any postsecondary institution.

Up to $490 Per Year

Ruprecht said Thone's bill would permit up to $490 in tax credits annually, for a student who paid $1,000 in educational expenses in one year.

All of the first $300 may be applied under HR4727, then 50% of the next $300, and 10% of the next $400.

To overcome objections such a bill would benefit the rich, Ruprecht wrote a section in HR4727 which reduces the credit by 2% of the amount of personal income that exceeds $20,000.

For example, if a family earns $21,000 and the student's educational costs are $1,000, then the $490 allowable tax credit would be reduced to $470. For a $30,000 income, the maximum credit would be further reduced to $290. A family with $45,000 or more in annual income would be excluded from the tax benefit.

'More I Like I Like It'

Ruprecht said that after a two-hour skull session in Thone's office, the congressman remarked, "The more I read about it and the more I think about it, the more I like it."

A pilot himself, Ruprecht said he's optimistic the bill will fly in the 94th Congress, which could overcome the body's reputation as a "slow-moving turtle" this year.

"First, he said, "This Congress is the most liberal Congress since WWII — liberal in terms of having many Democrats take office, 74 or 75 of them."

And those new Democrats join the entire Congress' concern for "pumping money back into the economy," Ruprecht said, noting the proposal for $21.9 billion in tax rebates.

Chairman of the National Committee for the Tax Deduction of Tuition Fees, Ruprecht said Thone's bill would be "a shot in the arm" for the "vast middle class that goes to school."

Second, Ruprecht said the House Ways and Means Committee (which now holds the fate of HR4727) has increased its membership from 24 to 37, including 18 new members of the liberal stripe.

Broad Base Of Support

A third factor for possible success of the bill, he said, is support from 300 schools, 80 congressmen, college presidents, students and faculty members.

Ruprecht noted realistically, "This by no means indicates Congress will pass" the tax credit bill, but he was enthused that it was introduced in a form acceptable to the education community.

In Washington, Ruprecht met with and got support for his bill from a lineup of Democrats. Connecticut Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff said he'll reintroduce in the Senate a similar bill that chamber approved in 1971, this time with a rider based on Ruprecht's graduated formula.

Pat Baker, chief counsel for the House Ways and Means Committee, and Fred Hickman, assistant secretary for tax planning, maintained the previous bill was "too expensive."

But Ruprecht said committee Chairman Al Ullman, a Democrat from Oregon, might consider HR4727 favorably, since it reduces the government's estimated losses from $2.8 billion four years ago to slightly more than $1 billion today.

Administration to 'Re-Evaluate'

Based on Ruprecht's bill, he said, Hickman promised the administration is "going to re-evaluate our position."

"Our next move," Ruprecht said, "will be to write to all the people on the House Ways and Means Committee" to gain their support for the bill.

NWU Prof Writes Ed Tax Credit Bill

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

The hand of Antony Mark Ruprecht might put some dollars back into the pockets of low- and middle-income Americans who are strapped by the costs of higher education.

The Nebraska Wesleyan University political science professor went to Washington, wrote a bill that would amend the 1954 Internal Revenue Code, and Rep. Charles Thone of Lincoln introduced it in the House on March 12.

HR4727 would allow individual income tax credits for tuition and fees, books, supplies and equipment at any postsecondary institution.

Up to $490 Per Year

Ruprecht said Thone's bill would permit up to $490 in tax credits annually, for a student who paid $1,000 in educational expenses in one year.

All of the first $300 may be applied under HR4727, then 50% of the next $300, and 10% of the next $400.

To overcome objections such a bill would benefit the rich, Ruprecht wrote a section in HR4727 which reduces the credit by 2% of the amount of personal income that exceeds $20,000.

For example, if a family earns $21,000 and the student's educational costs are $1,000, then the $490 allowable tax credit would be reduced to $470. For a $30,000 income, the maximum credit would be further reduced to $290. A family with $45,000 or more in annual income would be excluded from the tax benefit.

'More I Like I Like It'

Ruprecht said that after a two-hour skull session in Thone's office, the congressman remarked, "The more I read about it and the more I think about it, the more I like it."

A pilot himself, Ruprecht said he's optimistic the bill will fly in the 94th Congress, which could overcome the body's reputation as a "slow-moving turtle" this year.

"First, he said, "This Congress is the most liberal Congress since WWII — liberal in terms of having many Democrats take office, 74 or 75 of them."

And those new Democrats join the entire Congress' concern for "pumping money back into the economy," Ruprecht said, noting the proposal for $21.9 billion in tax rebates.

Chairman of the National Committee for the Tax Deduction of Tuition Fees, Ruprecht said Thone's bill would be "a shot in the arm" for the "vast middle class that goes to school."

Second, Ruprecht said the House Ways and Means Committee (which now holds the fate of HR4727) has increased its membership from 24 to 37, including 18 new members of the liberal stripe.

Broad Base Of Support

A third factor for possible success of the bill, he said, is support from 300 schools, 80 congressmen, college presidents, students and faculty members.

Ruprecht noted realistically, "This by no means indicates Congress will pass" the tax credit bill, but he was enthused that it was introduced in a form acceptable to the education community.

In Washington, Ruprecht met with and got support for his bill from a lineup of Democrats. Connecticut Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff said he'll reintroduce in the Senate a similar bill that chamber approved in 1971, this time with a rider based on Ruprecht's graduated formula.

Pat Baker, chief counsel for the House Ways and Means Committee, and Fred Hickman, assistant secretary for tax planning, maintained the previous bill was "too expensive."

But Ruprecht said committee Chairman Al Ullman, a Democrat from Oregon, might consider HR4727 favorably, since it reduces the government's estimated losses from $2.8 billion four years ago to slightly more than $1 billion today.

Administration to 'Re-Evaluate'

Based on Ruprecht's bill, he said, Hickman promised the administration is "going to re-evaluate our position."

"Our next move," Ruprecht said, "will be to write to all the people on the House Ways and Means Committee" to gain their support for the bill.

dear abby — Don't Expect To See Him On Sundays

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago, you had a letter in your column in the form of advice for a girl who was in love with a married man. It started with: "Never expect to see him on Sundays or holidays."

I remembered it because I had once been in love with a married man and you really hit the nail on the head.

Had I known that my own daughter would be in need of such advice, I would have saved it.

I hope you can locate it, because your column is the first thing my beautiful (but dumb) 27-year-old daughter goes for in the Chicago Tribune.

Thank you.

HER MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I located it. And here it is:

"Dear Abby: May I give your readers the benefit of my very valuable experience? I address this to any woman who is in love with a married man:

Never expect to see him on Sundays or holidays. Never call him at home.

Don't ever expect him to take you out in public, but be prepared to entertain him at your place. He may bring a bottle or the steaks occasionally, but in actual dollars and cents, you will spend more on him than he'll spend on you.

Never depend on him in times of personal crisis.

Don't believe him when he tells you that his wife is a shrew, cold, homely, too fat (or too thin), and she hasn't slept with him in ten years.

Don't ever expect his wife to divorce him if she ever catches him. She knows that you are not his first and won't be his last. Also, she is not about to give up her social status, financial security and retirement income because of you. However her discovery will probably terminate his affair with you, so be prepared to get some new clothes, circulate, and find another man whose wife is a shrew, cold, homely, too fat (or too thin), and hasn't slept with him for ten years. Sign me ...

HIS WIFE"

DEAR ABBY: I met a man about a year and a half ago, and I really think he is the man for me. The only problem is that he is very set in his ways, and one of his faults is always being late. If he says he is going to call me at 6 p.m., he doesn't call until 7 p.m. And if he says he is coming over at 8 p.m., he never gets here until 9 p.m. He is always about an hour late.

I have talked to him about this, and he says he's always been that way. It really infuriates me. I want to marry him, but I'd like to break him of this habit first.

He treats me very well, and he is the nicest man I've ever met, but his constantly running an hour late all the time is something I can't stand. How can I change him?

NEEDS HELP

DEAR NEEDS: Don't try. In the future, when you want him to come over at 8 p.m., ask him to come at 7 p.m. Just set everything up for an hour earlier, and when he's an hour late, he'll be on time.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (20¢) envelope.

What Would You Bid On 5 Hands?

By B. JAY BECKER

You are South, both sides vulnerable. The bidding has been:

West	North	East	South
1♥	Dble	Pass	?

What would you bid now with each of the following five hands?

1. ♠AJ7642 ♥853 ♦K75 ♣9
2. ♠943 ♥KJ2 ♦J85 ♣KJ96
3. ♠Q82 ♥J8754 ♦73 ♣653
4. ♠AJ7 ♥QJ86 ♦842 ♣K94
5. ♠Q654 ♥7 ♦KQ85 ♣AQ32

1. Two spades. The most common way of identifying promising values when your partner doubles for takeout is by a jump response. It would be wrong to respond one spade with this hand and also respond one spade with, say: ♠J642 ♥8532 ♦Q7 ♣872. Your partner is not a mind-reader and would have no way of knowing which hand you held if you responded one spade with each of them.

You have about six winners with spades as trumps, and you should identify your game-going prospects with a jump response. Some players would jump directly to four spades, which is also acceptable.

2. One notrump. Here you have more high-card points but less chance for game. It is better to respond one notrump, which orindarily shows 7 to 9 points, than to respond two clubs, which theoretically could be based on a worthless hand.

3. One spade. This is an unpleasant situation, no doubt, but you're not responsible for having been dealt a poor hand and you must make the best of it. It would be dead wrong to pass, and equally wrong to bid one notrump for the reasons previously given. You're not expected to enjoy bidding a three-card suit, but it's the best bid available.

4. Two notrump. This is by far the best action to take with 11 high-card points, hearts doubly stopped, and notrump distribution. Change the deuce of diamonds to the queen, and you would respond three notrump.

5. Two hearts. This is obviously a game-going hand, as you have an opening bid of your own facing a partner who has indicated opening bid strength by his double. But, under the circumstances, it is better not to make a jump-shift response in one of your three suits because you have no way of knowing which suit the hand will play best in.

Instead of trying to guess partner's best suit, you respond with a cuebid and thus force North to reveal his longest suit. You plan to raise partner directly to game in the suit of his choice.

Canby Better As Critic

For lack of a better label, let's call it the Reviewer/Critic Frustration Syndrome.

It isn't the type of affliction that sends its victims to mental institutions, or provokes scholars to do research.

But every honest critic or reviewer will probably admit to being possessed by it· that nagging suspicion, manifested as a faint, back-of-the-mind voice which says to the critic, "You could do better than that author, director, actor, etc."

Vincent Canby, film critic for the New York Times, recently succumbed to that oddly conceived creative itch.

Escaping for a moment the celluloid jungle, he turned his attention to the world of letters – this time as practitioner, not critic. And as he traipsed over the newly discovered terrain, Canby left in his wake a novel — his first – entitled "Living Quarters" (Knopf).

Two hundred and twenty-seven pages long, "Living Quarters" is approximately 100 pages too long

It's one of those stories that meanders back and forth across time and space, touching a multitude of lives and events in the process

Canby does keep the reader wondering — every once in awhile about what's going to happen to Character X or Character Y; more frequently about how Passage Z relates to what has gone before and what will come after.

Someone, writing the jacket-flap notes to "Living Quarters," called the book "a sometimes funny, often elegiac tale of America and Europe, today and yesterday."

Better to have called it "The Saga Of Daisianna du Chaudrun" and been done with it.

Somewhere within the first few pages, Daisianna admits to having shot her husband, a French film director (aha! the Canby connection), in their Virgin Islands summer home.

Canby then devotes the remainder of the book to a convoluted analysis of how Duisianna got to that terrible point in her pill-popping, moody career.

Ho-hum.

Now that Canby has gotten the devil out of his system, maybe he'll sleep better at night. Hopefully, he's done back to the screening room.

Normal Blvd. Office Building Opposed

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

Residents of the Eden Park Neighborhood Association joined Planning Director Doug Brogden in urging city-county planners to reject the proposed construction of an office building west of Cotner Blvd. along Normal Blvd.

The land is just part of a stretch along Normal from 40th to 48th which has been involved in numerous zoning battles the past few years. Most of the land lies vacant, with Antelope Creek dissecting the southern portion of the property.

Attorney Dick Spangler, representing Donald Crews, urged the commission to approve a change of zone from single family to restricted commercial on the 3 1-acre site

A single-story office building for doctors, lawyers, architects and other professionals is proposed.

Spangler argued that the land would not develop into single family homes because the area is located in the 100-year flood plain. Developer Ken Long said state officials have told him that in order for a house to be built on the land, the first floor would have to be five feet above ground level

Planning Commissioner Art Duerschner suggested that the planners meet with Natural Resources Commission officials to find out what the state's latest policy is for developing flood plain areas. A trend is developing not to put homes on such land, he said.

Residents of the neighborhood opposed the zoning change and suggested that the land be left as park space.

The piece of land Crews wants to develop is located on the southwest corner of Normal Blvd. and Cotner Blvd. It is part of the area south of Normal between 40th and 48th which is zoned mostly for single family, except for one strip zoned for business and another zoned for multiple dwellings.

The City Council has directed the planning department to come up with a compromise plan for developing the area. So far, no compromise has been agreed upon.

The planners also took testimony on developer Richard Halverson's request for multiple zoning at 14th and Knox. Halverson and Belmont developer Karl Witt want to build lower cost housing on the 20-acre tract.

A total of 90 single family houses and 72 multiple units are proposed on the land.

Brogden is recommending denial since, he said, the zoning would allow construction of more than 800 units on the land.

The commission also held hearings on:

Changes of Zone

—Application of Keith Hatfield from A-2 Single to D Multiple, at 43rd and Garland —Application of Everett Evnen and Lloyd Feerhusen, from K Light to J Business, at 8th and P.

Special Permits

—Application of Karl Witt to construct child care center, at 14th and Knox.

City Center Company 'Superb'

By DAVID MEISENHOLDER

So many times the word "professional" applied to a theater company does not mean the finest quality of performance. In no way is this true about the City Center Acting Company from New York City.

This theater company is simply superb. Their performance of William Saroyan's "The Time of Your Life" presented Wednesday at Kimball Recital Hall on the University of Nebraska-Lincoln campus was a complete artistic treat

The Sarovan play takes place in a waterfront saloon in San Francisco, 1939. It is here the audience meets a cross section of human beings. Some of these include an alcoholic, a prostitute, a bartender, a young suiter, a longshoreman, a policeman, an Arab, an entertainer, a piano player, and an old-timer, each expressing his dreams of what his life should be or should have been.

Under all this, playwright Sarovan reveals to us the inner humanity and nobility of each of these rather unseemly people. As the champagne-drinking Joe states, "Life is not bookkeeping. It is an art and takes a lot of rehearsing for a man to be himself."

What makes this company's presentation of the play a total delight is through expertise in ensemble acting. Truly the actors work as a group in creating just the right mood at the right time

The talent and training of this company endows these actors with ability to hold the audience in thought-filled silence or to bolt the audience into spontaneous laughter.

It is difficult to single out individual performances because director Jack O'Brien has so carefully weaved his cast into a strong acting unit.

The audience did especially enjoy the old-timer, played by David Schramm. Also impressive was Joe, a San Franciscan not from the waterfront milieu, played by Nicolas Surovy.

Kitty, the prostitute portrayed by Patti LuPone, Nick the bartender, played by Benjamin Hendrickson, Brooks Baldwin as the entertainer, and Norman Snow as Tom, were also audience pleasers.

The massive setting fills the large Kimball Hall stage. Designed by Douglas W. Schmidt, the setting is a masterpiece It lends and blends to the charm of the production.

Within this saloon setting were an array of carefully selected stage props and costumes. Even the women's silk hose were of the 1939 style with seam running down the back.

I enjoyed viewing the restoration of a fine play by one of the foremost American playwrights. Nebraskans should be proud that within the last month we have been treated to two of the finest theater organizations — The Royal Shakespeare Company, Stratford-on-Avon, performing in Omaha, and the City Center Acting Company, New York City, performing in Lincoln and Hastings.

And how did the audience like the City Center Acting Company? They were filled with sheer enjoyment through the art of theater.

"The Time of Your Life" will be presented again next Tuesday. The company will also perform Oliver Goldsmith's "She Stoops to Conquer," March 26. Both curtains are at 8.00 p.m. in Kimball Recital Hall.

NARBC Slowed By Criticisms, But Ready Now

Recent criticisms about the activities of the Nebraska bicentennial "slowed us down a little but we are ready to help Nebraskans plan a big bicentennial birthday," Don Searcy said Wednesday.

Searcy, executive director of the Nebraska American Revolution Bicentennial Commission (NARBC), said he appreciated the support given him during the past two months by the NARBC members.

He said a recetly released state audit of the NARBC indicated no significant irregularities, nor any intentional misappropriation of state funds.

"In view of the completed audit, I now feel we can devote full time to the the goals and objectives of the NARBC," Searcy said.

Businessman E. Magee Dies

Services will be 10 a.m. Saturday at Westminster United Presbyterian Church for Lincoln businessman Elmer E. Magee, 74, who died at his home late Tuesday after returning from a trip to Florida.

Magee, of 2132 Calvert, was chairman of the board of directors of Magee Clothing Stores, and was associated with the store for more than 50 years. His father, Oliver N. Magee, founded the firm in 1902.

Magee served on the Board of Education from 1941-1955 and was elected board president in 1951, serving two terms.

One of the most prominent Masons in the state, he spent several years associated with branches of the Masonic order.

He served as a grand master of Nebraska Masons, and as grand high priest of Royal Arch Masons. He also was past master of the North Star Lodge 27, AF & AM.

Magee helped at the Nebraska Masonic Home for Children and was past puissant sovereign of the Red Cross of Constantine and intendent general for Nebraska.

He actively participated in Masonic youth organizations. He was named to 33rd degree honorary by the Supreme Council of Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite.

The Grand Lodge of Masons of Nebraska will hold graveside services at Wyuka Cemetery on Saturday.

Magee was also active in the Rotarians and headed that group in 1954. In 1974 he received the Cadwallader Award as outstanding Rotarian.

He served on the board of directors of the Camp Floyd Rogers Diabetic Camp for Children.

He was also president of the first local chapter of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, was head of the YMCA board of directors locally and was on the national board, was treasurer of the John J. Pershing Memorial Foundation, a member of the Bryan Memorial Hospital Foundation, and an elder at Westminster Presbyterian Church.

He graduated from University Place High School and attended Nebraska Wesleyan University.

He is survived by his wife, Evelyn; sons, Robert and Oliver, both of Lincoln; sisters, Mrs. Ethel Amos and Mrs. Helene Venner, both of Lincoln, and a half-sister, Mrs. Rosalie Johnson, of Berkeley, Calif.

Man Is Burned Trying To Fight Solvent Blaze

An employe at the Hydrozo Coating Co. at 855 W suffered first degree burns to his hands and face when he tried to extinguish a fire with a garden hose early Wednesday afternoon, according to District Fire Chief Wendell Malcolm.

Malcolm said Ronald Restau, 27, of 704 S. 29th, was burned when a 230 gallon vat of solvent caught fire. He was treated at Lincoln General Hospital and released.

Malcolm said the fire started when a burner under the vat which is normally shut off at 10.30 a.m. was left on.

He said the vat and the shed covering the vat were damaged by the blaze.

Girl Receives Broken Ankle In Cycle Crash

A Lincoln girl was listed in "fair" condition at Bryan Memorial Hospital with a broken ankle she received in a motorcycle accident in the Misle Chevrolet car lot at 4949 O Wednesday evening, according to police Lt. Lee Frakes.

Frakes said Linda Stevens, 18, of 2022 S. 47th, was a passenger on a motorcycle driven by Bradley Carper, 21, of 801 Fall Creek, when it went out of control and crashed.

"In view of the completed audit, I now feel we can devote full time to the the goals and objectives of the NARBC," Searcy said.

Garage Burglarized

Neil G. Holmes, of 7211 Buckingham Dr., told police that tires, a couch, chair, picture and bicycle valued at $840 were taken from his garage in an apartment building.

Man Is Burned Trying To Fight Solvent Blaze

An employe at the Hydrozo Coating Co. at 855 W suffered first degree burns to his hands and face when he tried to extinguish a fire with a garden hose early Wednesday afternoon, according to District Fire Chief Wendell Malcolm.

Malcolm said Ronald Restau, 27, of 704 S. 29th, was burned when a 230 gallon vat of solvent caught fire. He was treated at Lincoln General Hospital and released.

Malcolm said the fire started when a burner under the vat which is normally shut off at 10:30 a.m. was left on.

He said the vat and the shed covering the vat were damaged by the blaze.

Girl Receives Broken Ankle In Cycle Crash

A Lincoln girl was listed in "fair" condition at Bryan Memorial Hospital with a broken ankle she received in a motorcycle accident in the Misle Chevrolet car lot at 4949 O Wednesday evening, according to police Lt. Lee Frakes.

Frakes said Linda Stevens, 18, of 2022 S. 47th, was a passenger on a motorcycle driven by Bradley Carper, 21, of 801 Fall Creek, when it went out of control and crashed.

Life After 40:

MedicAlert Has Saved Many Lives

By JOANNE FARRIS

Some weeks ago I mentioned that persons who have dangerous allergies or diseases which require special treatment should always wear bracelets or necklaces detailing the kind of treatment they can or cannot tolerate

I named Medic Alert Foundation as one source for these "identifiers," but I erred with respect to the charge for them, and I did not make clear all the services offered along with the "tag."

Medic Alert Foundation, 1000 N. Palm Ave., Turlock, Calif. 95830, is a charitable, tax-exempt, nonprofit corporation, dedicated to saving lives.

They have more than 540,000 members in the United States, but it is estimated that there are about 40 million Americans with hidden medical problems such as diabetes, severe allergies, heart conditions, epilepsy, etc., for which they should be wearing some sort of identification

The foundation files are full of reports from persons whose lives have been saved because their Medic Alert I.D. (identification) either prevented them from receiving what could have been fatal treatment or caused them to receive vital, life-saving treatment.

Just what does Medic Alert do, and how much does it cost?

First, the only fee is a one-time charge of $7 for lifetime protection. This consists of three interrelated elements. The member receives a metallic alerting device bearing the red Medic Alert emblem

On the reverse side is engraved the immediate medical problem or problems of the wearer such as "taking coagulants" or "wearing contact lenses" or "organ donor" or "mentally retarded."

The unique membership identification nember and the emergency telephone number are also engraved on the medallion

The second part of the service is a wallet card that contains additional medical and personal information This card is reviewed annually. The foundation sends each member a copy of his emergency file and asks that it be updated and returned to them

From this information the computer data on the patient is brought current and dated and the member receives a new, dated card, which reassures emergency personnel that they are acting on the latest information about the patient

The third part of the service is the computerized record of each member, which contains all emergency information that he and his physician believe will best serve him in a medical emergency.

Emergency personnel can place a collect call to the telephone number on the emblem and on the card and 24 hours a day the full information on the medical record of the member is available.

This triple service has great merit If you have a hidden medical problem, write to Medic Alert, and ask them for information about becoming enrolled.

There is another way that Medic Alert may be of use to some of you. They have educational programs which your local civic, service or fraternal organization can conduct in your community.

The first program is to teach emergency personnel to always search for the Medic Alert emblem and take the appropriate follow-up action.

This work is directed to hospital emergency room personnel, paramedics, ambulance dirvers, police, firemen, rescue squads, etc.

The general education program is geared for the community, to make as many persons as possible aware of this service and its value. They have a 24-minute movie featuring Tennessee Ernie Ford which is available to local organizations.

Inflation Puts Wine In Glass

New York (AP) — Inflation has forced the maker of one popular Italian wine to remove the classic straw wrapping from the firm's chianti, a company spokesman said.

Italo Folonari, export director for Ruffino Chianti, said here that the straw-wrapped bottles will begin to disappear from the shelves this week, replaced by a plain glass bottle.

"The straw had to be eliminated to maintain the price and quality of the wine," Folonari said.

Life After 40:

MedicAlert Has Saved Many Lives

By JOANNE FARRIS

Some weeks ago I mentioned that persons who have dangerous allergies or diseases which require special treatment should always wear bracelets or necklaces detailing the kind of treatment they can or cannot tolerate.

I named Medic Alert Foundation as one source for these "identifiers," but I erred with respect to the charge for them, and I did not make clear all the services offered along with the "tag."

Medic Alert Foundation, 1000 N. Palm Ave., Turlock, Calif. 95830, is a charitable, tax-exempt, nonprofit corporation, dedicated to saving lives.

They have more than 540,000 members in the United States, but it is estimated that there are about 40 million Americans with hidden medical problems such as diabetes, severe allergies, heart conditions, epilepsy, etc., for which they should be wearing some sort of identification.

The foundation files are full of reports from persons whose lives have been saved because their Medic Alert I.D. (identification) either prevented them from receiving what could have been fatal treatment or caused them to receive vital, life-saving treatment.

Just what does Medic Alert do, and how much does it cost?

First, the only fee is a one-time charge of $7 for lifetime protection. This consists of three interrelated elements. The member receives a metallic alerting device bearing the red Medic Alert emblem.

On the reverse side is engraved the immediate medical problem or problems of the wearer such as "taking coagulants" or "wearing contact lenses" or "organ donor" or "mentally retarded."

The unique membership identification nember and the emergency telephone number are also engraved on the medallion.

The second part of the service is a wallet card that contains additional medical and personal information. This card is reviewed annually. The foundation sends each member a copy of his emergency file and asks that it be updated and returned to them.

From this information the computer data on the patient is brought current and dated and the member receives a new, dated card, which reassures emergency personnel that they are acting on the latest information about the patient.

The third part of the service is the computerized record of each member, which contains all emergency information that he and his physician believe will best serve him in a medical emergency.

Emergency personnel can place a collect call to the telephone number on the emblem and on the card and 24 hours a day the full information on the medical record of the member is available.

This triple service has great merit. If you have a hidden medical problem, write to Medic Alert, and ask them for information about becoming enrolled.

There is another way that Medic Alert may be of use to some of you. They have educational programs which your local civic, service or fraternal organization can conduct in your community.

The first program is to teach emergency personnel to always search for the Medic Alert emblem and take the appropriate follow-up action.

This work is directed to hospital emergency room personnel, paramedics, ambulance dirvers, police, firemen, rescue squads, etc.

The general education program is geared for the community, to make as many persons as possible aware of this service and its value. They have a 24-minute movie featuring Tennessee Ernie Ford which is available to local organizations.

Inflation Puts Wine In Glass

New York (AP) — Inflation has forced the maker of one popular Italian wine to remove the classic straw wrapping from the firm's chianti, a company spokesman said.

Italo Folonari, export director for Ruffino Chianti, said here that the straw-wrapped bottles will begin to disappear from the shelves this week, replaced by a plain glass bottle.

"The straw had to be eliminated to maintain the price and quality of the wine," Folonari said.

Exon Plans Veto Of Bill 'By' LT&T

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Gov. J. James Exon said Wednesday he will veto a bill "written" by Lincoln Telephone & Telegraph Co. which he said could cost the state millions of dollars in the future.

That particular bill, LB427, would in effect require the state to get its telecommunications service from LT&T and prevent the state from building its own microwave system, for instance, even if it was cheaper.

"I will veto that bill," Exon said in an interview.

Monopoly Wrong

"I'm not sure the state wants to compete with the telephone companies on telephone communications," he said, "but it's wrong to crystalize a monopoly."

The state is presently studying its data processing system. Exon said the state may want to relay computer data between state offices in Lincoln and Omaha via microwave towers.

If the services offered by the telephone companies are cheaper than what it would cost the state to build its own system, there would be no problem, he said.

Should Not Be Tied

If, however, it was determined the state could provide the same service at a lesser cost by developing its own microwave system, Exon said the state should not be tied to LT&T.

Exon said LT&T executives have talked with him and asked him to support LB427.

"They wrote the bill," Exon said. "They say it is necessary. They want their competitors to be regulated by the (Nebraska) Public Service Commission.

"I have no quarrel with that. But what if the state wants to build its own system?"

Exon criticized the Legislature for not taking a critical look at the bill.

No Debate On Floor

"There was no debate on the floor of the Legislature," he said. "The heading doesn't indicate it will do this.

"I wonder how bills like this get through the Legislature," he said.

"Telephone companies feel anytime anyone comes up with an idea on how to transport information they have an exclusive right to it," he said.

Exon noted the bill contains a grandfather clause which allows the state to keep communications systems it now owns. Exon said he wonders why these systems, such as radio communications, are excluded.

Bill Revived On State Cut For Welfare

The Legislature Wednesday revived a bill killed earlier which would have the state pick up $10 million in annual county welfare costs over the next four years.

Senators then voted to delay any action on the bill for 30 days. Sen. Frank Lewis of Bellevue, who made the motion to delay action, said in 30 days the Legislature will know where it stands on spending and revenue for the coming fiscal year.

The bill, LB202, would require the state to pay for medical assistance to welfare recipients. Cost to the state is estimated at $2.5 million for 1975-76.

The bill had been killed on a 21-18 vote last week.

Sen. Ralph Kelly of Grand Island, who made the motion to reconsider that action, said the medical assistance program was a state function so the state should pay the cost.

"The issue here is local government-local tax; state government-state tax," Kelly said.

His motion to reconsider received 25-19 support, minimum needed for approval.

Omaha Sen. John Cavanaugh opposed reconsideration. He said the additional cost to the state would require increasing state income and sales taxes even more than Gov. J. James Exon has recommended.

Publishing Rule On Town Claims Gets Final Okay

Cities and villages of up to 40,000 population would be required to publish complete lists of claims under a bill given final approval in the Legislature Wednesday.

Under the terms of LB193, sponsored by Sen. Frank Lewis of Bellevue, all claims would be published including names and amounts.

In addition, between July 15 and Aug. 15 of each year there would be published a list of employes and the salaries they make.

However, before the voting took place Sen. Gerald Koch of Ralston tried to amend in a provision requiring publication of the cost of the notice in bold face type.

Lewis responded to the suggestion by saying, "This is a spite amendment" and that publishing costs would be included in the list of claims anyway.

The lawmakers rejected Koch's request to bump the bill back one legislative stage on a 20-19 count. The bill ultimately received a 34-8 final approval vote.

Bill To Fund Departments Is Approved

By The Associated Press

The Legislature gave final approval Wednesday to Gov. J. James Exon's $1 million deficit appropriations bill to provide additional funds for various departments of state government.

The Unicameral passed LB529 on a 43-2 vote and sent it to the governor.

The bill provides $1,093,482 in new money for departments in the current fiscal year.

The deficit appropriations include $781,245 for the Department of Public Institutions, $283,237 for the State Patrol, $264,031 for the Department of Correctional Services and $98,158 for the Department of Administrative Services.

The bill would also reduce the governor's emergency fund by $1,214,600.

The measure was introduced by Crofton Sen. Jules Burbach at Exon's request.

RI Employes Ask Security

Sens. Richard Maresh of Milligan and George Burrows of Adams agreed Wednesday to introduce a legislative resolution on behalf of the employes of the financially troubled Chicago Rock Island and Pacific Railroad.

They said the resolution would ask Nebraska's congressional delegation to encourage the Interstate Commerce Commission to give high priority to job security when considering action on the railroad.

M.J. McNeil, a representative of the United Transportation Union who met with the senators Wednesday, said he assumed the ICC would divide Rock Island among other railroads.

He said Rock Island employed approximately 170 employes in Nebraska at an annual cost of $2 million.

Aid Bill Fails By One Vote—Whelan

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

With some distress, the Legislature Wednesday confronted the governor's constitutional power to attempt to hold appropriations within the limits of his budget recommendations.

The governor has veto power to wipe out or reduce appropriations with a stroke of his pen. The 49-member Legislature must gather at least 30 votes to override those gubernatorial objections.

But the constitution also provides: "No appropriations shall be made in excess of the recommendation contained in (the governor's) budget . . . unless by three-fifths vote of the Legislature." That too translates into 30 votes.

Pointing to that constitutional mandate, Lt. Gov. Gerald Whelan Wednesday ruled that an appropriations bill, approved on a 29-15 final reading vote, failed to win enactment.

The ruling touched off a lengthy legislative discussion, triggered a request for a ruling from the attorney general and produced a motion to reconsider the bill at a later time.

At issue was LB240A, the appropriations rider to a bill which would increase the number of Nebraskans eligible for public assistance to the blind and disabled.

The bill was enacted on a 42-0 vote.

But the appropriations rider providing $1,562,000 to fund the welfare additions fell one vote short of enactment, on the strength of Whelan's ruling.

That ruling was absolutely correct, Appropriations Chairman Richard Marvel of Hastings said. The 30-vote requirement does apply to the bill, he declared.

Whelan said his check with executive budget officers indicated that no such funding is contained in Gov. J. James Exon's budget recommendations.

The lieutenant governor's ruling, challenged by Sen. Wally Barnett of Lincoln, was sustained on a 36-8 count.

Sen. John Murphy of South Sioux City said he will seek an opinion from Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas on whether Whelan's ruling was correct.

In the meantime, he left pending a motion to subject the bill to another vote in an effort to gather 30 supporting senators.

LB240 eliminates age requirements in eligibility for assistance to the blind and disabled.

Its effect will be to make 64 blind persons under 16 and 750 disabled persons under 18 eligible for public assistance.

The $1.6 million cost includes $382,000 in state tax funds.

Other costs are $868,000 in federal funds and $312,000 in county financing.

In the future, Whelan told senators, he will require 30 votes for all appropriations riders unless he can be shown that such funding is clearly provided in the governor's budget recommendations.

Roads Decision Queried

The Legislature's Public Works Committee decided Wednesday to invite State Engineer Tom Doyle to a meeting Thursday to explain a departmental decision which senators said denied counties $14 1 million in highway construction money.

Sen. Jerome Warner of Waverly said there was nothing wrong with the state using the money, but he said the department should recognize that the money must be available to the counties if they request it.

Warner said the Department of Roads in September 1973, decided to no longer recognize the debt to the counties.

Warner offered the committee legislation which would force the department to recognize the debt.

Stiffer Penalty On Failure To Pay Child Support OKd

The Judiciary Committee approved legislation Wednesday that would stiffen penalties for those who fail to make child support payments.

The committee made several amendments to Bellwood Sen. Loran Schmit's LB312 before advancing it to the floor. However, key provisions of the bill would still:

—Require those who fail to make child support payments to pay 9% interest on the unmade payments.

—Allow courts to jail those who fail to make payments, and place them on a work release program if they don't have jobs. The court could take 90% of the father's pay to apply toward delinquent support payments.

In other action, the committee amended and advanced LB584, an interstate compact for settling inheritance tax disputes between states. The bill would help avoid protracted disagreements over estates of those who were domiciled in two states.

'Guest Statute' To Be Dropped If Bill Passes

A legislative Committee Wednesday voted to send a bill to the floor which would allow non-paying passengers to collect insurance settlements when they are injured through the negligence of the driver of the car in which they are riding.

The Public Works Committee voted to send LB491 to the floor. It would repeal Nebraska's "Guest Statute," which prohibits nonpaying passengers from collecting for injuries due to the negligence of the driver.

The guest statute, as it exists in current law, makes exceptions and holds the driver accountable for cases of gross negligence and drunkenness.

Bill Advanced Allowing Appeal On Assessments

The Legislature's Urban Affairs Committee Wednesday sent to the floor a bill setting up procedures for property owners to appeal special assessments for street and sewer construction.

Utica Sen. Douglas Bereuter's LB468 would permit property owners to appeal the assessment to district court.

The committee amended the bill to make it apply to Omaha and Lincoln, as well as first and second class cities and villages.

Aid Bill Fails By One Vote—Whelan

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

With some distress, the Legislature Wednesday confronted the governor's constitutional power to attempt to hold appropriations within the limits of his budget recommendations.

The governor has veto power to wipe out or reduce appropriations with a stroke of his pen. The 49-member Legislature must gather at least 30 votes to override those gubernatorial objections.

But the constitution also provides: "No appropriations shall be made in excess of the recommendation contained in (the governor's) budget . . . unless by three-fifths vote of the Legislature." That too translates into 30 votes.

Pointing to that constitutional mandate, Lt. Gov. Gerald Whelan Wednesday ruled that an appropriations bill, approved on a 29-15 final reading vote, failed to win enactment.

The ruling touched off a lengthy legislative discussion, triggered a request for a ruling from the attorney general and produced a motion to reconsider the bill at a later time.

At issue was LB240A, the appropriations rider to a bill which would increase the number of Nebraskans eligible for public assistance to the blind and disabled.

The bill was enacted on a 42-0 vote.

But the appropriations rider providing $1,562,000 to fund the welfare additions fell one vote short of enactment, on the strength of Whelan's ruling.

That ruling was absolutely correct, Appropriations Chairman Richard Marvel of Hastings said. The 30-vote requirement does apply to the bill, he declared.

Whelan said his check with executive budget officers indicated that no such funding is contained in Gov. J. James Exon's budget recommendations.

The lieutenant governor's ruling, challenged by Sen. Wally Barnett of Lincoln, was sustained on a 36-8 count.

Sen. John Murphy of South Sioux City said he will seek an opinion from Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas on whether Whelan's ruling was correct.

In the meantime, he left pending a motion to subject the bill to another vote in an effort to gather 30 supporting senators.

LB240 eliminates age requirements in eligibility for assistance to the blind and disabled.

Its effect will be to make 64 blind persons under 16 and 750 disabled persons under 18 eligible for public assistance.

The $1.6 million cost includes $382,000 in state tax funds.

Other costs are $868,000 in federal funds and $312,000 in county financing.

In the future, Whelan told senators, he will require 30 votes for all appropriations riders unless he can be shown that such funding is clearly provided in the governor's budget recommendations.

Pay Boost During Sessions Urged

Lincoln businessman Bill Harris has urged the Legislature's Constitutional Revision and Recreation Committee to consider a senatorial pay proposal which would boost legislative salaries during the months when the Unicameral is in session

Senators are now salaried at $400 a month, whether the Legislature is in session or not.

Harris proposed that the salary be increased to $1,200 a month while the lawmakers are in session

"If this issue is put before the voters in this form, I feel that they would understand more clearly the purpose of an increase in salary for the state's representatives," Harris wrote members of the committee

Any proposed increase in senatorial salaries must go to the voters in the form of a constitutional amendment.

All such recent proposals have been rejected, including one offered to the electorate in 1974.

The $400 salary is adequate during the months the Legislature is not in session, Harris said.

"However, it is obviously not enough to pay for all expenses incurred by the individual legislator during the four to five months that the Legislature is in session

"In many cases, a legislator must maintain two residences, give up his source of income, leave his family at home and incur many expenses traveling back and forth to his district in order to keep in touch with the views of his constituents.

"These expenses, without adequate reimbursement, place an unfair burden on our representatives and serve as a deterrent to the average citizen who would like to serve his state."

The only travel expense which a senator receives while the Legislature is in session is one round-trip home.

Voters, Harris said, should understand that "an adequate salary is necessary to attract and retain effective representatives."

State, FHA Sign Conflict Is Expected

By The Associated Press

The Legislature's Public Works Committee Wednesday set the stage for another clash between the State of Nebraska and the Federal Highway Administration.

Although the members of the committee voted to send a bill to the floor which would require the removal of most billboards within sight of an interstate or primary highway, the committee members said they would ask the Legislature to kill the bill.

The Federal Highway Administration has authority to cut off 10% of Nebraska's highway funds if the Unicameral does not pass the law.

Congress passed a law which became effective this year which forces states to ban signs visible along interstate and primary highways The law does not apply to signs in urban areas.

Current Nebraska law bans only those billboards within 660 feet of major highways.

The committee members said they did not want to be responsible for losing federal highway money They said they wanted the entire Legislature to take the responsibility and kill the bill.

Sen John Cavanaugh of Omaha said he did not think the federal government would really cut off funds.

The bill, LB213, introduced by Douglas Bereuter of Utica, would prevent the construction of new signs.

It would also call for the removal of existing signs when funds were made available.

Labor Unit OKs State Payment Of Hansen Claim

The Legislature's Labor Committee Wednesday recommended payment of $176,000 to Mrs Sandra Hansen of Fremont for injuries suffered when her husband, an inmate at the Nebraska Penal Complex, shot her

The money would pay a judgment by the Dodge County District Court in a lawsuit filed against the state.

The payment was included in a bill authorizing miscellaneous claims against the state. The committee sent the bill, LB557, to the floor of the legislature.

Mrs. Hansen was shot by her husband, Jerry, in June 1973. Hansen was in Fremont to speak at an Alcoholics Anonymous meeting and received permission to visit his wife.

The committee also approved including payment of $195,535 to Nebraska Press Advertising Services, Inc., for publication of constitutional amendments before the 1974 primary and general elections.

Secretary of State Allen Beermann said the publication is required by state law, but payment must be authorized by the legislature.

POSTCARD

by Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — A kind of madness seizes crowds at times and, being mad as hatters ourselves, we all went down last week to see the Golden Hinde come bobbing through the Golden Gate.

Apparently so did everybody else in San Francisco. Traffic jammed up in side streets. There wasn't a prayer of getting waterfront parking. Cops were getting frantic — "stop" and "go" lights didn't mean a thing.

Everybody pushed relentlessly toward the Bay until their car came to a dead stop. Not being able to go forward or back, they leaned on the horn.

It was Jimmy Kilgallen (I think) who told me what the funeral of Rudolph Valentino was like.

Valentino — big dark Italian eye — starred in silent classics: "The Sheik." "Blood and Sand." "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse."

He died when he was 31. At the top of a career that made grown women droool like teenagers over a teenage guitar player.

It was 1926. Before the stock market crash. Bankers, bootblacks and bell hops were playing with stocks and getting rich — on paper.

It was the best of all possible times. Two cars in every garage. A chicken in every pot.

"The funeral was handled by Frank Campbell out at 81st and Madison," said Jimmy. (Was it Jimmy now? It was in Toots Shor's I remember that.)

"You never saw such a crowd! Women by the thousands were waiting along the route. Some of them crying. A lot of them wore black mourning."

It was the biggest show he'd ever seen in Manhattan in half a century with INS, the Hearst news wire.

Jimmy said: "When it was over, the funeral chapel press agent passed out silver disks to each reporter who covered the story.

Jimmy said: "It was a coffin marker. To nail on the coffin. On the front it had the reporter's name. And on the back it said: 'Good for one first-class funeral at Frank E. Campbell Funeral Chapel, Inc.' "

Once I called Campbell's when I was in New York. I wanted to know how many disks had been cashed in. But Campbell's is so big, so corporate, nobody there had heard the story.

Governor Reagan himself appointed me a commissioner of the Golden Hinde celebration. I have it in the office, stamped with the great golden seal of California.

I said to the cop: "I'm a commissioner, appointed by Governor Reagan."

He said: "Where have you been? The governor's name is Brown."

I showed him a deputy sheriff's star. I showed him a press card. He wasn't impressed.

From a hilltop we could see the bay. Puffing clouds of white canvas and nylon from sleek sailboats.

The Golden Hinde came slipping in majestically with all sails set. The Coast Guard and the sail boats formed an escort.

Next morning I read that the Golden Hinde was being criticized for not being an exact replica. A matter that will probably be argued with the same ferocity as the dissent over where Drake really landed in california.

Drake's Bay? San Francisco Bay? Or Bolinas.

Norma Young To Head Child Guidance Board

Norma Young was named president of the Child Guidance Center board at its annual meeting Wednesday night

She succeeds James Pollard

Other new officers are Beverly Routh, vice president, Nancy Ginger, secretary; and William Vannoy, treasurer.

Child Guidance Center has witnessed a 100% increase in staff size while increasing the numbers of persons served by 640% since its founding 25 years ago. Jerrold Aspengren, administrative director, said at the annual meeting.

Nearly 860 persons were served by the United Fund agency in 1974, he said.

The local agency is a shining light in national statistics concerning agency cost for treating families. Aspengren said. The national average is $356.58 per family, but Child Guidance's was about $250 last year. Aspengren predicted that cost would be reduced to $200 in 1975.

During the past year, Child Guidance has instituted several new programs including a parenting team to assist parents in child rearing and a "neuro" team to assess and treat children or teenagers who exhibit signs of learning difficulties or behavioral problems that may stem from neurological problems, Aspengren said

In 1974, the center became an affiliate in a federal staffing grant with the Lincoln-Lancaster Mental Health Center and expanded its drop-in clinic activities

New board members are Mary Ann Erickson, Vannoy, Ken Stephan, Ron Brandt, Mrs. Ginger and Les Whipp.

Retiring members of the board are Jean Patoka and Gloria Peterson.

SPRING CAR CARE. . .

COLOR. . . Keeping Old Bessie Running

Older Cars Saving New Money

By Bill Kreifel

"You're not getting older — you're getting better," is not only a thoughtful remark from one mate to another as years go by, but a comment more people may be making as they enter their garage each morning to drive to work.

The object of their affection in this case is the shiny (or dull and rusted) old fliver that not only gets them where they're going, but saves them some money while doing it.

National reports indicate that many people are hanging on to their older autos — not only to avoid the expenditure, and related interest costs and depreciation involved in a new car purchase — but to save on taxes, insurance, and minor maintenance work as well.

Additionally, Orlan Pape, title supervisor for the Lancaster County Clerk's Office, says older vehicles seem to be continually more popular with buyers than their spanking new counterparts.

He notes that while no definitive records have been maintained to prove it, the number of titles issued on new cars is decreasing noticeably, while the number of titles for used autos has remained constant "or even increased a little."

A U.S. Department of Transportation study has shown that the most economical way to own a car is to keep it until you run it into the ground. And while some people take that advice literally — never spending a dime on repairs until the clunker finally collapses — most old car fanciers advocate the "ounce of prevention" approach to keep their set of wheels rolling.

Two such Lincolnites are Charles Shrader, 1308 So. 14th, and Leon Coatney, 385 So. 37th. Both drive older Jitneys, and both espouse their virtues.

Old Jitneys Old Can Be Beautiful

Coatney, supervisor of the city's garage, is a mechanic, but he notes that even those who aren't so inclined can perform a host of self-servicing which can appreciably cut their yearly outlay for transportation.

Without buying special tools to do the more major repair work — an expenditure which would also detract from the savings realized by simple, do-it-yourself automotive upkeep — Coatney and Shrader point out that most folks can trim material costs and eliminate labor expenses altogether by:

—Changing their own oil, oil filter, and anti-freeze.

—Cleaning and re-setting, or replacing totally, their sparkplugs.

—Changing their own carburetor air filter.

—Replacing bulbs in their taillights, parking lights, etc.

—Re-packing the wheel bearings and lubricating the vehicle themselves.

—Replacing thermostats; radiator and heater hoses; and on the more simplified engines, the fanbelts as well.

Coatney, who says he has never bought a new car, says during the first few years of ownership of a good used one (a three-year-old, say, with about 20,000 miles) the simple maintenance steps that most anyone can perform "will probably take care of everything it needs." And, if the routine is kept up, "you probably won't have too much major work needed" later on.

That opinion is bolstered by Shrader, a retired Lincoln fireman, who said he learned a lot about preventive maintenance during his 28 years with that department.

He has two older autos which are used regularly — a 1956 with some 180,000 miles to its credit, and a 1961 with about 150,000 — and neither, Shrader says, has needed any major repairs.

Besides doing his own tuneups and minor service work, Shrader believes that one rule he follows is perhaps the principle reason for the longevity of his vehicles.

"I change the oil every 2,000 miles or 90 days — whichever comes first — and I change the filter too. I can't see running clean oil through a dirty filter."

A check with several major Lincoln car parts and merchandise outlets also shows that automotive do-it-yourselfing is a popular pasttime in this area.

Some of the firms say that sales of tune-up kits, and other odds and ends of repair gear are constantly high, while other stores report a marked increase in consumer interest in paraphernalia in the last year or so.

Another indicator of the growing popularity of home auto work is the routine stocking of a wide variety of motor oils and engine additives in most large supermarkets and chain stores.

Besides the cash which Coatney and Shrader say can be pocketed by doing your own minor maintenance, an additional windfall for owners of older autos is realized through lower vehicle taxes and rates for certain types of insurance.

A spokesman for a major auto insurer notes that a vehicle's age bears directly on the rate its owner must pay for the comprehensive and collision portions of his insurance package.

He said the premium for that insurance — which pays for repairs on the insured's own auto — decreases steadily for some eight years, at which point it levels off and remains constant. He noted that on an eight-year-old car — all other things being equal — a person's comprehensive and collision premium would be 60% of what it would be for a brand new auto.

The spokesman additionally observed that when a car gets that old, it's normally owned free and clear (with no mortgage holder to protect) and people often drop their comprehensive and collision coverage — saving that former outlay altogether.

In the area of taxation, Lancaster County Assessor Fritz Meyer notes that the valuation of a car as used for taxing purposes decreases at the rate of 10% a year until a minimum assessed value of $35 is reached - remaining constant thereafter.

As an example, he said that taxes on a $3,000, 1975 auto with an assessed value of $890 would be $74.90. This compares to a vehicle — say 10 years old — with an assessed value of $35, and a tax of $2.95.

Charles Shrader, a fan of older autos, makes another of the minor adjustments that has kept his 1956 sedan going for 180,000 miles.

Women Enter Auto Brotherhood

By Joyce Wilson

In the beginning Man created the internal combustion engine.

And he gave it a sleek, shiny body, four tires and comfortable seats and called it a car.

And Man called it good. But Woman cursed its very nature and had as little as possible to do with it.

Until the nature of the world changed.

Woman decided to become her own woman. That meant she had to have her own wheels and, if she wanted them to last, she had to learn to take care of them.

So Woman began asking questions about her car's workings and enrolled in basic auto courses. Many Lincoln women have followed her lead.

They have discovered there are many things, not complicated once explained, they can do themselves to keep the old crate or the spiffy new machine on the road.

One of the first things they have learned is that a dumb question is a whole lot easier to handle than a dumb mistake.

Dumb Questions

Dumb questions is how Debby Allen learned about cars. Now Debby works in the parts department at McDonald Volkswagen and teaches an auto maintenance course for women at the YWCA.

She started her auto-related career at a Lincoln service station

Ms. Allen said she knew relatively little about cars when she needed a job in 1969 and was offered one at the station where she regularly had her car serviced.

But she had a subconscious idea that a service station "would be a neat place to work," she says, because her uncle used to own one.

She pumped gasoline and washed windshields and learned to do the more routine mechanical work on cars.

How did she know what to do? "I asked questions and questions and more questions," she said.

Other women were her biggest stumbling block, Ms. Allen said, not trusting her to work on their cars. Once, she said, she was alone at the station and a woman wanted a loose fan belt on her car tightened.

"I had to talk 15 minutes to convince her I knew how to do it," she said. "And that's a simple operation."

She also tells about being sent to change a man's tire in rush hour traffic

Emergency Procedures

"You can imagine the looks we got," she said.

It was while she was working at the station that she began teaching the auto maintenance course. One of her regular customers recommended her for the position in 1972.

The class was offered once a year then. Last year it was packed for five sessions, Ms. Allen said.

For 1½ hours one night a week for six weeks, Ms. Allen demonstrates how to change a tire, how to use jumper cables, how a car's cooling, exhaust, and electrical systems work and where they are. She shows her classes a bad spark plug and explains why it is bad, tells them what noises in various parts of the car might mean, and puts a car up on a hoist to point out tie rods, shock absorbers, ball joints and other parts underneath.

Through it all, she stresses safety. She thinks her students are ready for a more advanced mechanics course when they're done.

Her students run the gamut from late teens to the 60s, from high school and college students to working women and housewives to retired women. She said she even had two men in one class.

A similar cross section of students takes the powder puff mechanics course offered through the Women's Studies division of the Southeast Technical Community College Lincoln campus.

Jerry Kohl, auto mechanics teacher at East High School, has taught the 8-week evening course for 10 or 12 years.

It is a general course covering "the care and feeding of a car," he said. "The majority of women who take this course are not planning to fix their own cars," he said. "They take it mainly to learn how their cars work, and how to communicate with their mechanics."

He shows his students some emergency procedures, such as how to change a tire, how to use jumper cables and how to keep a car from overheating.

Some of them move on to other courses to learn how to do more things themselves.

The YWCA course is being offered again this spring with the first class starting April 3. The SCC's spring powder puff mechanics course starts March 31, and other SCC auto courses also are available.

But a woman doesn't have to go to school to learn how to take care of her car.

She can have her husband or service station attendant show her how to make routine maintenance checks and there are always library books and magazine articles.

One of the simplest and most important things a person who drives primarily in a city can do to prolong the life of his car is to take it out on the road.

Driving a car at highway speed for 10 to 20 miles once a month causes water in the oil to evaporate.

Water gets in the oil as a byproduct of the internal combustion engine. One gallon of gas burned under ideal conditions produces about nine pounds of water. Mixed with the oil it forms a sludge that, in time, will seriously damage a car's engine).

Another important thing, stresses John Pittman, owner of Pittman's Texaco, 48th and Vine Sts., is to listen to the engine and have any new noises checked.

Admitting self-interest, he recommended having a regular service station and a regular maintenance schedule.

Shopper's Guide, the 1974 U.S. Agriculture Dept. yearbook recommends a monthly check of:

- All lights (for burned out bulbs).
- Oil level in crankcase.
- Transmission fluid.
- Battery electrolyte condition, water level and cleanliness of terminals.
- Brake pedal to be sure of firmness and that the pedal isn't too close to the floor.
- Level of brake fluid in master cylinder.
- Windshield washer fluid level and condition of wipers.
- Water level in radiator (only when the car is cold; otherwise you could be scalded.)
- Fluid level in power steering.
- Air filter cleanliness.
- Condition and strength of coolant.
- Condition of tires, including tread depth, any signs of uneven wear and air pressure.
- Condition of hoses and belts.

It took Pittman about 20 minutes to make most of those checks.

Checking lights is self-explanatory. A service station attendant can demonstrate how to check oil level, transmission fluid, battery, windshield washer fluid, radiator, power steering fluid and air filter.

If a battery terminal has a deposit on it, a paste of baking soda and water will neutralize it. Leave it on about an hour, then wash it off with water.

Check hoses for flexibility and cracks. Check belts for tears or cracks. Pittman said a car with a broken generator or alternator belt can be driven about 50 miles on battery power on a cool day. The car may overheat in summer and at night the lights will reduce mileage.

It all goes back to dumb questions. Ask. Watch. And ask again.

Then practice on your husband's or brother's car, preferably not your own.

Older Cars Saving New Money

By Bill Kreifel

"You're not getting older — you're getting better," is not only a thoughtful remark from one mate to another as years go by, but a comment more people may be making as they enter their garage each morning to drive to work.

The object of their affection in this case is the shiny (or dull and rusted) old fliver that not only gets them where they're going, but saves them some money while doing it.

National reports indicate that many people are hanging on to their older autos — not only to avoid the expenditure, and related interest costs and depreciation involved in a new car purchase — but to save on taxes, insurance, and minor maintenance work as well.

Additionally, Orlan Pape, title supervisor for the Lancaster County Clerk's Office, says older vehicles seem to be continually more popular with buyers than their spanking new counterparts.

He notes that while no definitive records have been maintained to prove it, the number of titles issued on new cars is decreasing noticeably, while the number of titles for used autos has remained constant "or even increased a little."

A U.S. Department of Transportation study has shown that the most economical way to own a car is to keep it until you run it into the ground. And while some people take that advice literally — never spending a dime on repairs until the clunker finally collapses — most old car fanciers advocate the "ounce of prevention" approach to keep their set of wheels rolling.

Two such Lincolnites are Charles Shrader, 1308 So. 14th, and Leon Coatney, 385 So. 37th. Both drive older Jitneys, and both espouse their virtues.

Old Jitneys

Coatney, supervisor of the city's garage, is a mechanic, but he notes that even those who aren't so inclined can perform a host of self-servicing which can appreciably cut their yearly outlay for transportation.

Without buying special tools to do the more major repair work — an expenditure which would also detract from the savings realized by simple, do-it-yourself automotive upkeep — Coatney and Shrader point out that most folks can trim material costs and eliminate labor expenses altogether by:

—Changing their own oil, oil filter, and anti-freeze.

—Cleaning and re-setting, or replacing totally, their sparkplugs.

—Changing their own carburetor air filter.

—Replacing bulbs in their taillights, parking lights, etc.

—Re-packing the wheel bearings and lubricating the vehicle themselves.

—Replacing thermostats; radiator and heater hoses; and on the more simplified engines, the fanbelts as well.

Coatney, who says he has never bought a new car, says during the first few years of ownership of a good used one (a three-year-old, say, with about 20,000 miles) the simple maintenance steps that most anyone can perform "will probably take care of everything it needs." And, if the routine is kept up, "you probably won't have too much major work needed" later on.

That opinion is bolstered by Shrader, a retired Lincoln fireman, who said he learned a lot about preventive maintenance during his 28 years with that department.

He has two older autos which are used regularly — a 1956 with some 180,000 miles to its credit, and a 1961 with about 150,000 — and neither, Shrader says, has needed any major repairs.

Besides doing his own tuneups and minor service work, Shrader believes that one rule he follows is perhaps the principle reason for the longevity of his vehicles.

"I change the oil every 2,000 miles or 90 days — whichever comes first — and I change the filter too. I can't see running clean oil through a dirty filter."

A check with several major Lincoln car parts and merchandise outlets also shows that automotive do-it-yourselfing is a popular pasttime in this area.

Some of the firms say that sales of tune-up kits, and other odds and ends of repair gear are constantly high, while other stores report a marked increase in consumer interest in paraphernalia in the last year or so.

Another indicator of the growing popularity of home auto work is the routine stocking of a wide variety of motor oils and engine additives in most large supermarkets and chain stores.

Besides the cash which Coatney and Shrader say can be pocketed by doing your own minor maintenance, an additional windfall for owners of older autos is realized through lower vehicle taxes and rates for certain types of insurance.

A spokesman for a major auto insurer notes that a vehicle's age bears directly on the rate its owner must pay for the comprehensive and collision portions of his insurance package.

He said the premium for that insurance — which pays for repairs on the insured's own auto — decreases steadily for some eight years, at which point it levels off and remains constant. He noted that on an eight-year-old car — all other things being equal — a person's comprehensive and collision premium would be 60% of what it would be for a brand new auto.

Picking Peachy Mechanic Isn't All Guesswork

By Bart Becker

It's a familiar fantasy when the family surrey develops a squeak, squawk or emphysema of the carburetor.

You don't know a mechanic in town because you've been filling the tank at a 2¢-a-gallon-cheaper place that has to go out of its way to even change the air in your tires.

So you brace for the worst, expecting a guy who is the composite of every gasoline alley grease monkey that ever lashed together a V-8 with baling wire. You can see him as he scratches at the back of his neck with an oily wrench and solemnly pronounces the diagnosis.

"Jeez, buddy, that doesn't sound too good does it? Well, listen, leave the key in it and I'll see if I can get to it this afternoon."

Clutching at your billfold you look on the sunny side. At least now you'll have a mechanic, pretty soon he'll know your name and you'll know his, your car will run like a charm and everything will be just peachy, right?

Something tells you otherwise. For all you know he'll give you an alias, your car will develop more rattles than a charm bracelet and come peach picking time, you'll still be stuck with the crate.

Well, it doesn't have to be that way. Even if, by choice or chance, you don't have any insight into the mysteries of the internal combustion engine, you can demand and get good mechanics' service on your car.

Mechanics say the best way is simply for the customer to be bold, not bashful, about insisting the job is done satisfactorily. Several Lincoln mechanics were in general agreement that any mechanic should guarantee his work.

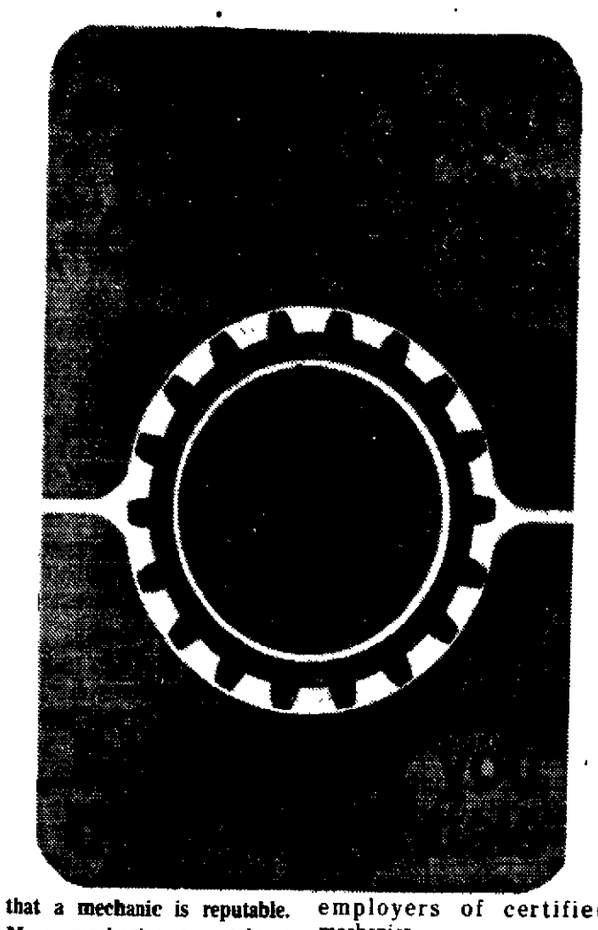
The customer should be satisfied with the repair job, within reason, they said. If the mechanical problem doesn't seem corrected, they said, bring the car back for an explanation and more work, if necessary.

So there are no misunderstandings, Jack Armstrong, head of the auto mechanics department at the Milford campus of Southeast Community College, said customer and mechanic should decide beforehand on what work will be done at what cost.

Armstrong stressed any auto owner should ask for a detailed breakdown of the repair work to be done accompanied by a cost estimate And make sure of the result of the work. Some repairs are simply stop-gap measures to keep the old buggy running until a more complete overhaul can take place.

Armstrong said this is "probably the most improtant thing" in getting good service.

He said customers can keep their eyes open for another sign that a mechanic is reputable. Many mechanics now take a National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence certification test which covers knowledge of both auto and truck repair.



Through this this non-profit, independent organization, any mechanic in the country can volunteer for a series of tests on automotive diagnosis and repair. It a mechanic passes one of more of the tests, he is awarded a special certificate and can be identified by an orange and blue shoulder patch.

The Institute, headquartered at 1825 K Street N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006, publishes a directory of employers of certified mechanics.

Although mechanics are by no means required to pass any exams in order to go into business, Armstorong said most shops have picked up on the public relations value of the certification and prominently display the mechanics' certificates.

The final point all mechanics agreed on was that the customer, except in extreme emergency, should shop around, getting estimates from several shops rather than settling for the first one.

Car Cosmetology Adds Newness And Rejuvenates Owner's Pride

Auto cosmetology won't make your car sound better, but it may make you feel better about the way it runs.

How much the unproud owner spends to spiff the old clunker up depends upon what price tag he or she puts on feeling proud.

A standard, 10-year-old car, in reasonable shape considering age and 80,000 miles, would be worth about $300 . . . if a buyer could be found. It cost well over $1,000 to apply car cosmetics, Lincoln auto paint/fix-up experts indicate.

But cost could be as low as a few tens of dollars, too, if the car's owner isn't overly concerned about the refinished product and doesn't mind doing the work without benefit of professional help.

Dennis Adamek, assistant manager of Maaco auto painting at 2025 M St., says the average cost of taking small dents out of the car body and putting on a a new finish is $160. Adamek says that costs range from $54.95 to hundreds of dollars depending on how little or how much the owner wants done.

Do-it-them-selfers could do it for $50 and up, just for materials and spray painter rental, not including cost of curing "cancer" (rust and holes).

Spray painters are getting harder to rent with more and more rental agencies giving up on the fuss, muss and maintenance. At least one place, Taylor Rental Center still has units, however. That firm charges $11 per 24 hours for pumper and spray gun.

Cost of paint, excepting bargains and back-door deals, is about $45 for an average two-coat cover. Body putty and fiberglass add to the expense to take care of the rusty areas which have to be cut out and patched.

Elbow grease is free, but still, the cost of an at-home job can run from slightly below to roughly the same as a professional finish.

After the outside, comes the inside of the seasoned clunker.

Jim McVicker, owner of McVicker's Auto Trim & Tops, puts a price tag of $350-$400 on a mythical 10-year-old Chevy for a new inside to go with a refinished outside. That includes seats, door panels, headliner (fabric roof liner), armrests and carpeting. A vinyl top adds $70.

But McVicker says reupholstering the worn front seat could be as little as $15.

After outside and inside comes underneath.

If the car's wheel rims and hubcaps need replacing to make an owner feel better, the cost runs from $5 for just one wheel rim (not including labor) to several hundred dollars for all wheels, all duded up, in super custom style, Speedway Motors boss Bill Smith says.

Some owners even chrome the engine, paint the underbody of the car, add chrome exhausts and special mirrors.

After all that, the car may still go putt-putt and bang-bang, but it'll do it in style.

To make the car go as nice as it looks would cost — well, that may be another several hundred dollar story.

Low-Cost, Computer Tune-Up Stations Tested in California

San Francisco (UPI) — William E. Allen, auto industry entrepreneur, thinks the American motorist is ready for low-cost, quick-service tune-up stations where a computer analyzes engine performance and provides a simple printout for the customer.

Allen, formerly a marketing executive for Ford and Kaiser Jeep, has had two "Test & Tune" stations operating for the past six months in suburbs east of San Francisco.

"We are up to the break-even point," says Allen, who plans to open several more pilot stations and then franchise his system nationwide.

Allen said he got into the automotive testing field "because the world fuel situation will always be critical, and because exhaust pollution is going to be everyone's concern if they possess an auto."

Fuel experts say if every motorist in the country got a regular tune-up twice a year, it would save 3.8 billion gallons of gasoline.

What keeps them from it, Allen believes, is the cost, and the fact the average motorist has to rely on someone else to tell him what is wrong with his car — and this often results in more expense.

Autosense requires the attendant to attach a number of electronic leads to parts of the engine.

The consumer gets the test report. Minor adjustments can be made at Test & Tune stations, but any major repair indicated must be taken to another garage. The motorist can come back for a re-check on his engine after the work is done.

The testing takes about 10 minutes. The standard tune-up and test is priced from $32.95 for a four-cylinder car to $49.95 for an eight-cylinder engine depending on the car model.

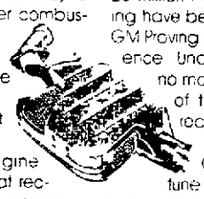
New Catalytic Converter—designed for long life.



This pea full of platinum palladium coated beads provides a new way to reduce most emissions—after combustion in the exhaust

It does a more effective job -and it eliminates some of the gas robbing combustion stage controls of the past

If unleaded gas is used exclusively and normal engine maintenance is performed at recommended intervals there is no reason why the catalytic converter should not last the life of the car In all over 25 million miles of developmental testing have been completed both at the GM Proving Ground and in field experience Under normal circumstances no maintenance or replacement of the catalytic converter is recommended

Best of all it allowed Oldsmobile engineers to retune the engines to run smoother require less periodic maintenance—and gives better MPG than last year

Picking Peachy Mechanic Isn't All Guesswork

By Bart Becker

It's a familiar fantasy when the family surrey develops a squeak, squawk or emphysema of the carburetor.

You don't know a mechanic in town because you've been filling the tank at a 2¢-a-gallon-cheaper place that has to go out of its way to even change the air in your tires.

So you brace for the worst, expecting a guy who is the composite of every gasoline alley grease monkey that ever lashed together a V-8 with baling wire. You can see him as he scratches at the back of his neck with an oily wrench and solemnly pronounces the diagnosis.

"Jeez, buddy, that doesn't sound too good does it? Well, listen, leave the key in it and I'll see if I can get to it this afternoon."

Clutching at your billfold you look on the sunny side. At least now you'll have a mechanic, pretty soon he'll know your name and you'll know his, your car will run like a charm and everything will be just peachy, right?

Something tells you otherwise. For all you know he'll give you an alias, your car will develop more rattles than a charm bracelet and come peach picking time, you'll still be stuck with the crate.

Well, it doesn't have to be that way. Even if, by choice or chance, you don't have any insight into the mysteries of the internal combustion engine, you can demand and get good mechanics' service on your car.

Mechanics say the best way is simply for the customer to be bold, not bashful, about insisting the job is done satisfactorily. Several Lincoln mechanics were in general agreement that any mechanic should guarantee his work.

The customer should be satisfied with the repair job, within reason, they said. If the mechanical problem doesn't seem corrected, they said, bring the car back for an explanation and more work, if necessary.

So there are no misunderstandings, Jack Armstrong, head of the auto mechanics department at the Milford campus of Southeast Community College, said customer and mechanic should decide beforehand on what work will be done at what cost.

Armstrong stressed any auto owner should ask for a detailed breakdown of the repair work to be done accompanied by a cost estimate. And make sure of the result of the work. Some repairs are simply stop-gap measures to keep the old buggy running until a more complete overhaul can take place.

Armstrong said this is "probably the most improtant thing" in getting good service.

He said custoners can keep their eyes open for another sign that a mechanic is reputable. Many mechanics now take a National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence certification test which covers knowledge of both auto and truck repair.

Through this this non-profit, independent organization, any mechanic in the country can volunteer for a series of tests on automotive diagnosis and repair. It a mechanic passes one of more of the tests, he is awarded a special certificate and can be identified by an orange and blue shoulder patch.

The Institute, headquartered at 1825 K Street N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006, publishes a directory of employers of certified mechanics.

Although mechanics are by no means required to pass any exams in order to go into business, Armstorong said most shops have picked up on the public relations value of the certification and prominently display the mechanics' certificates.

The final point all mechanics agreed on was that the customer, except in extreme emergency, should shop around, getting estimates from several shops rather than settling for the first one.

Car Cosmetology Adds Newness And Rejuvenates Owner's Pride

Auto cosmetology won't make your car sound better, but it may make you feel better about the way it runs.

How much the unproud owner spends to spiff the old clunker up depends upon what price tag he or she puts on feeling proud.

A standard, 10-year-old car, in reasonable shape considering age and 80,000 miles, would be worth about $300 . . . if a buyer could be found. It cost well over $1,000 to apply car cosmetics, Lincoln auto paint/fix-up experts indicate.

But cost could be as low as a few tens of dollars, too, if the car's owner isn't overly concerned about the refinished product and doesn't mind doing the work without benefit of professional help.

Dennis Adamek, assistant manager of Maaco auto painting at 2025 M St., says the average cost of taking small dents out of the car body and putting on a a new finish is $160. Adamek says that costs range from $54.95 to hundreds of dollars depending on how little or how much the owner wants done.

Do-it-them-selfers could do it for $50 and up, just for materials and spray painter rental, not including cost of curing "cancer" (rust and holes).

Spray painters are getting harder to rent with more and more rental agencies giving up on the fuss, muss and maintenance. At least one place, Taylor Rental Center still has units, however. That firm charges $11 per 24 hours for pumper and spray gun.

Cost of paint, excepting bargains and back-door deals, is about $45 for an average two-coat cover. Body putty and fiberglass add to the expense to take care of the rusty areas which have to be cut out and patched.

Elbow grease is free, but still, the cost of an at-home job can run from slightly below to roughly the same as a professional finish.

After the outside, comes the inside of the seasoned clunker.

Jim McVicker, owner of McVicker's Auto Trim & Tops, puts a price tag of $350-$400 on a mythical 10-year-old Chevy for a new inside to go with a refinished outside. That includes seats, door panels, headliner (fabric roof liner), armrests and carpeting. A vinyl top adds $70.

But McVicker says reupholstering the worn front seat could be as little as $15.

After outside and inside comes underneath.

If the car's wheel rims and hubcaps need replacing to make an owner feel better, the cost runs from $5 for just one wheel rim (not including labor) to several hundred dollars for all wheels, all duded up, in super custom style, Speedway Motors boss Bill Smith says.

Some owners even chrome the engine, paint the underbody of the car, add chrome exhausts and special mirrors.

After all that, the car may still go putt-putt and bang-bang, but it'll do it in style.

To make the car go as nice as it looks would cost — well, that may be another several hundred dollar story.

Maintenance-Free Auto Nearer, But Steps Can Up New Car Life

By H. L. Hoffmaster

The dream of Detroit engineers and drivers — a maintenance-free automobile — is not around the curve, it's miles down the road.

But 1975 cars are bringing the day closer when Americans may need to have their autos serviced only once or twice during the vehicle's lifetime.

Rave maintenance notices have been given 1975 models by manufacturers, however Lincoln car dealers and service managers are counseling their customers to still pay attention to oil changes, lubrication, spark plugs and perhaps ignore the manufacturers' service advice.

Most new cars are rated for many thousands of miles more between oil and filter change than 1974 version recommendatijons, but service managers tell their customers to stick with a 2,000 to 3,000 mile schedule.

The reason is that the 5,000 to 10,000 mile claims (before changing oil and filter) are based on ideal driving habits and conditions.

If customers were to go by company reports, here are some 1975 oil change schedules compared with 1974:

Ford — 6,000 v 4,000
Chevrolet — 7,500 v 6,000
Plymouth — 6,000 v 4,000
Mercury — 10,000 v 6,000
American Motors — 5,000 (no change over previous models).
Subaru — 3,000 (no change over previous models).
Volkswagon — 5,000 v 3,000.

But dealers and service managers argue against customers following those manufacturer's listings.

Jerry Greiner, service manager of Gotfredson's Chrysler-Plymouth tells people to do what he does for his car: change oil and filter every 2,000 miles.

John Hall, assistant sales manager of Meginnis Ford says the same thing as do Rog Stehlik, service manager of DuTeau Chevrolet; and John Dean, president of Dean Bros. Lincoln/Mercury.

Stretching

Stretching the time between oil and filter changes is tempting because the cost of the change has increased slightly.

Owners can shop around and wait for the bargains, but the standard cost of oil and filter change ranges from about $10 to $14 at auto dealer service centers. That's up about $1 from last year.

Dealers do recommend that owners change filters along with oil and predict longer engine life if their advice is followed.

It may be a maintenance nuisance to stock with the old schedule and ignore the bright promises, but they say it pays off with less repair and longer running engines.

Maintenance gains are in points, spark plugs and lubrication.

Dean says Mercury spark plugs are lasting 15,000 miles as opposed to 12,000 in previous years. Ford's record, according to Hall, is 24,000 v 12,000. Chevy has also doubled from 12,000 to 24,000 miles per set of plugs, Stehlik says. Plymouth cars should get 18,000 before plugs need to be changed, Greiner reports. That's up from 15,000 miles in 1974. Volkswagon's are at 15,000 from 10,000 miles, operations manager Chuck Gibson says.

Life Expectancy

The increases in life expectancy of spark plugs has not been matched by increased costs for changing them.

Standard rates for changing plugs on standard full-size American cars still runs about $35 (parts and labor) on V-8 engines. There is more mileage for about the same cost.

To make another point about lower maintenance, on most '75 models you don't need points — most models have electronic ignitions. So instead of changing points every 12,000 miles, owners of most new cars can ignore a several dollar problem forever.

American Motors cars' service schedules haven't changed, service manager Paul Eiland says. Oil and filter change is still at 5,000 miles in factory literature and 15,000 miles is listed as spark plug life.

Dealers and service managers are reporting nice hikes in gas mileage for 1975 models.

A full-size Mercury, Dean says, has gone from 13-14 miles per gallon to 15-16 this year. Rog Stehlik of DuTeau says Chevrolets are about 15% better in gasoline consumption, at around 18 miles a gallon. Gotfredson's Greiner sees miles a gallon at a bit over 20 this year, up from the 17-18 range.

Dean said there is some talk in the industry of going back to less expensive tires on some less expensive models and that will mean poorer mileage.

How close is the industry to a maintenance-free engine?

"Not even close," Hall says.

Dean says that without maintenance, a car owner might be lucky to go two years or 30,000 miles, but that the car would suffer and so would the owner with ultimate repair bills.

With maintenance and luck, the new engines can go 80,000-90,000 miles, Hall says.

Instead of miracles in maintenance, Dean talks of "a little better mileage and a little less maintenance."

Manufacturers are forecasting some healthy dollar savings however. George F. Butts, vice president of development for Chrysler, predicted an average $265 a year savings for 1975 models over 1974 and Chevrolet has been advertising annual savings of over $300 in fuel consumption and maintenance.

Even if only half true, those figures indicate some easing of the car operating cost crunch, which has now risen to an average 24¢ a mile, according to a survey conducted for Hertz Car Leasing.

Changing Times

Fisher Body ranks today among the three largest of General Motors domestic divisions, with 25 installations employing some 78,000 people in seven states.

The Fisher Body story began in a carriage-making shop in a small community (Norwalk, Ohio) where seven Fisher brothers learned a lot of what they learned from their daddy, a blacksmith.

In 1935, Fisher Body introduced the one-piece seamless steel roof, later known as the unisteel turret top.

Improvement followed improvement until now Fisher Body has four types of plants — metal fabricating, hardware, trim fabricating and assembly

LET YOUR FREE SPIRIT BE YOUR GUIDE.

Chances are, you'll find yourself at the Buick/Opel display.

The Buick/Opel exhibit offers you one of the broadest displays of cars in the industry And it offers you the opportunity to express yourself as never before To exercise your choices To peruse your alternatives To contemplate your decisions In short it represents an opportunity for you to be your own free spirit, in your own special way

SKYHAWK. The smallest Buick in 60 years. And the sportiest ever, obviously.

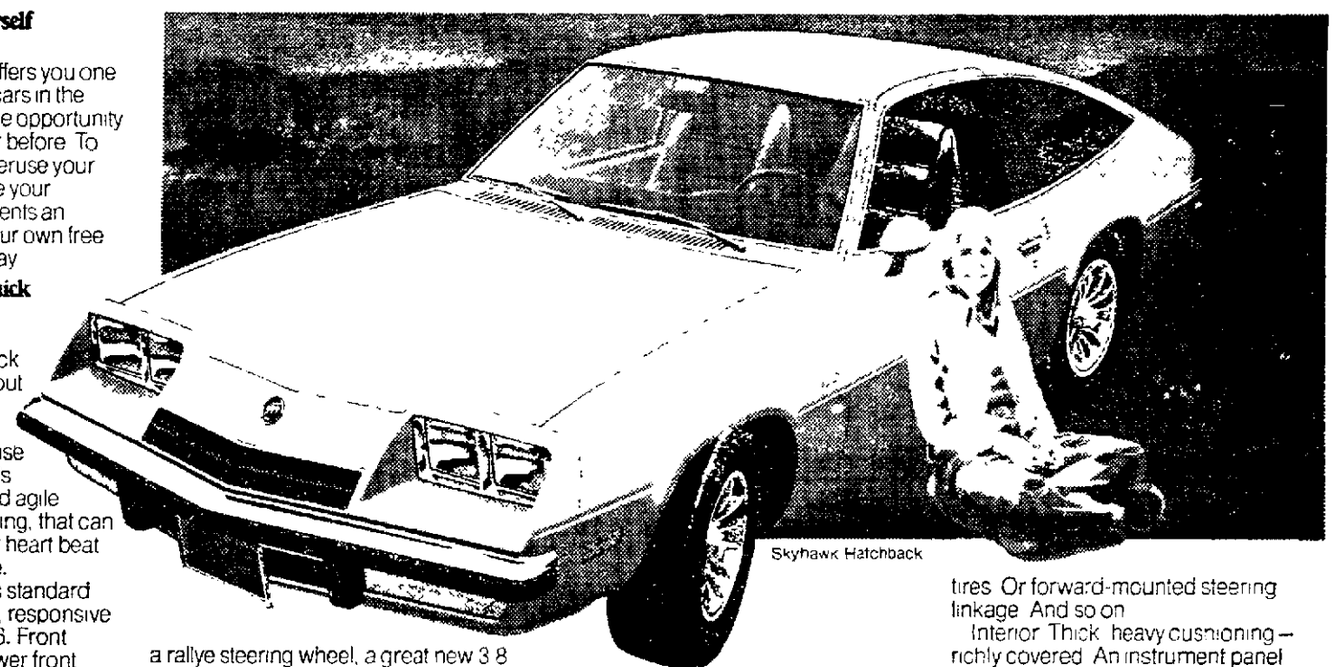
To tell the truth, we at Buick just can't help chortling about the Skyhawk Not just because it s something of a departure for us But because it's so good at being what it's supposed to be A small and agile little car, rakishly good looking, that can be practical and make your heart beat faster both at the same time.

Naturally, Skyhawk offers standard features dedicated to quick, responsive movement. Buick s new V-6. Front and rear stabilizer bars Power front disc brakes GM-Specification steel-belted radial-ply tires A 4-speed manual transmission

All the right gauges are there, too. Including a standard tachometer.

But let s not get into any lengthy lists

Instead let's focus on the totality A Buick with a 97-inch wheelbase that s reasonably priced, economical to operate, fun to drive, and so neat-looking it can turn the heads of at least two generations Maybe three.



Skyhawk Hatchback

THE NEW BUICK V6. A six that we think even you V-8 fans will like.

It's time that we shook up your thinking a tad Because, if you re like a lot of people, you think of a six as some thing just to save money with Which is simply no longer true because of Buick s new V-6 Something altogether different from a straight-six.

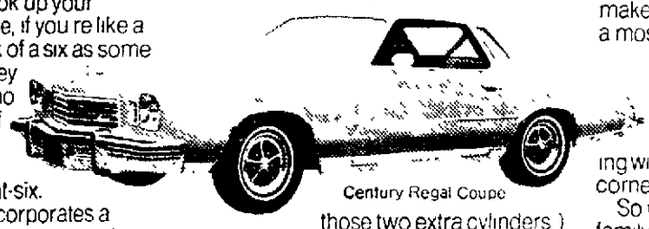
The "vee ' design incorporates a shorter crankshaft The piston stroke is shorter The engine weighs less than Buick s straight six And the horsepower is greater

All in all, Buick s V-6 shares many of the design concepts of a Buick V-8, but with generally greater fuel economy

One thing s for sure This engine is going to change the way a lot of people feel about six-cylinder engines.

SKYLARK S/R. Skylark is back, with V-6 power, a European touring car-like interior, and a sporty new look. It joins other Apollo models as sort of the Executive's Economy Car.

What better way to bring back the Skylark name than with bucket seats (the passenger's reclines), GM-Specification steel-belted radial-ply tires, sporty cloth-and-vinyl upholstery,



Skylark S/R Hatchback

But even with the nifty things we ve done to it, Skylark S/R isn t any less frugal with a gallon of gas

And it's still reasonable in terms of price It s just that it also happens to be fun to drive ..most enjoyable to sit in .. and more interestingly appointed than a practical, economical car is supposed to be

CENTURY REGAL. One of America's most impressive mid-sized cars. Inside. Outside. Or under the hood.

You ve already had the word on Buick s V-6 How peppery it is How efficient It certainly won t hold Regal back (Of course, our 5 7 liter V-8 is available on Century if you insist on those two extra cylinders)

Century Regal Coupe

Standard equipment includes more than things like deep full-foam seats, carefully refined styling, GM-Specification steel-belted radial-ply tires, power steering, Full-Flo ventilation, a notchback front seat, and so on

Also standard is a nit-picky kind of attitude toward sound-deadening Riding smoothness And toward the quantity and quality of Century s appointments

That fussiness about things seen and unseen in the Century Regal is what distinguishes it as a Buick And what makes it — we said it before but it bears repeating — one of America s most impressive mid-sized cars

ELECTRA PARK AVENUE. Anytime you can buy a Buick this spectacular, well, you needn't wander off looking for something better.

The Electra Park Avenue is the most elegantly appointed Buick ever built

You get a hint from the special 'halo' vinyl top that something special is going on here But we d have to say that the real story is on the inside (as it really should be in any luxury car worthy of the title)

In front you have individual easy-chair seating for both driver and front passenger And all the seating s covered with velour, loosely draped like on fine furniture and very soft Overhead, more velour — just as soft and just as rich looking Even the extra large console is covered with velour

The carpeting is of the shag variety Not so unusual in a fine home but special indeed in an automobile

Then there are the little touches. Like the impeccably designed

Electra Park Avenue 4-door Hardtop

instrument panel The power windows The super accurate quartz-crystal digital clock

Big touches Little touches They all make the Electra Park Avenue a most remarkable automobile

LeSABRE. It liberates the American family car from a position of Mr. Ordinary.

That s the nice thing about dealing with Buick You don t find a lot of corner cutting creeping into the scene

So when you finally decide that the family car is going to be a LeSabre the rewards are visible and immediate.

Styling There s most decidedly nothing down home about it LeSabre

LeSabre Sport Coupe

is a richly designed, beautifully turned-out automobile Well, look at it

Performance The 5 7 liter V-8 has High-Energy Ignition and several other refinements that help increase operating performance (More on that a little later)

The suspension is the kind that has given Buick its reputation for smoothness

And let s not forget standard GM-Specification steel belted radial ply tires Or forward-mounted steering linkage And so on

Interior Thick heavy cushioning — richly covered An instrument panel that s both elegant and convenient. Thick carpeting Quality appointments abound

Some family car

Riviera Sport Coupe

RIVIERA. It's hard to believe that anything this well-built and richly-appointed can be so much fun to drive.

Maintenance-Free Auto Nearer, But Steps Can Up New Car Life

By H. L. Hoffmaster

The dream of Detroit engineers and drivers — a maintenance-free automobile — is not around the curve, it's miles down the road.

But 1975 cars are bringing the day closer when Americans may need to have their autos serviced only once or twice during the vehicle's lifetime.

Rave maintenance notices have been given 1975 models by manufacturers, however Lincoln car dealers and service managers are counseling their customers to still pay attention to oil changes, lubrication, spark plugs and perhaps ignore the manufacturers' service advice.

Most new cars are rated for many thousands of miles more between oil and filter change than 1974 version recommendatijons, but service managers tell their customers to stick with a 2,000 to 3,000 mile schedule.

The reason is that the 5,000 to 10,000 mile claims (before changing oil and filter) are based on ideal driving habits and conditions.

If customers were to go by company reports, here are some 1975 oil change schedules compared with 1974:

Ford — 6,000 v 4,000
Chevrolet — 7,500 v 6,000
Plymouth — 6,000 v 4,000
Mercury — 10,000 v 6,000
American Motors — 5,000 (no change over previous models).
Subaru — 3,000 (no change over previous models).
Volkswagon — 5,000 v 3,000.

But dealers and service managers argue against customers following those manufacturer's listings.

Jerry Greiner, service manager of Gotfredson's Chrysler-Plymouth tells people to do what he does for his car: change oil and filter every 2,000 miles.

John Hall, assistant sales manager of Meginnis Ford says the same thing as do Rog Stehlik, service manager of DuTeau Chevrolet; and John Dean, president of Dean Bros. Lincoln/Mercury.

Stretching

Stretching the time between oil and filter changes is tempting because the cost of the change has increased slightly.

Owners can shop around and wait for the bargains, but the standard cost of oil and filter change ranges from about $10 to $14 at auto dealer service centers. That's up about $1 from last year.

Dealers do recommend that owners change filters along with oil and predict longer engine life if their advice is followed.

It may be a maintenance nuisance to stock with the old schedule and ignore the bright promises, but they say it pays off with less repair and longer running engines.

Maintenance gains are in points, spark plugs and lubrication.

Dean says Mercury spark plugs are lasting 15,000 miles as opposed to 12,000 in previous years. Ford's record, according to Hall, is 24,000 v 12,000. Chevy has also doubled from 12,000 to 24,000 miles per set of plugs, Stehlik says. Plymouth cars should get 18,000 before plugs need to be changed, Greiner reports. That's up from 15,000 miles in 1974. Volkswagon's are at 15,000 from 10,000 miles, operations manager Chuck Gibson says.

Life Expectancy

The increases in life expectancy of spark plugs has not been matched by increased costs for changing them.

Standard rates for changing plugs on standard full-size American cars still runs about $35 (parts and labor) on V-8 engines. There is more mileage for about the same cost.

To make another point about lower maintenance, on most '75 models you don't need points — most models have electronic ignitions. So instead of changing points every 12,000 miles, owners of most new cars can ignore a several dollar problem forever.

American Motors cars' service schedules haven't changed, service manager Paul Eiland says. Oil and filter change is still at 5,000 miles in factory literature and 15,000 miles is listed as spark plug life.

Dealers and service managers are reporting nice hikes in gas mileage for 1975 models.

A full-size Mercury, Dean says, has gone from 13-14 miles per gallon to 15-16 this year. Rog Stehlik of DuTeau says Chevrolets are about 15% better in gasoline consumption, at around 18 miles a gallon. Gotfredson's Greiner sees miles a gallon at a bit over 20 this year, up from the 17-18 range.

Dean said there is some talk in the industry of going back to less expensive tires on some less expensive models and that will mean poorer mileage.

How close is the industry to a maintenance-free engine?

"Not even close," Hall says.

Dean says that without maintenance, a car owner might be lucky to go two years or 30,000 miles, but that the car would suffer and so would the owner with ultimate repair bills.

With maintenance and luck, the new engines can go 80,000-90,000 miles, Hall says.

Instead of miracles in maintenance, Dean talks of "a little better mileage and a little less maintenance."

Manufacturers are forecasting some healthy dollar savings however. George F. Butts, vice president of development for Chrysler, predicted an average $265 a year savings for 1975 models over 1974 and Chevrolet has been advertising annual savings of over $300 in fuel consumption and maintenance.

Even if only half true, those figures indicate some easing of the car operating cost crunch, which has now risen to an average 24¢ a mile, according to a survey conducted for Hertz Car Leasing.

Changing Times

Fisher Body ranks today among the three largest of General Motors domestic divisions, with 25 installations employing some 78,000 people in seven states.

The Fisher Body story began in a carriage-making shop in a small community (Norwalk, Ohio) where seven Fisher brothers learned a lot of what they learned from their daddy, a blacksmith.

In 1935, Fisher Body introduced the one-piece seamless steel roof, later known as the unisteel turret top.

Improvement followed improvement until now Fisher Body has four types of plants — metal fabricating, hardware, trim fabricating and assembly.

LET YOUR FREE SPIRIT BE YOUR GUIDE.

Chances are, you'll find yourself at the Buick/Opel display.

The Buick/Opel exhibit offers you one of the broadest displays of cars in the industry. And it offers you the opportunity to express yourself as never before. To exercise your choices. To peruse your alternatives. To contemplate your decisions. In short, it represents an opportunity for you to be your own free spirit, in your own special way.

SKYHAWK. The smallest Buick in 60 years. And the sportiest ever, obviously.

To tell the truth, we at Buick just can't help chortling about the Skyhawk. Not just because it's something of a departure for us. But because it's so good at being what it's supposed to be. A small and agile little car, rakishly good looking, that can be practical and make your heart beat faster both at the same time.

Naturally, Skyhawk offers standard features dedicated to quick, responsive movement. Buick's new V-6. Front and rear stabilizer bars. Power front disc brakes. GM-Specification steel-belted radial-ply tires. A 4-speed manual transmission.

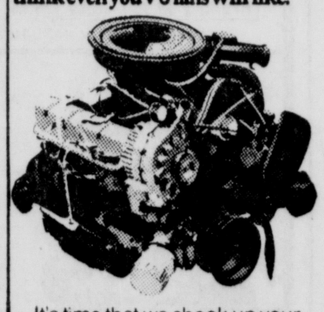
All the right gauges are there, too. Including a standard tachometer.

But let's not get into any lengthy lists.

Instead let's focus on the totality. A Buick with a 97-inch wheelbase that's reasonably priced, economical to operate, fun to drive, and so neat-looking it can turn the heads of at least two generations. Maybe three.

Skyhawk Hatchback

THE NEW BUICK V-6. A six that we think even you V-8 fans will like.



It's time that we shook up your thinking a tad. Because, if you're like a lot of people, you think of a six as something just to save money with. Which is simply no longer true because of Buick's new V-6. Something altogether different from a straight-six.

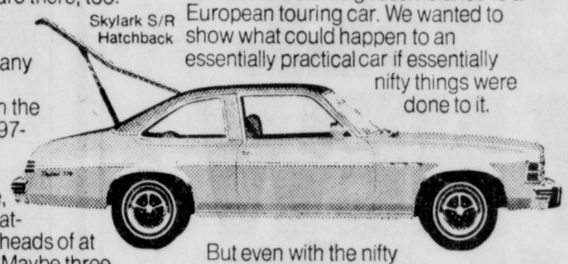
The "vee" design incorporates a shorter crankshaft. The piston stroke is shorter. The engine weighs less than Buick's straight-six. And the horsepower is greater.

All in all, Buick's V-6 shares many of the design concepts of a Buick V-8, but with generally greater fuel economy.

One thing's for sure. This engine is going to change the way a lot of people feel about six-cylinder engines.

SKYLARK S/R. Skylark is back, with V-6 power, a European touring car-like interior, and a sporty new look. It joins other Apollo models as sort of the Executive's Economy Car.

What better way to bring back the Skylark name than with bucket seats (the passenger's reclines), GM-Specification steel-belted radial-ply tires, sporty cloth-and-vinyl upholstery,



Skylark S/R Hatchback

But even with the nifty things we've done to it, Skylark S/R isn't any less frugal with a gallon of gas.

And it's still reasonable in terms of price. It's just that it also happens to be fun to drive... most enjoyable to sit in... and more interestingly appointed than a practical, economical car is supposed to be.

CENTURY REGAL. One of America's most impressive mid-sized cars. Inside. Outside. Or under the hood.

You've already had the word on Buick's V-6. How peppery it is. How efficient. It certainly won't hold Regal back. (Of course, our 5.7 liter V-8 is available on Century if you insist on those two extra cylinders.)

Century Regal Coupe

Standard equipment includes more than things like deep full-foam seats, carefully refined styling, GM-Specification steel-belted radial-ply tires, power steering, Full-Flo ventilation, a notchback front seat, and so on.

Also standard is a nit-picky kind of attitude toward sound-deadening. Riding smoothness. And toward the quantity and quality of Century's appointments.

That fussiness about things seen and unseen in the Century Regal is what distinguishes it as a Buick. And what makes it — we said it before but it bears repeating — one of America's most impressive mid-sized cars.

ELECTRA PARK AVENUE. Anytime you can buy a Buick this spectacular, well, you needn't wander off looking for something better.

The Electra Park Avenue is the most elegantly appointed Buick ever built.

You get a hint from the special "halo" vinyl top that something special is going on here. But we'd have to say that the real story is on the inside (as it really should be in any luxury car worthy of the title).

In front, you have individual easy-chair seating for both driver and front passenger. And all the seating is covered with velour, loosely draped like on fine furniture, and very soft. Overhead, more velour — just as soft and just as rich looking. Even the extra-large console is covered with velour.

The carpeting is of the shag variety. Not so unusual in a fine home, but special indeed in an automobile.

Then there are the little touches. Like the impeccably designed instrument panel. The power windows. The super-accurate quartz-crystal digital clock.

Electra Park Avenue 4-door Hardtop

Big touches. Little touches. They all make the Electra Park Avenue a most remarkable automobile.

LeSABRE. It liberates the American family car from a position of Mr. Ordinary.

That's the nice thing about dealing with Buick. You don't find a lot of corner-cutting creeping into the scene.

So when you finally decide that the family car is going to be a LeSabre, the rewards are visible and immediate.

Styling. There's most decidedly nothing down-home about it. LeSabre is a richly designed, beautifully turned-out automobile. Well, look at it.

LeSabre Sport Coupe

Performance. The 5.7 liter V-8 has High-Energy Ignition and several other refinements that help increase operating performance. (More on that a little later.)

The suspension is the kind that has given Buick its reputation for smoothness.

And let's not forget standard GM-Specification steel-belted radial-ply tires. Or forward-mounted steering linkage. And so on.

Interior. Thick, heavy cushioning — richly covered. An instrument panel that's both elegant and convenient. Thick carpeting. Quality appointments abound.

Some family car.

Riviera Sport Coupe

RIVIERA. It's hard to believe that anything this well-built and richly-appointed can be so much fun to drive.

To really understand Riviera, you've got to take your eyes off the square headlamps, ignore all the luxury for a moment, and fix your attention dead-center on the following:

A standard 7.5 liter V-8 engine with High-Energy Ignition and other performance-promoting refinements. GM-Specification steel-belted radial-ply tires. Front stabilizer bar. Four coil springs. Highly readable and informative instrumentation.

Then you have to drive Riviera.

Only then are you allowed to savor the classic styling. The standard power windows. The standard notchback seating. The standard tilt steering wheel. And all the other creature comforts Riviera indulges you with.

The point is that you appreciate Riviera for the very special kind of car it is. Luxurious. Even a little snobbish. But more than prepared to hold its own in motion.

GM President Pondering Auto Industry's Future

By Dan Jedlicka
(c) Chicago Sun-Times

Chicago — Elliott M. (Pete) Estes, at 59 the president of America's largest auto maker, General Motors, where he's worked his way up the ladder since joining the corporation 41 years ago, was worried.

Murphy was at the podium in Chicago at an auto show, talking about how GM will trim the sizes of its future cars, making them, he said, more suited "to an energy-short world."

Murphy, very much at ease but coming down hard on the need for more efficient autos, was saying, "We'll be taking weight out of our cars, trimming down the outside dimensions, keeping inside dimensions about as roomy, increasing efficiency — and therefore fuel economy — through our engines, transmissions, drivelines . . ."

He called it the most comprehensive program of its kind in the auto industry's history.

Estes knew what was behind the words, knew what the new generation of GM vehicles will look like, and suddenly he turned to a reporter and said, "It's a gamble, sure it is. It's a question mark as to whether people who've bought such large cars from us for years will go for the smaller ones."

Estes was a member of the C. F. "Boss" Kettering team that introduced the industry's first high-compression engine in 1947, who headed Pontiac and Chevrolet and now GM.

At 59 years of age, Pete Estes is facing a new automotive world with cars he's not quite sure will sell the way GM wants them to . . . a world where consumers must settle for less performance to get fuel economy . . . where cars won't be nearly as exciting . . . where E. M. Estes will deal with circumstances never encountered by any president in General Motors' history.

Estes, shaking his head, wasn't satisfied. "People might hold onto their large cars because they won't like what we'll be offering," he said.

"So many people," Estes said, "have bought large cars for years. You people in the news business keep criticizing us for building them. Well, we've built what the public wanted."

GM in fact did build a good number of small models in the 1960s — one of which was the Chevy Corvair, a car that was small, nimble and economical. It died because people just stopped buying it, not because Ralph Nader rapped it.

About a week later, Estes gave a speech in Detroit. He said: "There's one bill in Congress now that would require cars to get at least 28 miles to the gallon of gas. There's no question — we can build cars like that all right. Given current technology, they'd have to be small — considerably smaller than our current smallest models.

"The question is then: will people buy such cars — at least in significant enough numbers? If they don't, workers will lose jobs, stockholders will lose dividends, and the entire nation will lose the significant contribution to energy conservation that our industry is dedicated to making."

GM President Pondering Auto Industry's Future

By Dan Jedlicka
(c) Chicago Sun-Times

Chicago — Elliott M. (Pete) Estes, at 59 the president of America's largest auto maker, General Motors, where he's worked his way up the ladder since joining the corporation 41 years ago, was worried.

Murphy was at the podium in Chicago at an auto show, talking about how GM will trim the sizes of its future cars, making them, he said, more suited "to an energy-short world."

Murphy, very much at ease but coming down hard on the need for more efficient autos, was saying, "We'll be taking weight out of our cars, trimming down the outside dimensions, keeping inside dimensions about as roomy, increasing efficiency — and therefore fuel economy — through our engines, transmissions, drivelines . . ."

He called it the most comprehensive program of its kind in the auto industry's history.

Estes knew what was behind the words, knew what the new generation of GM vehicles will look like, and suddenly he turned to a reporter and said, "It's a gamble, sure it is. It's a question mark as to whether people who've bought such large cars from us for years will go for the smaller ones."

Estes was a member of the C. F. "Boss" Kettering team that introduced the industry's first high-compression engine in 1947, who headed Pontiac and Chevrolet and now GM.

At 59 years of age, Pete Estes is facing a new automotive world with cars he's not quite sure will sell the way GM wants them to . . . a world where consumers must settle for less performance to get fuel economy . . . where cars won't be nearly as exciting . . . where E. M. Estes will deal with circumstances never encountered by any president in General Motors' history.

Estes, shaking his head, wasn't satisfied. "People might hold onto their large cars because they won't like what we'll be offering," he said.

"So many people," Estes said, "have bought large cars for years. You people in the news business keep criticizing us for building them. Well, we've built what the public wanted."

GM in fact did build a good number of small models in the 1960s — one of which was the Chevy Corvair, a car that was small, nimble and economical. It died because people just stopped buying it, not because Ralph Nader rapped it.

About a week later, Estes gave a speech in Detroit. He said: "There's one bill in Congress now that would require cars to get at least 28 miles to the gallon of gas. There's no question — we can build cars like that all right. Given current technology, they'd have to be small — considerably smaller than our current smallest models.

"The question is then: will people buy such cars — at least in significant enough numbers? If they don't, workers will lose jobs, stockholders will lose dividends, and the entire nation will lose the significant contribution to energy conservation that our industry is dedicated to making."

Cool Radiator Could Prevent Temper Flare

By Harold Simmons

Spring is an ideal time for preventive maintenance on your car's cooling system if you want to improve your chances of avoiding the cost and frustration of standing by the road as your radiator spews steam.

Automotive experts say there are a number of steps car owners can take to help avoid traditional summer driving problems that don't involve an expensive trip to a garage and mechanic.

Repairs may still require a trip to the garage, but do-it-yourself maintenance can cut costs and perhaps help avoid a costly repair bill.

Overheated engines and steaming radiators, a common driving problem a few years ago are also becoming common these days for newer cars.

Mechanics and engineers list basically three reasons for the problem.

Newer engines are designed to run at higher temperatures. This adds a load on the radiator as well as the load from pollution control equipment and air conditioners.

The underhood air space available for cooling and the size of the radiator have been reduced in many cars.

Owner negligence.

It's this latter problem, mechanics say, that can be overcome by simple preventive maintenance.

One thing car owners should do is check belts. If they're glazed, cracked or not adjusted correctly they can affect cooling.

Hoses should also be checked for leaks. Fluid indicates an obvious leak. But white or rust-colored stains indicate possible leaks. And hoses that feel spongy or show tiny cracks should also be replaced to avoid potential problems.

Most cars now come with "permanent" antifreeze. But permanent doesn't mean forever. It only means it's good for both winter and summer.

The car owner's manual should be consulted for recommended periodic straining or changing of antifreeze.

Lot of Insects?

And the radiator itself should be periodically checked for leaks as well as sludge buildup that reduces cooling capacity.

If you live or travel in an area with a lot of insects such as Nebraska during certain times of the year an insect screen on your grill might be a good investment.

Insect buildup can restrict the flow of air through the radiator. Periodic checks and cleaning are recommended by most mechanics.

Water pumps should also be checked. This can be done by letting the engine idle for a minute or two, shutting it off and running your hand around the pump. If it comes away wet the pump is failing.

Air filters are another item to check while under the hood. They should always be clean enough so that the light from a household bulb will pass through.

Check Belt

If light doesn't shine through the standard paper air filters can often be blown clean with an air compressor. If that doesn't work, replace as the owners manual suggests.

Repairs to air conditioning systems usually require an expert. But there is still some work the individual can do.

Check the compressor drive belt. Replace it if it is glazed, worn out or cracked. Use a soft bristle brush to clean out bugs, leaves and other debris from the condenser core.

Check the sight glass on the receiver-dryer while the engine is at idle with the air conditioner set for maximum cooling. If it shows bubbles the system needs recharging.

You can recharge the air conditioning system yourself with inexpensive kits consisting of refrigerant, recharge hose, tap valve and leak detector.

Hot Air

You can also help keep your car cooler by checking for openings in the firewall that allow hot air into the passenger compartment. All holes should be filled with automotive caulking compound.

One automotive problem of a few years ago that has basically been eliminated today is the vapor lock that stalled cars and trucks.

There's still a version today, but it usually causes the engine to run rough rather than die.

Old time vapor locks were caused by heat turning gas to vapor in the fuel pump and blocking the flow of gas. A bucket of cold water cured the problem then. It has been basically eliminated today with drum back lines and elimination of pressure.

But with engines running at higher temperatures today mechanics said there is a similar problem of gas turning to vapor in the carburetor in excessive amounts that cause poor engine performance.

Convertible Dying Breed

Detroit (AP) — The American convertible, once the unmistakeable trademark of suave playboys, glamorous women and wild teen-agers, moves closer to the end of production this fall.

General Motors, the last of the U.S. auto makers to build the soft-top models, is halting convertible production at Chevrolet, Pontiac, Buick and Oldsmobile at the end of the current model year.

That will leave Cadillac as the sole American convertible producer in 1976 and at a price range that is sure to discourage all but the most affluent. The 1975 Cadillac Eldorado soft-top starts at $10,400. Foreign manufacturers, however, will still offer convertible models at lower prices.

Company spokesmen said Tuesday the GM divisions are halting production because convertible sales have been dropping steadily during the past 12 years.

"It's a dying breed," said a Chevrolet spokesman.

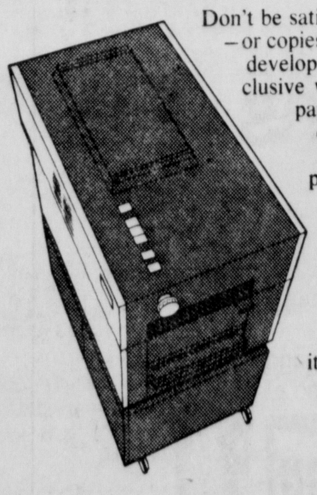
Improve copy quality with the new A.B. Dick Bond 901 Copier



Don't be satisfied with "gray" copies—or copies that feel gritty. A newly developed imaging material—exclusive with the Bond 901 plain paper copier—will give you copies so black, so clean, you'll think they were printed. This new imaging material is permanently installed and is replaced at no charge—for the life of the unit—it it ever deteriorates in quality. This eliminates the cost of one supply item that needs regular replacement with other copiers. Call for a demonstration.

Dayton TIRES

Don't Forget Where Car Meets Road

By John Gleason

"Probably the most important thing in tire maintenance is proper air pressure in the tire," said Don Fitzgerald, manager of the Goodyear Service Store at 19th and O Sts.

Fitzgerald says underinflation will cause rapid and/or uneven tread wear on the tire. "And if there's too much air in the tire it will break easier," he said.

He says the loss of six or seven pounds of pressure can make a real difference. "A person should check his tire pressure at least once a month and if they're on a trip they should check it once a day," Fitzgerald said.

A publication of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Company contends that just a couple of pounds of underinflation can reduce a tire's life by 10%. It also notes that if a radial supposed to carry 24 pounds of pressure is running at 16 pounds, the tire life reduction can be as much as 50 %.

Fitzgerald also cautions that temperature variances can change the tire pressure and is another reason for monthly pressure checks.

Fitzgerald says a number of troopers he knows in the Nebraska State Patrol check their tire pressure on a daily basis and get excellent mileage out of their tires.

There are three basic types of tires, according to Fitzgerald. The bias tire which is the most common, has the ply at an angle to the center of the tire to give strength to the sidewall and the tread, he said.

The second type is the bias belted tires, which give "more rigidity to the tread," he said. He added that the belts provide less squirm and motion in the treads, thus adding to the tire life.

"The third type is the radial body ply, instead of an angle the cords go around the bead," Fitzgerald said. Actually these body cords extend at a 90 degree angle to the center line of the tire.

If similar quality tires are compared, Fitzgerald said, radial tires will provide longer wear and also improve gas mileage.

Despite the added strength and longer life of radials motorists should be cautioned about one aspect of the tires brought to light in a recent federal report.

The use of steel-belted radials can be dangerous at speeds over 90 m.p.h.

The death of three police officers and a number of serious injuries to other officers from blowouts at high speeds prompted the study by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

The study indicated steel-belted tires are completely safe at normal driving speeds.

Roger Stehlik, service manager for DuTeau Chevrolet says tire rotation is important to tire life. He recommends rotation every 4,000 miles and says the owner's manual should recommend a rotation method.

The Consumer Tire Guide says tires shouldn't be replaced with a smaller size than the ones that came with the car. It also notes that tires of the same construction should be used in all four wheel positions with the exception of special types such as snow tires.

The underside of a car is dark with strange hangy-down things to those unfamiliar with mechanics, but poor wheel alignment, bad tire balance or defective shock absorbers could mean a life.

There are simple procedures that can be done without getting too dirty to check for these auto safety problems, according to Stehlik.

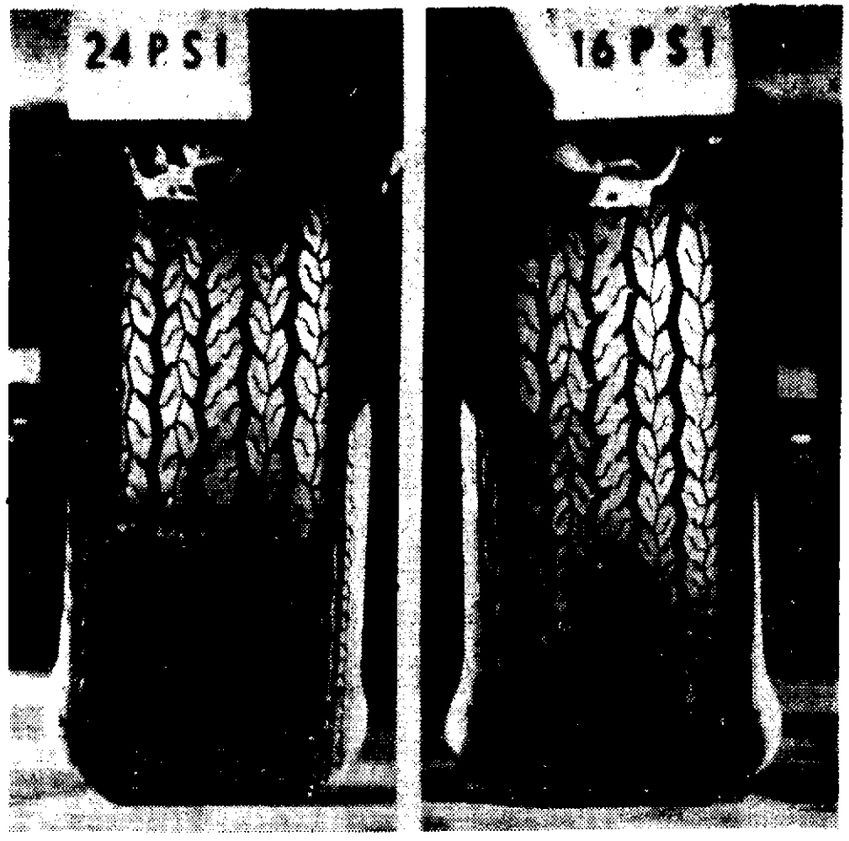
"When you hit the brakes, the car will dart from side to side if the front shocks are going bad," Stehlik says. He says the steering wheel will also shimmy when going over bumps.

Stehlik says a quick visual inspection can be performed by bouncing the car up and down. He says if it bounces once followed by a little bounce the shocks are okay. However if the car bounces a number of times the shocks are getting weak.

"Primarily the shocks are to hold the tires down on the road when you hit bumps," he said.

Bad alignment will cause the car to pull from one side or the other, and Stehlik says this can be checked for by looking to see if the tires are wearing unevenly.

Poorly balanced tires can be noticed when the car begins to shimmy or vibrates. Stehlik also notes that tire pressure should be regularly checked and may be the source of uneven wear or steering difficulties.



Although the tire on the right looks almost identical to its neighbor, Firestone warns that the tire may wear only half as long because, at 16 pounds pressure, it is underinflated by 33%. When radial tires were introduced on American automobiles, Firestone campaigned to educate car owners that the bulging sidewall is a built-in characteristic of the tire. Now Firestone is concerned that motorists may be "checking" radial tire pressure by sight instead of with a gauge and running on underinflated tires that will wear out faster and possibly fail.

Hand on the Wheel and Gas Pump

The driver of a car directly affects his auto's fuel economy, according to the Motor Vehicle Mfg's. Assn.

Each time the car accelerates, additional energy must be generated to overcome the inertia of the vehicle's mass, studies show.

The association offers these tips for drivers to improve fuel economy.

1. Avoid "jack rabbit" starts and "hotrod" driving. Fast starts can increase gas consumption by as much as 18%.

2. Avoid acceleration and braking action as possible.

3. Do not drive faster than 55 mph.

4. Maintain a steady speed as long as traffic conditions permit. Varying speed by five miles per hour in the 50-70 mph range can reduce fuel economy as much as 7%-9%.

5. Do not allow engine to idle for more than one minute at any time. More fuel is used by idling for one minute than by shutting the engine off and restarting.

The graph provided by the association shows the mileage is generally lowered by driving faster than 40 m.p.h., with peak fuel economy achieved between 30-40 m.p.h.

Avoiding Travelers Breakdown Blues

By Jana Miller

Experts agree that preparing a car for a long trip is probably the most important thing to do before a summer vacation on the road.

"There's nothing more frustrating," auto expert Gene Busboom says, "than having your car break down in Podunk Center, ending up in a grubby old motel room with a bunch of kids and a wife yacking at you and watching your vacation days go by and your bank roll decrease."

Frustrating, huh?

Ask the Lincoln man whose foreign sports car broke down in front of a combination one-pump service station, two-booth cafe and three-room motel in Maybell, Colo., miles from nowhere.

Busboom, an auto instructor at the Lincoln campus of Southeast Community College, is convinced that a successful vacation depends upon the performance of the car. And the performance of the car depends upon proper preparation.

Experts recommend a long list of things to do to a car a month or so before loading it with people and luggage for the long summer drive.

Early vacation planning should include a thorough car check by a familiar service station or a franchise auto dealer.

Max Smith, owner of a Lincoln APCO Service Station, said a thorough check at his station costs from $3 to $10, adding that any necessary work is charged according to the standard hourly rate.

At Max's, a thorough check includes a look at the tires for uneven wear, a look at all fluids in the auto, a look at the car's filters, a look at the shock absorbers and a tuneup if necessary.

"Sure you can get by without a checkup," Smith said. "But the car may let you down when you need it the most."

Busboom, meanwhile, recited a list of more specific things to do.

He suggested that motorists purchase quality tires that will handle all types of driving, both in the city and on the freeway.

"A lot of people buy cheaper tires on the misguided impression that they will just be driving in town," Busboom explained. "Then they load up the family, head out on a 500 to 1,000 mile trip and it soon turns to disaster."

Busboom also urged vacationing motorists to check tire pressure, increasing the pressure according to the load. Improperly inflated tires, he said, heat up and lead to blowouts.

Furthermore, he suggested that motorists check their automobiles' lighting systems, "the things that cause problems with the law" and their brakes.

Planning, Busboom said, is particularly important for foreign car owners. Volkswagon service isn't too hard to find, but other foreign car owners "could be hard pressed for parts."

The American Automobile Assn. (AAA) urges each automobile traveler to be sure he has packed a wheel jack, lug wrench, flashlight and warning flares. Furthermore, the association advises travelers to take along valid car registrations, valid driver's licenses and duplicate car keys.

Extra Keys

When traveling together, at least two of the travelers should keep duplicate car keys, but not in a handbag which may be left in the car. Such precautions can prevent the frustration of being locked out.

For traveling comfort, it also suggested that cars be equipped with first aid kits, blankets, pillows, and trash containers.

Above all, the AAA warns traveling motorists to be sure their automobile insurance policies and premiums are up to date.

But emergencies and breakdowns can and do occur, even though a car may have been properly prepared.

And if they do, the experts offer more suggestions.

"You're always vulnerable when you're in strange territory," Busboom warned. "The customer has to use judgment and should know his auto."

So when things go wrong, John Vickers, another Southeast Community College instructor, urges a motorist to locate a reliable service station or franchise dealer.

Interstate Trouble

Service stations along interstates, he said, are good for "fast sell items" like gasoline, oil, fanbelts, tires, batteries, radiator hoses and candy bars. But for major troubles, Vickers advised motorists to get off the interstates and into nearby towns.

He also urged drivers to obtain estimates before asking a station or garage to go ahead with any work. "Have prices in mind," he said.

On the other hand, Busboom said travelers "constantly should be aware that there are an awful lot of honest people in the industry who will work overtime to help a tourist get back on the road."

Chuck Bosselman, manager of Bosselman's Truck Plaza near Grand Island, explained that interstate truck stops are geared for light car repairs, like tire trouble and service problems.

"But if the car's motor goes out," he said, "we highly recommend a franchise dealer." In fact, Bosselman's makes a practice of referring motorists to in-town service stations and car dealers, as well as nearby service stations on the interstate.

"If we can't fix it, we'll get somebody who can," Bosselman said, noting that sometimes a truck stop doesn't have the equipment, parts, or time to handle major car repairs.

"It's a problem when you are a truck stop," Bosselman continued. "When you're busy, who do you line up first. The trucks or the cars?" Bosselman's tries to avoid giving preference to either, he said.

"A trucker can wait for three hours," Bosselman said, adding that three hours may be an inconvenience for a traveler. "Travelers aren't living on the road like truckers."

Concerning costs, Bosselman said labor and auto parts cost about the same at his truck stops as they do in town. Gouging, he said, is considered unorthodox and frowned upon by the newly organized Nebraska Truck Stop Assn.

Bosselman, who own truck stops in Grand Island, Big Springs and Des Moines along with eight service stations in surrounding towns, belongs to the association which was formed about two years ago to upgrade and organize truck stops in Nebraska.

Meanwhile, Vickers advises travelers with children to remove backseat door locks.

"If you've got troubles, dad gets excited, mom gets excited and pretty soon you've got kids opening doors."

In the event of breakdowns, Vickers urged drivers to get off the interstate as soon as possible and to see that passengers exit the car on the side away from traffic.

The experts, meanwhile, offered other bits of advice for vacationing motorists:

— Use a tire gauge to check tires each day before starting out

— Check the oil after the car has rested for several hours. A more accurate reading can be obtained if the oil has had time to drain down from the top of the engine

— Use air pressure to remove built up accumulations of insects and dust from the front of the radiator.

— Test the effectiveness of shock absorbers by pushing down and bouncing the fenders. If the car bounces when hands are removed, the shocks need a look

On the other hand, Busboom said travelers "constantly should be aware that there are an awful lot of honest people in the industry who will work overtime to help a tourist get back on the road."

Chuck Bosselman, manager of Bosselman's Truck Plaza near Grand Island, explained that interstate truck stops are geared for light car repairs, like tire trouble and service problems.

"But if the car's motor goes out," he said, "we highly recommend a franchise dealer." In fact, Bosselman's makes a practice of referring motorists to in-town service stations and car dealers, as well as nearby service stations on the interstate.

"If we can't fix it, we'll get somebody who can," Bosselman said, noting that sometimes a truck stop doesn't have the equipment, parts, or time to handle major car repairs.

"It's a problem when you are a truck stop," Bosselman continued. "When you're busy, who do you line up first. The trucks or the cars?" Bosselman's tries to avoid giving preference to either, he said.

"A trucker can wait for three hours," Bosselman said, adding that three hours may be an inconvenience for a traveler. "Travelers aren't living on the road like truckers."

Concerning costs, Bosselman said labor and auto parts cost about the same at his truck stops as they do in town. Gouging, he said, is considered unorthodox and frowned upon by the newly organized Nebraska Truck Stop Assn.

Bosselman, who own truck stops in Grand Island, Big Springs and Des Moines along with eight service stations in surrounding towns, belongs to the association which was formed about two years ago to upgrade and organize truck stops in Nebraska.

Meanwhile, Vickers advises travelers with children to remove backseat door locks.

"If you've got troubles, dad gets excited, mom gets excited and pretty soon you've got kids opening doors."

In the event of breakdowns, Vickers urged drivers to get off the interstate as soon as possible and to see that passengers exit the car on the side away from traffic.

The experts, meanwhile, offered other bits of advice for vacationing motorists:

— Use a tire gauge to check tires each day before starting out.

— Check the oil after the car has rested for several hours. A more accurate reading can be obtained if the oil has had time to drain down from the top of the engine.

— Use air pressure to remove built up accumulations of insects and dust from the front of the radiator.

— Test the effectiveness of shock absorbers by pushing down and bouncing the fenders. If the car bounces when hands are removed, the shocks need a look.

Don't Let Car Gobbledygook Scare You Off

By Ole Klunker

So you'd like to keep your car longer! Some people would. There are several ways to do this.

One way is to put on thicker bumpers. These can be obtained at almost any store that sells thicker bumpers.

Or you could gild your license plates or varnish your hood ornament.

One farmer said he's like to paint his mother-in-law's mouth shut but he didn't think shellac it. He said he gets along with her okay but he still wouldn't take a million dollars for another just lacquer.

But — to get back to cars — he said it's possible to keep your car shorter too. He said running it into a brick wall at 50 m.p.h. is a good way.

He didn't have a brick wall, he explained, so he drove his car at breakneck speed into a haystack filled with browsing cows. He said the feathers really flew!

Cars can be made higher too. By putting on tractor tires. Or lower. By taking them off.

This motorist, I later discovered, was actually just kidding around. He had what he called automobilistic technical sophistication. He even knew that a 4 cyl. ohc with FI and a 150 CID would handle differently from a car with an optional AT.

Which is more than I knew. I had wondered — if I buy a car with an overhead camshaft, will I have to duck everytime I get in? Or — what should I do if my disc brakes?

Color-keyed, cell-collapsible, chrome-plated wheel lip moldings puzzled me, as it would anyone who thought a dual horn is for fighting off mad bulls.

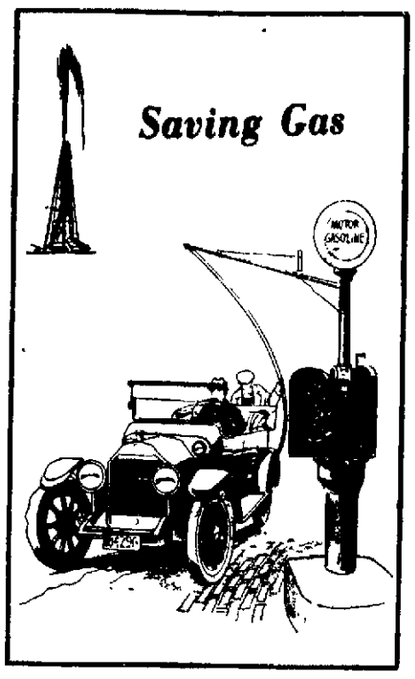
I found out, having studied up a little, that a Landau was never governor of Kansas, and that a Mazda cycle doesn't have pedals. Nor is it made out of electric light bulbs.

My ultimate dismay was when I heard a muffled roar become a high-pitched scream and I rushed outside expecting to see a gorgeous Maserati. It wasn't. It was my wife.

If after reading the above, you feel like you've been stretched over the grease rack of a fast talking mechanic, it's safe to say you're not alone.

Automotive terms are confusing to those unfamiliar with the underside of the hood. Here are the most common terms a motorist hears thrown around at the garage, and their proper definition (courtesy American Petroleum Institute):

The term . . .	Doesn't refer to . . .	Correct Definition . . .
Poor timing	Social blunders	Your car is built so that the gasoline is electrically fired when the piston is in the right position. When the fuel fires prematurely or too late, the car won't operate smoothly.
Distributor	Your newsboy	The distributor regulates the sequence in which spark plugs are fired to provide the power that drives the wheels. When the distributor is out of adjustment, the firing time is off and the engine won't run smoothly.
Alternator	A politican in an election year	That's close. They're both involved in "current" events, but the car's "current" is electrical. The alternator replaces the generator found on older cars and, like the generator at your local power plant, provides electricity to keep things running.
Tune up	Musical interlude	It's a series of adjustments made to make your car run more smoothly, and includes replacing the spark plugs, condenser and points, and adjusting the carburetor.
Idle adjustment	Putting your brother-in-law to work	Your car's idle — the rate the motor turns over at low speed — needs adjusting now and them to give smoother carburetion and performance.
New points	Tips on social etiquette	The points are part of the mechanism controlling the firing of the spark plugs. When they become worn or pitted, the firing is affected and the car is harder to start.
Spark plug	Barney Google's horse	You're getting closer. They do affect the horsepower! Spark plugs are ceramic and metal electrodes designed to permit electricity from the distributor to arc in the cylinder head. The electric arc ignites the gasoline, which drives the piston down to provide power. Normal driving erodes or fouls the electrodes, requiring periodic adjustments replacement.



Car care includes keeping the engine in proper tune. Since 1901 when the historic spindletop oil well gushed from the ground, Americans have burned billions of gallons of gasoline. Experts say if every motorist in the country got a regular tune-up twice a year, 3.8 billion gallons of guel could be saved.

Energy Experts Fear Return to 'Fuelishness'

(c) Chicago Daily News

Chicago — You car owners out there have the energy experts in Washington worried. You're burning up a lot more gas than you did last year.

Even worse, with the nation now swimming in gasoline, you're not taking all the advice about energy conservation seriously.

Widespread public skepticism about U.S. energy problems, according to a top federal official, spells more trouble than rising gasoline consumption.

Roger Sent, assistant administrator of the Federal Energy Administration (FEA) says consumers are getting, "absolutely the wrong signal" from the present gasoline surplus.

He said that the surplus, and reports of dealers being pressured to sell more gasoline, are hurting the push for energy conservation.

So FEA officials have decided to call in oil industry executives and dealer groups to explore complaints about alleged "dumping" of gasoline on the market. Sent announced plans for the meeting in connection with the Automotive Service Industry Assn. meeting.

"We want to work out a mechanism to deal with an awkward situation," Sent said in an interview. "We'll try to gather evidence and see if this is really happening."

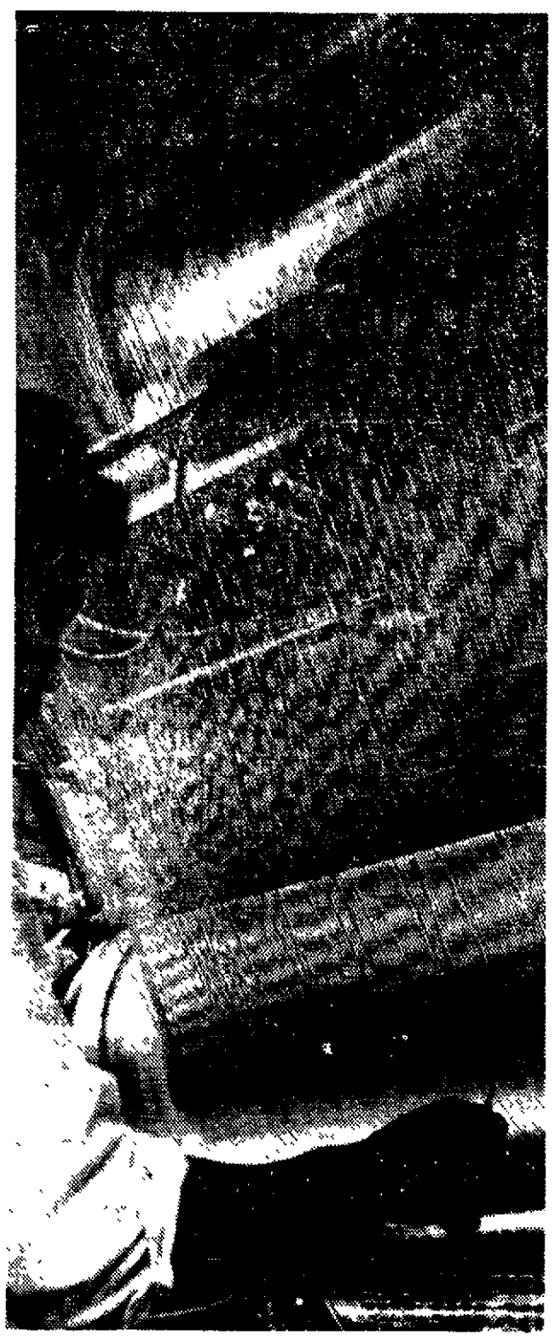
Oil company officials have denied any policy forcing stations to stay open longer to sell higher gasoline quotas. But Sent said some of the complaints over the past nine months are justified.

Sent called the current surplus a "temporary phenomenon" that will not last much beyond six months. He explained his agency has no legal authority to halt stepped-up gasoline sales and must rely on voluntary cooperation.

"We may not be able to cut down the surplus without consuming it," said Sent. "If it's possible to sell gasoline cheaper, let's do it We'll get our conservation another way."

U.S. passenger cars consumed 3.7% less gasoline in the shortage year of 1973. But Sent said that preliminary figures for January and February are about 6% above the same period last year.

"It's starting to scare us some," he said. "We are comparing against some pretty low figures. Nevertheless, I don't like to see that happen."



Belting the Tires

Hundreds of strands of steel wire are drawn over a roller before being coated with rubber in one of the first stages of Unisteel radial truck tire construction at a Goodyear tire plant.

Older Car Buyers Advised to Beware

If high car prices are driving you into the older car market for the first time, there are some things you should be aware of that "previously owned" auto aficionados have known for years.

Auto theft is booming in some areas, and when people are looking for "good deals" in used cars, professional auto thieves are never far away.

Michael J. Murphy, president of the National Automobile Theft Bureau (NATB), offers a few simple auto theft investigation techniques that can help the average consumer reduce his chances of being duped.

—Know the seller. When possible, buy your used car from a reputable dealer. If a dealer has also been duped into buying a stolen vehicle and innocently sells it to you, chances are his bond or insurance policy will cover both his loss and yours.

A common practice is for the dealer to purchase the true title of the vehicle after it is known to be stolen. He will then give the title to you without charge.

If you are buying from a private individual, it is even more important that you know something about him. Be cautious of a seller with no fixed address or employment. Ask the seller about past financing and insurance on the car, then check with the bank, finance company or insurance company to verify the information.

—Check the vehicle identification number (VIN). This is a unique number assigned to each vehicle by the manufacturer and registered with authorities Derivatives of the VIN are found on the engine, transmission and other parts of the vehicle.

On most cars built since 1969, the VIN is embossed on a metal plate located atop the driver's dash section and is visible from the outside at the bottom on the windshield.

To check the VIN yourself, see that the plate is made of metal and matches or coordinates with the interior color scheme of the vehicle. A red VIN plate in a green interior, for instance, might be suspicious.

Touch the VIN plate. If it is loose, tampering is very likely. Auto thieves usually remove or replace the VIN plate with one from a wrecked vehicle of like make, model and year.

If you have any doubts about the VIN's authenticity, take the car to a new car dealer who handles the same make vehicle and ask him to check it out. If there is no local dealer, go to the local police or highway patrol station.

—Check the paint and interior. A freshly painted vehicle, particularly a late model, may indicate cover-up work by auto thieves. Also, most interiors either match or coordinate with exterior colors.

One good way to check the original paint color is to look at the paint inside door openings and the trunk molding lip.

In looking over the interior and exterior of the vehicle, notice if wear and tear are realistic for the indicated odometer mileage. A low mileage car with badly worn seats and carpets, for instance, is a good sign of something amiss.

—Check the inspection sticker and license tag. These should be current and issued by the same state. There may also be other information on the sticker which must correspond to that vehicle, such as VIN number, body style, make, model and year of the car.

—Check the keys and locks. Be sure you get at least one set of the original manufacturer's keys, not a replacement set. Many manufactures give two sets of original keys, but you should ask for all sets. Make sure they match and work in the proper places.

Lock cylinders are often pulled and replaced by auto thieves. The cylinders should not be loose or off-center, and should not move when a key is inserted and turned. Check for scratches that may indicate tampering.

—Check stickers, personal documents and personal effects. In many cases, a thief will say where a car has been, when and where it was purchased, where it was serviced and other things about its history. Any letters, maps and other personal items left in the glove box, trunk (particularly side wells), under floor mats, seats and over sun visors may refute his story.

Lubrication stickers, parking stickers and the like can also contradict an auto thief's story.

—Don't be afraid to ask questions. A legitimate seller will always cooperate with you in verifying facts.

—Complete all paperwork at the time of sale. Never pay for or accept a used car with a promise that title and registration papers will be delivered later. Most states require automobile title and tag registration transfers to be notarized and recorded with proper authorities. A bill of sale may not be enough to protect you.

In looking over the interior and exterior of the vehicle, notice if wear and tear are realistic for the indicated odometer mileage. A low mileage car with badly worn seats and carpets, for instance, is a good sign of something amiss.

—Check the inspection sticker and license tag. These should be current and issued by the same state. There may also be other information on the sticker which must correspond to that vehicle, such as VIN number, body style, make, model and year of the car.

—Check the keys and locks. Be sure you get at least one set of the original manufacturer's keys, not a replacement set. Many manufactures give two sets of original keys, but you should ask for all sets. Make sure they match and work in the proper places.

Lock cylinders are often pulled and replaced by auto thieves. The cylinders should not be loose or off-center, and should not move when a key is inserted and turned. Check for scratches that may indicate tampering.

—Check stickers, personal documents and personal effects. In many cases, a thief will say where a car has been, when and where it was purchased, where it was serviced and other things about its history. Any letters, maps and other personal items left in the glove box, trunk (particularly side wells), under floor mats, seats and over sun visors may refute his story.

Lubrication stickers, parking stickers and the like can also contradict an auto thief's story.

—Don't be afraid to ask questions. A legitimate seller will always cooperate with you in verifying facts.

—Complete all paperwork at the time of sale. Never pay for or accept a used car with a promise that title and registration papers will be delivered later. Most states require automobile title and tag registration transfers to be notarized and recorded with proper authorities. A bill of sale may not be enough to protect you.

Auto Industry Beating May Be Valuable Lesson

By Dan Jedlicka
(c) Chicago Sun-Times

It was one stunning blow after another for automakers in 1974, and America's largest industry is reeling.

The blows have taught U.S. car producers a brutal lesson: no longer can they operate on their sacred premise that what motorists want and what they need are two entirely different things.

Now, faced with a recession, joblessness, rising costs for just about everything and an uncertain gas supply situation, consumers know what they want — and it isn't a 1975 car that costs about $1,000 more than the preceding year's model, a car that's too big, eats too much gas and has an abundance of superfluous sheet metal with an abhorrent lack of interior room.

Even Detroit's small models suffer from these evils.

As for the blows, they're old news to anybody who hasn't been sheltered in a cave.

The Arab oil embargo prompted the gas crunch early last year. Then recession and inflation took over. New autos no longer were considered a necessity for millions of people.

Car buyers can wait. How long they'll delay purchasing a new auto is anyone's guess, although some economists and auto industry analysts say it will be mid-1975 before they begin to breath life into the auto market.

Ultimately, Motown will have to build sensible cars, like Volkswagen's new, small Rabbit model. The Rabbit is extremely economical, has copious interior room, superb roadability and plenty of punch. It's the kind of car you'll see rolling off Detroit's assembly lines — but not before 1980. It'll take that long before economics allow U.S. automakers to begin producing such a vehicle.

Even though Detroit's uninspired "advanced" thinking has plunged it into a desperate situation, the federal government has much to do with the increased costs of cars. The government went wild in establishing safety and pollution-control regulations which resulted in costly, ill-conceived items being added to autos.

This isn't to say that a few such models won't pop up between now and then. For instance, American Motors Corp.'s new, small Pacer model is ahead of its time, although it lacks the small rotary engine that would make it an extremely well-rounded car.

Nobody is enjoying the pains that Motown is suffering. Fortunately, they are birthpains that have been an awful long time coming.

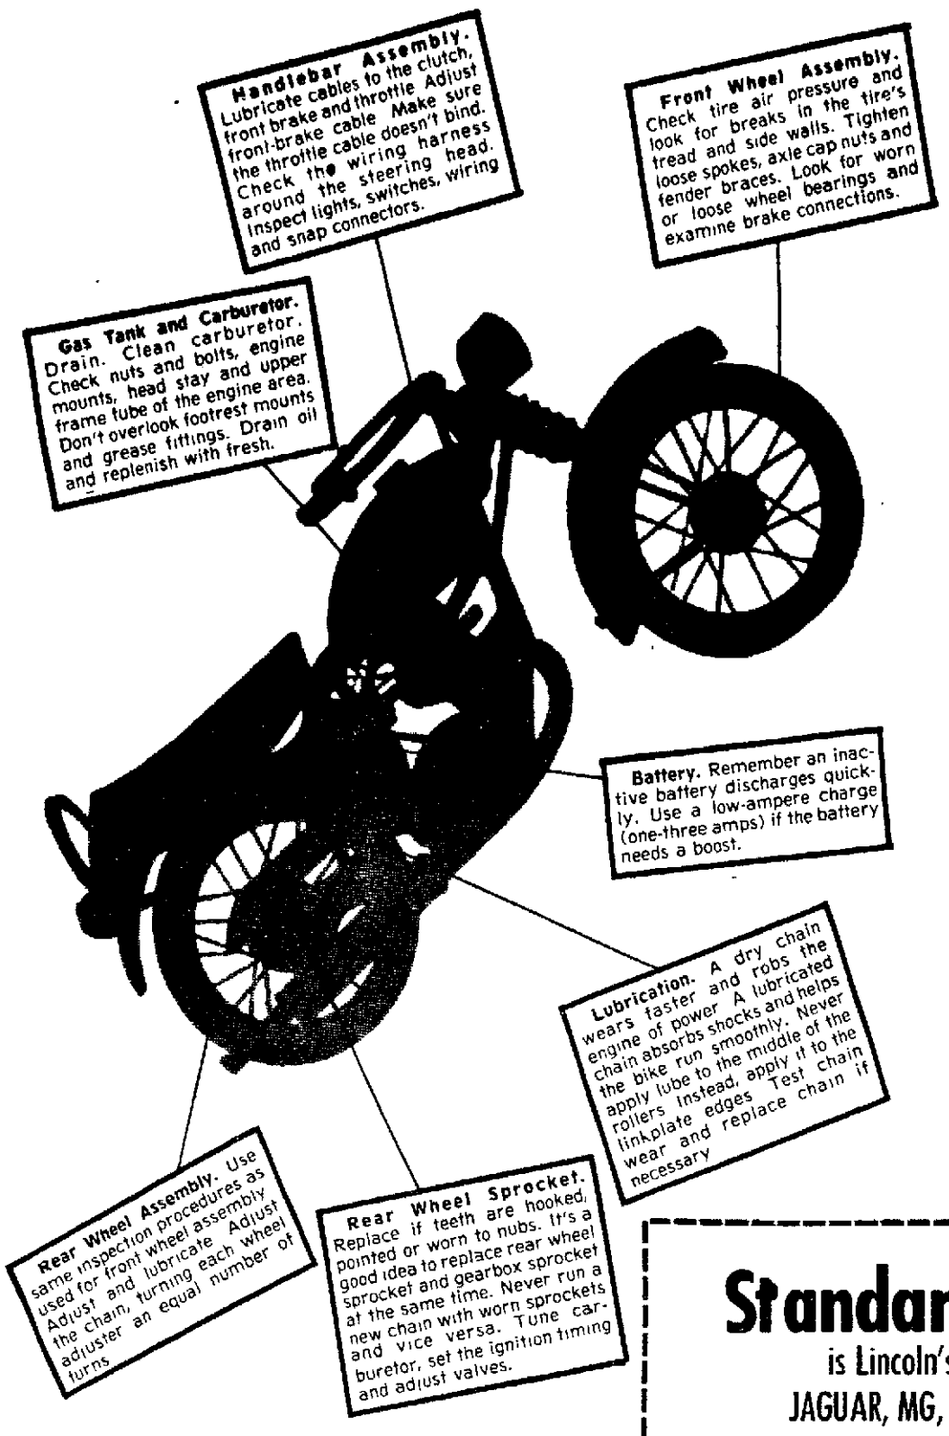
Spring Motorcycle Care



Easy Rider Keeps Close Watch on Motorcycle

By Linda Ulrich

If you read the ads in any motorcycle magazine you know that:

Good things happen on a Honda.

Kawasaki lets the good times roll.

Someday you'll own a Yamaha.

Harley-Davidson is the Great American Freedom Machine.

Norton offers the ultimate ride.

And if you've got the guts, the Suzuki TM-250 has everything else you need.

But regardless of what kind of motorcycle you purchased last year, you're not going anywhere this year unless you can get it started. And the melting snow means it's time to think about spring motorcycle maintenance.

"It's the talk of the times to let a professional do it, but there's no reason why you can't do it yourself," said Ron Jahde, who does his own motorcycle maintenance work.

If you spend 80¢ for a quart of oil, $1 for spark plugs $1 to get the battery charged (if necessary) and some time, you've completed a minor tune-up, Jahde said.

Jack Sloan, service manager at Jerryco Honda Sales and Service, estimates that motorcycle owners could save at least $15 to $20 a year if they did their own minor maintenance.

According to him, most people don't, but are capable of doing, the following basics:

Charging the battery, lubricating the cables, lubricating and adjusting the chain, adjusting the brakes, changing the engine oil, checking air pressure in tires, "and last but not least, washing and polishing it."

If you take your machine to a service shop, they will do all of the above plus clean and adjust the carburetor, adjust the valves, and check the points, spark plugs, timing and wheel spokes.

Cost for a complete tune-up will vary but will run approximately $18 for a one-cylinder bike, $22 for a 2-cylinder one and $30 for a four-cylinder machine, he said.

Agreeing with Sloan's statement that most cycle owners have their vehicles serviced in a shop, a spokesman for Joshua Motor Sports said Yamaha is offering, through its dealers, a 23-item spring tune-up at 20% off.

If your motorcycle doesn't start after its long winter hibernation, 90% of the time, it's the battery, Sloan said.

If you left your motorcycle outside all winter, you should've taken the battery inside. If you didn't the battery probably is frozen and you will need a new one.

If the battery is simply discharged, you can recharge it yourself, provided you have a low amperage charger.

Sloan, who counts himself among the dozen people in Lincoln who ride a motorcycle year-round, said winter riding requires additional care.

"You shouldn't start it up and let it run for only five minutes or the water condenses and the cylinders and exhaust pipe will rust," he said. "You should ride it for at least 30 minutes or until it's hot enough to dry off."

Sloan and Jahde agree that the owner's manual is the best source of information for general do-it-yourself maintenance, although service manuals are available for those who really want to tear into their engines.

Extensive work requires special tools, the most expensive of which is a timing light which costs around $30 to $40, Sloan said, adding that you can get a bike timed at a shop for $2.50.

The average rider puts about 1,500 miles on his bike, a year, Sloan said, so one tune-up a year usually is sufficient.

Spring Motorcycle Care

Easy Rider Keeps Close Watch on Motorcycle

By Linda Ulrich

If you read the ads in any motorcycle magazine you know that:

Good things happen on a Honda.

Kawasaki lets the good times roll.

Someday you'll own a Yamaha.

Harley-Davidson is the Great American Freedom Machine.

Norton offers the ultimate ride.

And if you've got the guts, the Suzuki TM-250 has everything else you need.

But regardless of what kind of motorcycle you purchased last year, you're not going anywhere this year unless you can get it started. And the melting snow means it's time to think about spring motorcycle maintenance.

"It's the talk of the times to let a professional do it, but there's no reason why you can't do it yourself," said Ron Jahde, who does his own motorcycle maintenance work.

If you spend 80¢ for a quart of oil, $1 for spark plugs $1 to get the battery charged (if necessary) and some time, you've completed a minor tune-up, Jahde said.

Jack Sloan, service manager at Jerryco Honda Sales and Service, estimates that motorcycle owners could save at least $15 to $20 a year if they did their own minor maintenance.

According to him, most people don't, but are capable of doing, the following basics:

Charging the battery, lubricating the cables, lubricating and adjusting the chain, adjusting the brakes, changing the engine oil, checking air pressure in tires, "and last but not least, washing and polishing it."

If you take your machine to a service shop, they will do all of the above plus clean and adjust the carburetor, adjust the valves, and check the points, spark plugs, timing and wheel spokes.

Cost for a complete tune-up will vary but will run approximately $18 for a one-cylinder bike, $22 for a 2-cylinder one and $30 for a four-cylinder machine, he said.

Agreeing with Sloan's statement that most cycle owners have their vehicles serviced in a shop, a spokesman for Joshua Motor Sports said Yamaha is offering, through its dealers, a 23-item spring tune-up at 20% off.

If your motorcycle doesn't start after its long winter hibernation, 90% of the time, it's the battery, Sloan said.

If you left your motorcycle outside all winter, you should've taken the battery inside. If you didn't the battery probably is frozen and you will need a new one.

If the battery is simply discharged, you can recharge it yourself, provided you have a low amperage charger.

Sloan, who counts himself among the dozen people in Lincoln who ride a motorcycle year-round, said winter riding requires additional care.

"You shouldn't start it up and let it run for only five minutes or the water condenses and the cylinders and exhaust pipe will rust," he said. "You should ride it for at least 30 minutes or until it's hot enough to dry off."

Sloan and Jahde agree that the owner's manual is the best source of information for general do-it-yourself maintenance, although service manuals are available for those who really want to tear into their engines.

Extensive work requires special tools, the most expensive of which is a timing light which costs around $30 to $40, Sloan said, adding that you can get a bike timed at a shop for $2.50.

The average rider puts about 1,500 miles on his bike, a year, Sloan said, so one tune-up a year usually is sufficient.

Despite Name, New Facility Will Help NU Basketball

Sports Signals

By Bob Owens
Star Sports Editor

What Shall We Name 'It?'

Nebraska's 1975-76 basketball schedule, which includes some of the nation's more prominent teams, could be the start of something big for Coach Joe Cipriano and the Cornhuskers.

It has been difficult to get many of those schools to play home-and-home games because of the facility the Huskers have been saddled with for so many years. Frankly, in the past, the Huskers have been forced to play some weak-sisters of the sport for that reason alone.

The old NU Coliseum, likewise, has been a deterrent in recruiting the real top-notch prospects, especially after they had visited such fine new arenas as can be found in just about every section of the country.

Now, Cipriano and his aides Moe Iba and Lonnie Porter can show a prospect something concrete — a fancy new arena that is nearing completion. They won't have to pull out an architect's drawing of what the place will look like.

While writing the story on next season's schedule, colleague Mark Gordon and I got into a discussion of what is the actual name of the new facility. I had written "Coliseum." Mark said it was "Fieldhouse." A check of the files showed that some stories have called it Field House — two words.

No More Coliseums, Please!

The release of the schedule from Don Bryant's Sports Information called it Coliseum and in a quote attributed to Cipriano he also said Coliseum.

Since NU already has had a Coliseum, perhaps another name should be given the new building. But Fieldhouse and Field House shouldn't be it because it isn't a fieldhouse in the true sense of the word.

You might name it Field House — two words — if you want to name it in memory of O. F. Field, who coached the Husker basketballers back in 1910-11.

Or, if you decided to honor former football coach D. X. Bible you might name it The Bible Center . . . Or in honor of Harry Good, who coached NU cagers in the 1940s, you could name it the Good Place.

If the fans become unruly as did state tournament crowds last week, a name could be held in reserve. The Bush Arena, after Jerry Bush, also a former Husker coach — no offense meant, Jerry.

E. O. "Jumbo" Stiehm coached NU back in 1911-15, so Jumbo Palace might be considered since it is jumbo in seats, about 15,000 of them . . . A guy named E. Berry coached back in 1900-01. How about The Berry Patch?

I haven't come up with any suggestions for names to honor such former Husker cage coaches as C. T. Black, W. H. Browne or A. J. Lewandowski.

Maybe just plain ole "Cipping Hole" wouldn't be too bad an idea.

Tough Schedules Help

Mort Olshan, The Star's expert handicapper, discusses some of the things it takes to win in NCAA tournament competition and one of them is experience of teams against top-flight opponents.

In this regard, Nebraska appears to be on the right track by adding such teams as South Carolina, New Mexico State, Washington, Stanford, Illinois, Northwestern and Iowa and retaining Vanderbilt.

While you might point out that of this group only South Carolina and New Mexico State had outstanding records during the past season, it is a fact that the others have had good basketball programs in the past and were in stages of rebuilding.

Iowa and Illinois, for example, had new coaches and both figure to move up rapidly. Northwestern's Tex Winter, the former Kansas State coach, was only in his second season at the Evanston, Ill., school.

Before you become critical of Nebraska basketball, consider the fact the Huskers this season were two overtime losses and two one-point losses away from the Big Eight Conference championship. Just one more player would have made a tremendous difference.

With the new facility, the odds are good that that "one more player" will be arriving on the Cornhusker campus in the fall.

Borros Enjoys Racing Duties

By MARK GORDON
Star Sports Writer

Grand Island — Tom Borros just can't stay away from the races.

"I'm getting married in June, but we can't take our honeymoon until after Atokad (the race track in South Sioux City) closes in November," said the mutuel manager here at Fonner Park. "Then we'll take our honeymoon in Florida."

There's a reason for that. Borros is assistant manager of Florida Downs in Oldsmar which operates a January-March horse racing season.

But it's nothing new for Borros, who has spent the last 22 years working in the mutuel departments of 26 race tracks.

It began when he left the Army in 1955 after a tour of duty in Korea. Starting with selling mutuel tickets at River Downs in Cincinnati, he sold tickets at Keeneland, Churchill Downs and Oaklawn Park. In 1957, he began working in the calculating room.

His first year in Nebraska was 1961 when he worked at Ak-Sar-Ben in Omaha. He began as assistant mutuel manager at the outstate Nebraska tracks in 1965.

"I've learned everything I know about running the mutuels from Peck Jones. He really knows his business," Borros said of the man who has served as the mutuels manager for several years at Nebraska race tracks. Jones is in Florida bypassing this Fonner meet as his wife is recuperating from surgery.

Jones will assume his position as mutuel manager when Ak-Sar-Ben opens its 56-day meet on April 29. Borros will be his assistant.

At Fonner, Borros supervises about 85 cashiers and 115 sellers on Saturdays while the number decreases during the week. For comparison, Ak-Sar-Ben hires 140 cashiers, 179 sellers and 66 exacta sellers for a total of 245 mutuel workers.

"Peck and I hire the people at Omaha," he said. "Most of the people we hire are recommended to us and they're basically good workers," he said. "Once in a while we have problems, but we give them instructions before they start working.

"We have a little school the day before the races start and show them what to do," he said. "We show the sellers how to punch tickets, how to operate the machines and we show the cashiers what to watch for when cashing tickets. It's sort of a trial run."

Although the mutuel rooms in the five Nebraska tracks are basically the same, there is one major difference, he said.

Fonner and Ak-Sar-Ben employ a Duplex Tote machine while the other three tracks (Lincoln, Columbus and Atokad) have a less sophisticated model.

That will change since Lincoln's new plant will accommodate the all-computerized model such as Fonner and Ak-Sar-Ben use.

Borros scoffs at the notion that Fonner is in the "bush leagues" of horse racing.

"When you're talking about doing $545,000 to $573,000 on Saturdays (in mutuel handle) that's not the bush leagues," he said. "That's a fantastic figure for an operation of this size. I'm sure we're capable of doing $600,000 this year, although it will take longer to get all the tickets cashed.

"This place has really grown in the last 10 years," he noted of Fonner's constant rising mutuel handle figures.

One major reason for that increase has been the installation of exacta wagering in Nebraska. Fonner has had three exactas (where bettors must pick the first and second horses in order) for the past few years.

"Gimmick wagering certainly has helped boost the handle in Nebraska, although there are some tracks (most noteably Oaklawn in Hot Springs, Ark.) where they don't have gimmick betting except for a daily double," he said.

Borros, who has also worked pari-mutuel operations in Florida dog tracks and jai-a-lai frontons, said there is no difference in those mutuel rooms and those in horse racing plants.

"If you know the pari-mutuel setup in horses you know it in the others," he said.

That's one field where Tom Borros certainly is qualified.

Offenses Receive Boost From NFL Rule Changes

Honolulu (AP) — National Football League teams were banned Wednesday from having more than 11 players in their huddles as seven rule changes were enacted, a majority benefiting the offense.

Slapped on the wrist were Minnesota, the National Conference champions, Kansas City and Oakland, who last season had more than 11 in their defensive huddles and then sent some to the sidelines depending on the anticipated offensive play.

At its annual meeting, the league declared such action unethical and ruled it would be unsportsmanlike conduct in the future with a 15-yard penalty.

Commissioner Pete Rozelle said he thought the most important rule change covers the situation of a fourth-down pass inside an opponent's 20-yard line.

In the past, an incomplete pass into the end zone would return the ball to the 20 with the defensive team taking over.

For 1975, and subsequent years, the ball will be returned to the line of scrimmage, whether it be the one, two or 19.

Owner George Halas, of the Chicago Bears commented in an aside that the previous rule had been in effect for half a century.

Rozelle said the rule had discouraged passing on fourth day on plays close to the goal line.

Wednesday's series of new rules continued the NFL philosophy of bringing a more even balance between the offense and the defense.

Turned down, however, was a proposal that a pass receiver need to have only one foot in bounds for a successful reception.

Colleges and the World Football League require only one foot but Jim Kensil, executive director of the NFL, said the owners felt the two foot rule was peculiar to professional football and also a safety aid.

Players, Kensil said, must stay near the sidelines to keep two feet in bounds, which discourages leaping catches which could send them into benches or walls.

Passing of the new rules came on the day following the NFL surprise of naming Pasadena's Rose Bowl the site of the 1977 Super Bowl Game.

Super Bowl I and VII were played in Los Angeles where the crowd at the Coliseum in 1973 set a record of 90,182.

Los Angeles lost, along with four other cities in the bidding for the 1977 game, a vote which required approval of 20 of the 26 clubs.

Rule changes adopted Wednesday were:

1. All decorations on fields must be approved by the NFL. All chain crews must be dressed informly and all ball boys must be similarly attired. All clubs must use standard sideline markers and pylons will be used instead of flags.

2. Having more than 11 men in a huddle will be considered unsportsmanlike conduct.

3. If an offensive team uses a double shift within its opponent's 20-yard line, it must have shown it in the game three times previously. The old rule required showing the double shift three times in a quarter before using in within the 20.

4. A fourth-down pass, from the line of scrimmage inside the opponent's 20, will be returned to the scrimmage line instead of the 20 if it is incomplete.

5. If fouls are committed by both teams, one of which calls for disqualification, the penalties will be offsetting even though the disqualified player still will be banned from the game. In the past, a penalty was assessed the team of the disqualified player but the penalty against the other team was ignored.

6. Penalties for having an illegal player downfield and offensive pass interference were reduced from 15 to 10 yards, joining holding, illegal use of the hands and tripping. The latter three were reduced a year ago.

7. If there is defensive holding downfield and the passer is thrown for a loss, the penalty will be assessed from the line of scrimmage. In the past, it has been assessed at the point from which the thrower was sacked.

Biggest reason for the Tuesday vote for Pasadena to hold the Super Bowl for the first time was the 104,701-capacity of the stadium.

NU Baseball Postponed

Tulsa, Okla. (AP) — A scheduled baseball game between the University of Nebraska and Oral Roberts was postponed Wednesday by wet grounds. A doubleheader is planned Thursday, weather permitting.

Wayne Trips KSU Twice

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — Bob DeVaul hurled a three-hitter in the first game and Wayne State pounced on Kansas State pitcher Frank Seitz in the nightcap Wednesday for five runs as the Nebraska team swept the twinbill, 3-1, 8-7.

With K-State handcuffed by DeVaul in the opener, Wayne State drew three walks from the hosts' starting pitcher, Les Sutton. Following a strikeout, Randy Miller smacked a double to left-center that drove in all three runs.

Wayne State scored its first five runs in the nightcap without getting a hit.

Cincinnati Not Awed By Rankings, Records

By The Associated Press

Cincinnati is still wet behind the ears compared with tournament-toughened teams such as Notre Dame, Maryland and Louisville. But Gale Catlett's Bearcats believe they can clean up in the National Collegiate Athletic Association basketball tournament.

The kiddie corps from Cincinnati, the youngest team left in NCAA play, will meet Ohio River rival Louisville Thursday night in the Midwest Regional at Las Cruses, N.M. Cincinnati is 22-5 and ranked No. 12 and Louisville is 25-2 and ranked No. 3.

But with three freshmen and one sophomore on the starting squad, youthful innocence prevents the Bearcats from being impressed by rankings and records. Besides, they played with barely a whimper of national recognition until they leaped into the final 16 with an 87-79 first-round triumph over Texas A&M.

After being overlooked for so long, patience is not one of their virtues. "They're convinced they are going to win their next four games," said Catlett. "I have to believe in them."

The other Midwest Regional will pit fourth-ranked Maryland, 23-4, against ninth-ranked Notre Dame, 19-8.

Another "inexperienced" team is Kansas State, which began the season with no returning starters but built a 19-8 record, including a 69-62 upset of Pennsylvania last Saturday in the first round of NCAA East play. On Thursday, Kansas State takes a No. 17 ranking against Boston College in the East Regional semifinals at Providence, R.I.

Coach Jack Hartman is aware of his team's shortcomings—inexperience and size. But he knows it has heart. "There's something about these kids," he said. "They've got good intangibles, good character, good dedication. These things have allowed them to get the maximum."

The other East Regional semifinal game will be between No. 20 Syracuse, 21-7, and No. 6 North Carolina, 22-7.

In the Mideast Regionals at Dayton, Ohio, fifth-ranked Kentucky, 23-4, will meet Central Michigan, 21-5, and unbeaten Indiana, 30-0, will face Oregon State, 19-10.

In the West, at Portland, Ore., it will be seventh-ranked Arizona State, 24-3, vs. NevadaLas Vegas, 23-4, and Montana, 21-6, vs. perennial powerhouse UCLA, 24-3 and No. 2 behind Indiana.

Despite UCLA's reputation, unranked Montana is not totally intimidated. "We're going in a little apprehensive but not scared," said Coach Jud Heathcote.

Top-ranked Indiana is apprehensive, too, taking nothing for granted about Oregon State.

"Oregon State is capable of beating any team in the country," Hoosier Coach Bobby Knight said. "They beat UCLA this year and they beat 'em last year, too. That shows you what kind of team they are."

The eight winners of Thursday's play will meet on Saturday to determine who will advance to San Diego for the semifinals and final.

'Team Concept In NCAA Meet'

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

The NCAA basketball tournament this season looks more wide open than any in recent years, according to Mort Olshan, who has been rating college basketball for The Lincoln Star this season.

Yet, Olshan picks undefeated and No. 1-ranked Indiana to defeat UCLA in the championship game, 79-74, on March 31 in San Diego.

"This year, emphasis is on the team concept exemplified by top-ranked Indiana," Olshan says. "But the injury to their All-American forward Scott May narrows the gap between the undefeated Hoosiers and their pursuers."

Olshan points out that history corroborates the definite impression that the best team usually wins, noting that the last time a "sleeper" won the championship was in 1966 when Texas Western (now Texas El Paso) slipped up on Kentucky.

"As a rule, the team that plays hard defense rates a solid edge," Olshan says. "Now and then a run-and-gun club will get a hot hand and blow the enemy off the court. Rarely will it explode against a smart, hard-nosed defense that takes away its rhythm."

That's his basic reason for picking Indiana and UCLA to work their way to the title game. "UCLA's spectacular offensive feats prior to this season overshadowed the excellence of the defense of this nine-time national champion," Olshan points out.

Olshan picks Louisville to defeat Maryland for the Midwest Regional title. Then he sees UCLA topping the Cardinals in the first-round game at the finals in the International Sports Arena in San Diego March 29. Indiana's opponent that day would be North Carolina, in Olshan's opinion.

Here's how he picks Thursday night games at the four regionals:

Midwest — Louisville 81, Cincinnati 75, Maryland 87, Notre Dame 81.

West — UCLA 82, Montana 60; Arizona State 88, Nevada-Las Vegas 81.

East — North Carolina 78, Syracuse 70, Boston College 74, Kansas State 66.

Mideast — Kentucky 86, Central Michigan 70, Indiana 76, Oregon State 62.

Olshan's handicapping of the final 16 looks like this. Indiana 8-5 odds. UCLA 5-1; Maryland and Louisville 8-1; North Carolina 10-1, Arizona State and Kentucky 15-1, Notre Dame 20-1, Boston College and Syracuse 25-1, Cincinnati and UN Las Vegas 40-1, Kansas State and Oregon State 50-1; Montana and Central Michigan 100-1.

Lincoln-area basketball fans will be able to watch the Notre Dame-Maryland game on KOLN-TV (Channel 10) tonight at 10:30 p.m.

UPI

Montreal Canadiens' Jacques Lemaire (25) lifts the puck into the net over Boston Bruins' goaltender Ken Broderick for a goal. The Canadiens defeated the Bruins, 2-1.

Los Angeles' Willie Crawford and Montreal catcher Barry Foote were decked by pitcher Woody Fryman in the sixth inning during an exhibition game at Vero Beach, Fla.

But it's nothing new for Borros, who has spent the last 22 years working in the mutuel departments of 26 race tracks.

It began when he left the Army in 1955 after a tour of duty in Korea. Starting with selling mutuel tickets at River Downs in Cincinnati, he sold tickets at Keeneland, Churchill Downs and Oaklawn Park. In 1957, he began working in the calculating room.

His first year in Nebraska was 1961 when he worked at Ak-Sar-Ben in Omaha. He began as assistant mutuel manager at the outstate Nebraska tracks in 1965.

"I've learned everything I know about running the mutuels from Peck Jones. He really knows his business," Borros said of the man who has served as the mutuels manager for several years at Nebraska race tracks. Jones is in Florida bypassing this Fonner meet as his wife is recuperating from surgery.

Jones will assume his position as mutuel manager when Ak-Sar-Ben opens its 56-day meet on April 29. Borros will be his assistant.

At Fonner, Borros supervises about 85 cashiers and 115 sellers on Saturdays while the number decreases during the week. For comparison, Ak-Sar-Ben hires 140 cashiers, 179 sellers and 66 exacta sellers for a total of 245 mutuel workers.

"Peck and I hire the people at Omaha," he said. "Most of the people we hire are recommended to us and they're basically good workers," he said. "Once in a while we have problems, but we give them instructions before they start working.

"We have a little school the day before the races start and show them what to do," he said. "We show the sellers how to punch tickets, how to operate the machines and we show the cashiers what to watch for when cashing tickets. It's sort of a trial run."

Although the mutuel rooms in the five Nebraska tracks are basically the same, there is one major difference, he said.

Fonner and Ak-Sar-Ben employ a Duplex Tote machine while the other three tracks (Lincoln, Columbus and Atokad) have a less sophisticated model.

That will change since Lincoln's new plant will accommodate the all-computerized model such as Fonner and Ak-Sar-Ben use.

Borros scoffs at the notion that Fonner is in the "bush leagues" of horse racing.

"When you're talking about doing $545,000 to $573,000 on Saturdays (in mutuel handle) that's not the bush leagues," he said. "That's a fantastic figure for an operation of this size. I'm sure we're capable of doing $600,000 this year, although it will take longer to get all the tickets cashed.

"This place has really grown in the last 10 years," he noted of Fonner's constant rising mutuel handle figures.

One major reason for that increase has been the installation of exacta wagering in Nebraska. Fonner has had three exaetas (where bettors must pick the first and second horses in order) for the past few years.

"Gimmick wagering certainly has helped boost the handle in Nebraska, although there are some tracks (most noteably Oaklawn in Hot Springs, Ark.) where they don't have gimmick betting except for a daily double," he said.

Borros, who has also worked pari-mutuel operations in Florida dog tracks and jai-a-lai frontons, said there is no difference in those mutuel rooms and those in horse racing plants.

"If you know the pari-mutuel setup in horses you know it in the others," he said.

That's one field where Tom Borros certainly is qualified.

Offenses Receive Boost From NFL Rule Changes

Honolulu (AP) — National Football League teams were banned Wednesday from having more than 11 players in their huddles as seven rule changes were enacted, a majority benefiting the offense.

Slapped on the wrist were Minnesota, the National Conference champions, Kansas City and Oakland, who last season had more than 11 in their defensive huddles and then sent some to the sidelines depending on the anticipated offensive play.

At its annual meeting, the league declared such action unethical and ruled it would be unsportsmanlike conduct in the future with a 15-yard penalty.

Commissioner Pete Rozelle said he thought the most important rule change covers the situation of a fourth-down pass inside an opponent's 20-yard line.

In the past, an incomplete pass into the end zone would return the ball to the 20 with the defensive team taking over.

For 1975, and subsequent years, the ball will be returned to the line of scrimmage, whether it be the one, two or 19.

Owner George Halas, of the Chicago Bears commented in an aside that the previous rule had been in effect for half a century.

Rozelle said the rule had discouraged passing on fourth day on plays close to the goal line.

Wednesday's series of new rules continued the NFL philosophy of bringing a more even balance between the offense and the defense.

Turned down, however, was a proposal that a pass receiver need to have only one foot in bounds for a successful reception.

Colleges and the World Football League require only one foot but Jim Kensil, executive director of the NFL, said the owners felt the two foot rule was peculiar to professional football and also a safety aid.

Players, Kensil said, must slow near the sidelines to keep two feet in bounds, which discourages leaping catches which could send them into benches or walls.

Passing of the new rules came on the day following the NFL surprise of naming Pasadena's Rose Bowl the site of the 1977 Super Bowl Game.

Super Bowl I and VII were played in Los Angeles where the crowd at the Coliseum in 1973 set a record of 90,182.

Los Angeles lost, along with four other cities in the bidding for the 1977 game, a vote which required approval of 20 of the 26 clubs.

Rule changes adopted Wednesday were:

1. All decorations on fields must be approved by the NFL. All chain crews must be dressed informly and all ball boys must be similarly attired. All clubs must use standard sideline markers and pylons will be used instead of flags.

2. Having more than 11 men in a huddle will be considered unsportsmanlike conduct.

3. If an offensive team uses a double shift within its opponent's 20-yard line, it must have shown it in the game three times previously. The old rule required showing the double shift three times in a quarter before using in within the 20.

4. A fourth-down pass, from the line of scrimmage inside the opponent's 20, will be returned to the scrimmage line instead of the 20 if it is incomplete.

5. If fouls are committed by both teams, one of which calls for disqualification, the penalties will be offsetting even though the disqualified player still will be banned from the game. In the past, a penalty was assessed the team of the disqualified player but the penalty against the other team was ignored.

6. Penalties for having an illegal player downfield and offensive pass interference were reduced from 15 to 10 yards, joining holding, illegal use of the hands and tripping. The latter three were reduced a year ago.

7. If there is defensive holding downfield and the passer is thrown for a loss, the penalty will be assessed from the line of scrimmage. In the past, it has been assessed at the point from which the thrower was sacked.

Biggest reason for the Tuesday vote for Pasadena to hold the Super Bowl for the first time was the 104,701-capacity of the stadium.

Wayne Trips KSU Twice

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — Bob DeVaul hurled a three-hitter in the first game and Wayne State pounced on Kansas State pitcher Frank Seitz in the nightcap Wednesday for five runs as the Nebraska team swept the twinbill, 3-1, 8-7.

With K-State handcuffed by DeVaul in the opener, Wayne State drew three walks from the hosts' starting pitcher, Les Sutton. Following a strikeout, Randy Miller smacked a double to left-center that drove in all three runs.

Wayne State scored its first five runs in the nightcap without getting a hit.

Cincinnati Not Awed By Rankings, Records

By The Associated Press

Cincinnati is still wet behind the ears compared with tournament-toughened teams such as Notre Dame, Maryland and Louisville. But Gale Catlett's Bearcats believe they can clean up in the National Collegiate Athletic Association basketball tournament.

The kiddie corps from Cincinnati, the youngest team left in NCAA play, will meet Ohio River rival Louisville Thursday night in the Midwest Regional at Las Cruses, N.M. Cincinnati is 22-5 and ranked No. 12 and Louisville is 25-2 and ranked No. 3.

But with three freshmen and one sophomore on the starting squad, youthful innocence prevents the Bearcats from being impressed by rankings and records. Besides, they played with barely a whimper of national recognition until they leaped into the final 16 with an 87-79 first-round triumph over Texas A&M.

After being overlooked for so long, patience is not one of their virtues. "They're convinced they are going to win their next four games," said Catlett. "I have to blieve in them."

The other Midwest Regional will pit fourth-ranked Maryland, 23-4, against ninth-ranked Notre Dame, 19-8.

Another "inexperienced" team is Kansas State, which began the season with no returning starters but built a 19-8 record, including a 69-62 upset of Pennsylvania last Saturday in the first round of NCAA East play. On Thursday, Kansas State takes a No. 17 ranking against Boston College in the East Regional semifinals at Providence, R.I.

Coach Jack Hartman is aware of his team's shortcomings—inexperience and size. But he knows it has heart. "There's something about these kids," he said. "They've got good intangibles, good character, good dedication. These things have allowed them to get the maximum."

The other East Regional semifinal game will be between No. 20 Syracuse, 21-7, and No. 6 North Carolina, 22-7.

In the Mideast Regionals at Dayton, Ohio, fifth-ranked Kentucky, 23-4, will meet Central Michigan, 21-5, and unbeaten Indiana, 30-0, will face Oregon State, 19-10.

In the West, at Portland, Ore., it will be seventh-ranked Arizona State, 24-3, vs. NevadaLas Vegas, 23-4, and Montana, 21-6, vs. perennial powerhouse UCLA, 24-3 and No. 2 behind Indiana.

Despite UCLA's reputation, unranked Montana is not totally intimidated. "We're going in a little apprehensive but not scared," said Coach Jud Heathcote.

Top-ranked Indiana is apprehensive, too, taking nothing for granted about Oregon State.

"Oregon State is capable of beating any team in the country," Hoosier Coach Bobby Knight said. "They beat UCLA this year and they beat 'em last year, too. That shows you what kind of team they are."

The eight winners of Thurday's play will meet on Saturday to determine who will advance to San Diego for the semifinals and final.

'Team Concept In NCAA Meet'

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

The NCAA basketball tournament this season looks more wide open than any in recent years, according to Mort Olshan, who has been rating college basketball for The Lincoln Star this season.

Yet, Olshan picks undefeated and No. 1 ranked Indiana to defeat UCLA in the championship game, 79-74, on March 31 in San Diego.

"This year, emphasis is on the team concept exemplified by top-ranked Indiana," Olshan says. "But the injury to their All-American forward Scott May narrows the gap between the undefeated Hoosiers and their pursuers."

Olshan points out that history corroborates the definite impression that the best team usually wins, noting that the last time a "sleeper" won the championship was in 1966 when Texas Western (now Texas El Paso) slipped up on Kentucky.

"As a rule, the team that plays hard defense rates a solid edge," Olshan says. "Now and then a run-and-gun club will get a hot hand and blow the enemy off the court. Rarely will it explode against a smart, hard-nosed defense that takes away its rhythm."

That's his basic reason for picking Indiana and UCLA to work their way to the title game. "UCLA's spectacular offensive feats prior to this season overshadowed the excellence of the defense of this nine-time national champion," Olshan points out.

Olshan picks Louisville to defeat Maryland for the Midwest Regional title. Then he sees UCLA topping the Cardinals in the first-round game at the finals in the International Sports Arena in San Diego March 29. Indiana's opponent that day would be North Carolina, in Olshan's opinion.

Here's how he picks Thursday night games at the four regionals:

Midwest — Louisville 81, Cincinnati 75; Maryland 87, Notre Dame 81.

West — UCLA 82, Montana 60; Arizona State 88, Nevada-Las Vegas 81.

East — North Carolina 78, Syracuse 70; Boston College 74, Kansas State 66.

Mideast — Kentucky 86, Central Michigan 70; Indiana 76, Oregon State 62.

Olshan's handicapping of the final 16 looks like this: Indiana 8-5 odds; UCLA 5-1; Maryland and Louisville 8-1; North Carolina 10-1; Arizona State and Kentucky 15-1; Notre Dame 20-1; Boston College and Syracuse 25-1; Cincinnati and UN Las Vegas 40-1; Kansas State and Oregon State 50-1; Montana and Central Michigan 100-1.

Lincoln-area basketball fans will be able to watch the Notre Dame-Maryland game on KOLN-TV (Channel 10) tonight at 10:30 p.m.

Bernstein Lifts UNO To Victory

Edinburg, Tex. (UPI) — Rich Bernstein pitched a four hitter and hit a triple to lead the University of Nebraska-Omaha to a 3-1 victory over Pan American University Wednesday night, breaking the Broncs' 20 game winning streak.

Bernstein, a righthander, scattered four singles, walked five and struck out four. He ended the game with the bases loaded on a fly ball.

Nebraska is 1-1 for the year and Pan Am is 21-3.

Bernstein's triple lead off the fourth and he scored the deciding run on a Pan Am infield error

Ron Edquiest, 4-1, was the loser. All three Nebraska runs were unearned on three errors.

Providence Impressive In NIT

NEW YORK (AP) — The Providence Friars have found togetherness, and as a result are tearing everyone else apart in the National Invitation Tournament.

"We're not the same basketball team that we were at the beginning of the season," says Coach Dave Gavitt.

That was obvious Tuesday night when Providence put Pittsburgh away—and put the Madison Square Garden crowd to sleep—with a clinical 101-80 victory in the NIT's quarter-finals.

It was the Friars' second impressive victory in this 38th annual post-season tourney and the second time that they hit 100 points in the last three games. The Friars upset 14thranked Clemson in the NIT's opening round Saturday 91-86.

"Everybody is loose now," says Gavitt, who claims that the team has come together as a result of recent bus rides.

"We've been taking buses to our games instead of flyin ' Gavitt says, "and as a result, the guys have really gotten to know each other. They've been getting on each other in a good-natured way. It was just a matter of time getting adjusted to each other's styles."

Providence, a team with great promise but an early disappointment, lost 10 games during the regular season. Included in those were two losses to St. John's, the Friars' opponent in Saturday's semifinals.

"We had problems early in the year because everyone kept thinking Marvin Barnes and Ernie DiGregorio were still around to pull games out for us," Gavitt notes. "But they're certainly not thinking that way now."

St. John's beat Manhattan 57-56 in Tuesday night's other quarter-final game to get a shot at the Friars. Lou Carnesecca, coach of the Redmen, was too busy tasting Tuesday night's victory to worry about Saturday.

"Let's enjoy this one first," said Carnesecca. "I'll go home tonight and think about Providence tomorrow."

The other semifinal teams will be decided in quarter-final games Thursday night, when South Carolina meets Princeton and Oral Roberts plays Oregon.

South Carolina advanced to the quarters with a 71-61 victory over Connecticut in the opening round. Princeton got there by routing Holy Cross 8463. Oral Roberts nipped Memphis State 97-95 and Oregon stopped St. Peter's of New Jersey 85-79 in their opening-round games.

White Sox Capture Fifth Straight Win

By Associated Press

Buddy Bradford continued his long-ball hitting Wednesday, smashing his fifth and sixth home runs of the spring and driving in six runs to lead the Chicago White Sox to a 14-7 romp over the St. Louis Cardinals.

It was the Chicago's fifth straight exhibition victory as the two team combined for a total of 30 hits.

In St. Petersburg, Fla., Clay Kirby and Fred Norman combined to hurl the Cincinnati Reds to a five-hit 1-0 victory over the New York Mets. The game's lone run scored on Johnny Bench's double, a sacrifice bunt and an infield out.

Ferguson Jenkins worked four scoreless innings as the Texas Rangers scored three runs in the fourth to defeat the Houston Astros 5-2. Jenkins allowed just three hits while striking out four.

Bloop singles by Larry Cox and Lee Lacy provided the margin of victory for the Philadelphia Phillies and the Los Angeles Dodgers, respectively. Cox knocked home Don Hahn in the 13th inning as the Phillies edged the Boston Red Sox 5-4.

Lacy's hit broke a 3-3 tie in the ninth as the Dodgers downed the Montreal Expos 4-3.

A 10th-inning homer by Leon Roberts lifted the Detroit Tigers to an 11-10 victory over the Kansas City Royals. There were eight home runs in the game, six by the Royals.

Eight extra base hits, including a home run by Mike Hegan and two doubles by Pedro Garcia, powered the Milwaukee Brewers over the California 8-4, the Angels' first loss in six Cactus League starts. Garcia had four hits in all and Milwaukee's Hank Aaron had a double and a run batted in.

Chicago's Bobby Locker walked Mike Ivie with the bases loaded and two out in the ninth to give the San Diego Padres a 5-4 victory over the Cubs. Chicago collected only four hits off five San Diego pitchers, but collected four runs in the fourth off Alan Foster, three on a triple by George Mitterwald.

San Francisco beat the Oakland A's 7-2. Derrel Thomas hit a two-run double in the third inning to tie the score at 2-2, rookie catcher Marc Hill scored Gary Matthews with a sacrifice fly for the go-ahead run and Bobby Murcer tripled home Ed Goodson in the fifth inning.

It's All Outdoors

By Tom Vint
Outdoor Editor

Good Reading, Field Aids

When I get tired of puncturing my fingers with fish hooks while rearranging my tackle box, I try to turn to a book or two until the sores heal themselves.

As always, a host of good outdoor reading is available but some works are more "helpful" than others when it boils down to improving yourself in the silds.

The first such guide crossing the desk of late is Olaus J. Murie's second edition of "A Field Guide to Animal Tracks," Houghton Mifflin Company publishers. Another professional tracker couldn't have done better telling it all about animal tracks.

As one of the Peterson Field Guide Series, the paper or cloth backed Animal Tracks Guide illustrates tracks and wildlife signs to look for from the Arctic to Central America.

It has a handy starting point, "Key to Tracks" with a general distribution of areas the animals and tracks are likely to be found. The key lists hoof, paw and claw types for the bear family, raccoon and ringtail families, weasels, dogs, cats, rodents, rabbits and the hoofed animals. Each has a general size listed and reference to more detailed information listed later in the book.

If you're like most outdoorsmen, you'll spot a track you think might know but not be quite sure of while in the field. Here's your chance to be sure. The Field Guide is small enough to make carrying around convenient, or at least no further away than the glove compartment of the car.

Animal tracking is part of outdoor living in my book so the Field Guide to Animal Tracks fits right in.

Picture Book Records

And while you're busy tracking down those wild creatures, it's good to have a camera along to record the event for all times That's where Erwin A. Bauer's "Outdoor Photography," an Outdoor Life Book published by E.P. Dutton, comes in handy.

In outdoor circles, particularly outdoor writing circles, Bauer's name is commonplace In fact, if Erwin A. Bauer's name isn't brought up when talking of outdoor photography, it's very unusual.

Bauer, a regular contributor to Outdoor Life Magazine, has made a better than average living taking outdoor pictures. He's made most of the mistakes outdoor photography creates for the picture taker and passes the wisdom along in his revised and updated book.

Bauer tells it all. He looks at camera types, film types, lenses, filter aids, accessories, all the gear. He gives the pros and cons of each of the items then tells you how to use them.

Bauer not only tells us how but shows us how with a selection of his photographs He takes and tells how to shoot animals, birds, plants, trees and people He lets you in on a few secrets all of us need to remember when taking outdoor shots, like making use of the sun, fill-flash, exposures and depth perception

He even takes on the "sometimes" outdoor photography of aerial and underwater shots, outlining the things one might do to better record his or her outdoor trips forever on film

But if there is one single most important thing Bauer stresses in outdoor photography, it is good photography takes time, patience and practice After soaking in his years of wisdom, the rest is up to your steady hand and a practiced eye.

CELEBRATE EASTER WITH Wine

For almost two thousand years Easter has been celebrated thruout the Christian world as both a solemn and joyous holiday. Wine has played a most important part in these celebrations; since it is identified with the blood of Christ in the mystery of the Eucharist. MITCH TAVLIN—the Wine Merchant in Lincoln—has the wine which is appropriate with the many different foods prepared for this happy occasion. It need not be an expensive Import Classic—there are hundreds of inexpensive wines which may be enjoyed by all members of the family—Champagne is ideal since it may be served with any food and can be served from apertif to dessert—and MITCH TAVLIN has many varieties of both Charmat process and bottle fermented Champagne to offer. Remember—MITCH TAVLIN and his Associates are all you need to know about wine. We also carry a full line of Rabinnically approved wines for Passover. Whether you are shopping for Spirits, Beer or Wine—Nobody—but Nobody undersells MITCH TAVLIN—you just can't beat the service; and there is plenty of free parking.

Morning Briefing

A Sports Roundup

BASKETBALL

Ted Owens, head basketball coach at Kansas for the past 11 years, has had his contract extended for three years.

Indiana coach Bobby Knight has been named Big Ten coach of the year for the second time in the last three seasons, and one of his players, Steve Green, was named to the league's all-acedemic team.

Brian Magid, a 6-3 guard who led his high school to the Maryland State championship, signed an Atlantic Coast Conference letter-of intent with Maryland.

A spokesman for Syracuse University said the school would not join a proposed eight-team Eastern independent collegiate basketball league.

FOOTBALL

Kearney State said 12 high school football players, including five Central Ten Conference standouts, have signed letters-of-intent to join the Antelope grid squad.

Among the list of prospects were Ord seniors Bill Gogan Jr., Douglas Peterson, and Gregory Kallhoff. Other Central Ten players were Dan Cordsen, Central City and Greg Rocke of Crete. Gary Ray Billesbach, Grand Island and Wayne Krueger, a high school All-American from Columbus were also included.

Los Angeles Rams' running back Jim Bertelsen says he knows nothing about any gambling at an Austin restaurant he recently bought into. Officials of the NFL said they are investigating Bertelsen's involvement in the restaurant where former Texas quarterback James Street was arrested for gambling.

Washington State assistant football coach Ron Mims was ordered to spend 10 days in the Whitman County Jail after he pleaded guilty to assault charges.

The San Francisco 49ers of the NFL have added Lew Erber to the coaching staff. Erber will work primarily with tight ends and receivers on blocking techniques.

The sale of public stock in the Birmingham Vulcans (formerly Americans) was announced Wednesday. The prospectus described the stock as "a highly speculative venture."

Tom Vaughn, a former standout running back at Iowa State, has been added to the Cyclone's football staff.

Steve Ortmayer, who has been an assistant coach at Georgia Tech and Colorado, was named special teams coach for the Kansas City Chiefs.

BASEBALL

Former Cy Young Award winner Denny McLain will do the play-by-play broadcast of the entire 1975 Iowa Oaks schedule.

Base-stealing record holder Lou Brock of the St. Louis Cardinals was named as winner of the Roberto Clemente award, given annaully to the player who best exemplifies the game of baseball on and off the field.

A large bursal sac was removed from near the lower tip of the left shoulder of Philadelphia Phillies relief pitcher Tug McGraw in a 45 minute operation.

OTHER SPORTS

A $250 fine levied against each of nine jockeys for failing to fulfill a riding engagement was affirmed by the New York State Racing and Wagering board. The jockeys contended that rainfall had made the turf unsafe and they wanted the race switched to the dirt course.

The New York State Athletic Commission will grant licenses to two more women, making them the second and third females to be licensed as boxing judges in the State's history.

Karnelia Ender, 16, the world's most successful girl swimmer, added her 11th and 12th records when her East German team met the Soviet Union in Dresden last week.

Austrian Karl Cordin set the pace in the qualifying trials for the men's World Cup downhill scheduled for this Friday at Ortisei, Italy.

U.S. Open champion Hale Irwin is a prime choice to break through this week in the $150,000 Greater Jacksonville Open golf tournament. The 72-hole test will begin Thursday.

Regulations banning Pennsylvania schoolgirls from interscholastic sports such as football were ruled unconstitutional by the Commonwealth Court.

The United States defeated winless Italy in the fourth round of the World Curling championships in Perth, Scotland.

Elroy Hirsch, whose football prowess earned him the name of "Crazy Legs" has filed a $2.95 million lawsuit against an athletic equipment firm for marketing "Crazy Legs" football pants. Hirsch, now athletic director at Wisconsin, filed a similar suit in 1973 opposing the marketing of a shaving cream for women's legs called "Crazy Legs."

The organizing committee for the 1976 Summer Olympics has announced that South Africa will not be invited to participate in pre-Olympic competition in Montreal this summer.

Victor Galindez holder of the WBA light heavyweight title, arrived in Johannesburg to defend his title against Pierre Fourie April 5.

Buzzsaw Yamabe pounded out a unanimous decision over Fred Pastor in a 10-round lightweight bout in Honolulu.

In the companion 10-rounder, Denver heavyweight Leroy Jones used his longer reach to unanimously decision Scrap Iron Johnson.

Lawsuits seeking $160,000 have been field in Superior Court against hockey standout Tom Lysiak of the Atlanta Flames in connection with a traffic accident.

Phil Delavan, head track and cross country coach at Emporia State, had been named the college division referee for the Kansas Relays April 16-19.

The U.S. National hockey team beat Norway 5-2 in Oslo. The game was a first in a warmup series for the Americans, who will play in the World Championship "A" group tournament in West Germany next month.

Muhammad Ali sparred six rounds and then said that he was not satisfied with his condition or with his training but that he was ready to beat Chuck Wepner in their heavyweight title bout Monday in Cleveland.

Heavyweight Ron Lyle was jailed on $5,500 bond, charged with two counts of assault and felony menacing arising from an argument with his wife last week.

Bernstein Lifts UNO To Victory

Edinburg, Tex. (UPI) — Rich Bernstein pitched a four hitter and hit a triple to lead the University of Nebraska-Omaha to a 3-1 victory over Pan American University Wednesday night, breaking the Broncs' 20 game winning streak.

Bernstein, a righthander, scattered four singles, walked five and struck out four. He ended the game with the bases loaded on a fly ball.

Nebraska is 1-1 for the year and Pan Am is 21-3.

Bernstein's triple lead off the fourth and he scored the deciding run on a Pan Am infield error.

Ron Edquiest, 4-1, was the loser. All three Nebraska runs were unearned on three errors.

Providence Impressive In NIT

NEW YORK (AP) — The Providence Friars have found togetherness, and as a result are tearing everyone else apart in the National Invitation Tournament.

"We're not the same basketball team that we were at the beginning of the season," says Coach Dave Gavitt.

That was obvious Tuesday night when Providence put Pittsburgh away—and put the Madison Square Garden crowd to sleep—with a clinical 101-80 victory in the NIT's quarter-finals.

It was the Friars' second impressive victory in this 38th annual post-season tourney and the second time that they hit 100 points in the last three games. The Friars upset 14thranked Clemson in the NIT's opening round Saturday 91-86.

"Everybody is loose now," says Gavitt, who claims that the team has come together as a result of recent bus rides.

"We've been taking buses to our games instead of flyin ' Gavitt says, "and as a result, the guys have really gotten to know each other. They've been getting on each other in a good-natured way. It was just a matter of time getting adjusted to each other's styles."

Providence, a team with great promise but an early disappointment, lost 10 games during the regular season. Included in those were two losses to St. John's, the Friars' opponent in Saturday's semifinals.

"We had problems early in the year because everyone kept thinking Marvin Barnes and Ernie DiGregorio were still around to pull games out for us," Gavitt notes. "But they're certainly not thinking that way now."

St. John's beat Manhattan 57-56 in Tuesday night's other quarter-final game to get a shot at the Friars. Lou Carnesecca, coach of the Redmen, was too busy tasting Tuesday night's victory to worry about Saturday.

"Let's enjoy this one first," said Carnesecca. "I'll go home tonight and think about Providence tomorrow."

The other semifinal teams will be decided in quarter-final games Thursday night, when South Carolina meets Princeton and Oral Roberts plays Oregon.

South Carolina advanced to the quarters with a 71-61 victory over Connecticut in the opening round. Princeton got there by routing Holy Cross 8463. Oral Roberts nipped Memphis State 97-95 and Oregon stopped St. Peter's of New Jersey 85-79 in their opening-round games.

White Sox Capture Fifth Straight Win

By Associated Press

Buddy Bradford continued his long-ball hitting Wednesday, smashing his fifth and sixth home runs of the spring and driving in six runs to lead the Chicago White Sox to a 14-7 romp over the St. Louis Cardinals.

It was the Chicago's fifth straight exhibition victory as the two team combined for a total of 30 hits.

In St. Petersburg, Fla., Clay Kirby and Fred Norman combined to hurl the Cincinnati Reds to a five-hit 1-0 victory over the New York Mets. The game's lone run scored on Johnny Bench's double, a sacrifice bunt and an infield out.

Ferguson Jenkins worked four scoreless innings as the Texas Rangers scored three runs in the fourth to defeat the Houston Astros 5-2. Jenkins allowed just three hits while striking out four.

Bloop singles by Larry Cox and Lee Lacy provided the margin of victory for the Philadelphia Phillies and the Los Angeles Dodgers, respectively. Cox knocked home Don Hahn in the 13th inning as the Phillies edged the Boston Red Sox 5-4.

Lacy's hit broke a 3-3 tie in the ninth as the Dodgers downed the Montreal Expos 4-3.

A 10th-inning homer by Leon Roberts lifted the Detroit Tigers to an 11-10 victory over the Kansas City Royals. There were eight home runs in the game, six by the Royals.

Eight extra base hits, including a home run by Mike Hegan and two doubles by Pedro Garcia, powered the Milwaukee Brewers over the California 8-4, the Angels' first loss in six Cactus League starts. Garcia had four hits in all and Milwaukee's Hank Aaron had a double and a run batted in.

Chicago's Bobby Locker walked Mike Ivie with the bases loaded and two out in the ninth to give the San Diego Padres a 5-4 victory over the Cubs. Chicago collected only four hits off five San Diego pitchers, but collected four runs in the fourth off Alan Foster, three on a triple by George Mitterwald.

San Francisco beat the Oakland A's 7-2. Derrel Thomas hit a two-run double in the third inning to tie the score at 2-2, rookie catcher Marc Hill scored Gary Matthews with a sacrifice fly for the go-ahead run and Bobby Murcer tripled home Ed Goodson in the fifth inning.

CELEBRATE EASTER WITH Wine

For almost two thousand years Easter has been celebrated thruout the Christian world as both a solemn and joyous holiday. Wine has played a most important part in these celebrations; since it is identified with the blood of Christ in the mystery of the Eucharist. MITCH TAVLIN—the Wine Merchant in Lincoln—has the wine which is appropriate with the many different foods prepared for this happy occasion. It need not be an expensive Import Classic—there are hundreds of inexpensive wines which may be enjoyed by all members of the family—Champagne is ideal since it may be served with any food and can be served from apertif to dessert—and MITCH TAVLIN has many varieties of both Charmat process and bottle fermented Champagne to offer. Remember—MITCH TAVLIN and his Associates are all you need to know about wine. We also carry a full line of Rabinnically approved wines for Passover. Whether you are shopping for Spirits, Beer or Wine—Nobody—but Nobody undersells MITCH TAVLIN—you just can't beat the service; and there is plenty of free parking.

It's All Outdoors

By Tom Vint
Outdoor Editor

Good Reading, Field Aids

When I get tired of puncturing my fingers with fish hooks while rearranging my tackle box, I try to turn to a book or two until the sores heal themselves.

As always, a host of good outdoor reading is available but some works are more "helpful" than others when it boils down to improving yourself in the silds.

The first such guide crossing the desk of late is Olaus J. Murie's second edition of "A Field Guide to Animal Tracks," Houghton Mifflin Company publishers. Another professional tracker couldn't have done better telling it all about animal tracks.

As one of the Peterson Field Guide Series, the paper or cloth backed Animal Tracks Guide illustrates tracks and wildlife signs to look for from the Arctic to Central America.

It has a handy starting point, "Key to Tracks" with a general distribution of areas the animals and tracks are likely to be found. The key lists hoof, paw and claw types for the bear family, raccoon and ringtail families, weasels, dogs, cats, rodents, rabbits and the hoofed animals. Each has a general size listed and reference to more detailed information listed later in the book.

If you're like most outdoorsmen, you'll spot a track you think might know but not be quite sure of while in the field. Here's your chance to be sure. The Field Guide is small enough to make carrying around convenient, or at least no further away than the glove compartment of the car.

Animal tracking is part of outdoor living in my book so the Field Guide to Animal Tracks fits right in.

Picture Book Records

And while you're busy tracking down those wild creatures, it's good to have a camera along to record the event for all times. That's where Erwin A. Bauer's "Outdoor Photography," an Outdoor Life Book published by E.P. Dutton, comes in handy.

In outdoor circles, particularly outdoor writing circles, Bauer's name is commonplace. In fact, if Erwin A. Bauer's name isn't brought up when talking of outdoor photography, it's very unusual.

Bauer, a regular contributor to Outdoor Life Magazine, has made a better than average living taking outdoor pictures. He's made most of the mistakes outdoor photography creates for the picture taker and passes the wisdom along in his revised and updated book.

Bauer tells it all. He looks at camera types, film types, lenses, filter aids, accessories, all the gear. He gives the pros and cons of each of the items then tells you how to use them.

Bauer not only tells us how but shows us how with a selection of his photographs. He takes and tells how to shoot animals, birds, plants, trees and people. He lets you in on a few secrets all of us need to remember when taking outdoor shots, like making use of the sun, fill-flash, exposures and depth perception.

He even takes on the "sometimes" outdoor photography of aerial and underwater shots, outlining the things one might do to better record his or her outdoor trips forever on film.

But if there is one single most important thing Bauer stresses in outdoor photography, it is good photography takes time, patience and practice. After soaking in his years of wisdom, the rest is up to your steady hand and a practiced eye.

Villa Fire Gains First 1975 Win

Grand Island — Circle S Stable's Villa Fire scored his first 1975 victory here Wednesday in the featured seventh race at Fonner Park.

Ridden by Gary Collier, the 4-year-old gelding gained the lead rounding the far turn of the 6-furlong jaunt that attracted seven allowance runners. Villa Fire took the lead from pacesetting Vickies Gigi and went on to win by one length.

Villa Fire, who ran second to For Good Times here on Feb. 28, returned $5.00, $3.00 and $3.00. A.D. Turner's Tosoro placed for $3.00 and $2.60 while C.F. Mettenbrink's Lake Nail showed for $3.60.

It was the second win of the day for Collier who scored earlier aboard H. Kleinschmidt's Go Lite Go ($31.60) in the third race.

Cowboy Checks Improve Rodeo

North Platte, Neb. (UPI) — This year's Buffalo Bill Rodeo could be the best ever partly because leaders for the first half of the rodeo season will pick up their payoff checks here just prior to the event, a spokesman for the Rodeo Cowby's Association said Tuesday.

Randy Witte of the Denver-based RCA said $47,500 in Winston Rodeo awards would be paid out June 17, just prior to the opening of the Nebraskaland Days Buffalo Bill Rodeo.

The top 10 cowboys in each of six events, according to RCA championship standings in competition through June 2, will receive prize money.

First place money for each event is $2,000. Winston will award $135,000 in prize money this year, Witte Said.

Husker Softball Season Opens

The University of Nebraska women's softball season is scheduled to open Thursday by hosting College of St. Mary's in a 5 p.m. contest behind the Women's Physical Education building.

The coach for this year's team is Terry Baumbach.

Commission Issues Ice Shanty Notice

Fishermen who have ice fishing shanties on Nebraska lakes should move them soon, warns the Game and Parks Commission.

Ice on the lakes is thawing rapidly, and the shanties will be dropping into the water. Anglers are advised to use extreme caution when recovering them, since warm weather has made ice treacherous.

Former LHS Diver Qualifies

Madison, Wis. — Marc Stiner, former Lincoln High state diving champion and record-holder, has qualified for the NCAA Swimming Championships at Cleveland, Ohio, Mar. 27-29.

Stiner, a Michigan State sophomore, last weekend just missed a spot in the national AAU meet in regional competition at Wisconsin.

He finished sixth among 55 competitors in high board competition and 11th among 73 competitors on the low board. The top five qualified for the national AAU meet.

Women Golfers Hold Banquet

The Lincoln Women's Municipal Golf Association will hold a special membership and organization banquet at East Hills at 11:30 a.m. Saturday.

Anyone interested in joining the association and attending the meeting and banquet should contact golf professional Bob Schuchart at Holmes Park.

Little Chiefs Set Spring Registration

Once the sun comes out and the snow melts, the Little Chiefs baseball program surfaces before the spring flowers.

Registration time — for an expanded program which will involve both boys and girls — will be held next Monday at 11 Lincoln schools.

From 5:30 until 7:30, registration will be conducted at Irving Junior High, Lefler Junior High, Whittier Junior High, Everett Junior High, Northeast High, Arnold Heights, Belmont, Calvert, Holmes, Meadow Lane and Ruth Pyrtle grade schools.

Organized since 1953, the Little Chiefs baseball program — a non profit group — has been administered by 30 local volunteers.

Until last summer, the program was only for boys, age 8 through 12. Last year, on an experimental basis, several girls teams were formed. In addition to the usual 2,700 boys, about 225 girls also participated.

At the same time, the City Park and Recreation Department was organizing the Ponytail Softball League. In order to provide one larger, more meaningful league for girls, the Little Chiefs and the City Park Department are joining forces. They will co-sponsor both the Little Chiefs baseball for boys and the Ponytail Softball for girls.

All children between the ages of 8 and 12 (as of June 1, 1975) are eligible. There will be a registration fee of $5 to provide equipment, uniforms, and insurance coverage.

League games are scheduled to be played twice a week, beginning June 9. Players will be divided into two groups, 9-10 year olds, who will play on Monday and Wednesday evenings; and 11-12 year olds, who will play their games on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

The bulk of the Ponytail Softball will be played at Muny Field starting at 5 p.m.

Villa Fire Gains First 1975 Win

Grand Island — Circle S Stable's Villa Fire scored his first 1975 victory here Wednesday in the featured seventh race at Fonner Park.

Ridden by Gary Collier, the 4-year-old gelding gained the lead rounding the far turn of the 6-furlong jaunt that attracted seven allowance runners. Villa Fire took the lead from pacesetting Vickies Gigi and went on to win by one length.

Villa Fire, who ran second to For Good Times here on Feb. 28, returned $5.00, $3.00 and $3.00. A.D. Turner's Tosoro placed for $3.00 and $2.60 while C.F. Mettenbrink's Lake Nail showed for $3.60.

It was the second win of the day for Collier who scored earlier aboard H. Kleinschmidt's Go Lite Go ($31.60) in the third race.

Graded Handicap Picks 4 Winners

Mark Gordon's Wednesday graded handicap for the Fonner Park races selected four winners.

Winning choices included Royal Ranch ($6.00) in the second, Windy Ain't It ($4.60) in the fourth, Villa Fire ($5.00) in the seventh and Thunder Mug ($5.40) in the ninth.

Cowboy Checks Improve Rodeo

North Platte, Neb. (UPI) — This year's Buffalo Bill Rodeo could be the best ever partly because leaders for the first half of the rodeo season will pick up their payoff checks here just prior to the event, a spokesman for the Rodeo Cowby's Association said Tuesday.

Randy Witte of the Denver-based RCA said $47,500 in Winston Rodeo awards would be paid out June 17, just prior to the opening of the Nebraskaland Days Buffalo Bill Rodeo.

The top 10 cowboys in each of six events, according to RCA championship standings in competition through June 2, will receive prize money.

First place money for each event is $2,000. Winston will award $135,000 in prize money this year, Witte Said.

Husker Softball Season Opens

The University of Nebraska women's softball season is scheduled to open Thursday by hosting College of St. Mary's in a 5 p.m. contest behind the Women's Physical Education building.

The coach for this year's team is Terry Baumbach.

Commission Issues Ice Shanty Notice

Fishermen who have ice fishing shanties on Nebraska lakes should move them soon, warns the Game and Parks Commission.

Ice on the lakes is thawing rapidly, and the shanties will be dropping into the water. Anglers are advised to use extreme caution when recovering them, since warm weather has made ice treacherous.

Former LHS Diver Qualifies

Madison, Wis. — Marc Stiner, former Lincoln High state diving champion and record-holder, has qualified for the NCAA Swimming Championships at Cleveland, Ohio, Mar. 27-29.

Stiner, a Michigan State sophomore, last weekend just missed a spot in the national AAU meet in regional competition at Wisconsin.

He finished sixth among 55 competitors in high board competition and 11th among 73 competitors on the low board. The top five qualified for the national AAU meet.

Women Golfers Hold Banquet

The Lincoln Women's Municipal Golf Association will hold a special membership and organization banquet at East Hills at 11:30 a.m. Saturday.

Anyone interested in joining the association and attending the meeting and banquet should contact golf professional Bob Schuchart at Holmes Park.

Little Chiefs Set Spring Registration

Once the sun comes out and the snow melts, the Little Chiefs baseball program surfaces before the spring flowers.

Registration time — for an expanded program which will involve both boys and girls — will be held next Monday at 11 Lincoln schools.

From 5:30 until 7:30, registration will be conducted at Irving Junior High, Lefler Junior High, Whittier Junior High, Everett Junior High, Northeast High, Arnold Heights, Belmont, Calvert, Holmes, Meadow Lane and Ruth Pyrtle grade schools.

Organized since 1953, the Little Chiefs baseball program — a non profit group — has been administered by 30 local volunteers.

Until last summer, the program was only for boys, age 8 through 12. Last year, on an experimental basis, several girls teams were formed. In addition to the usual 2,700 boys, about 225 girls also participated.

At the same time, the City Park and Recreation Department was organizing the Ponytail Softball League. In order to provide one larger, more meaningful league for girls, the Little Chiefs and the City Park Department are joining forces. They will cosponsor both the Little Chiefs baseball for boys and the Ponytail Softball for girls.

All children between the ages of 8 and 12 (as of June 1, 1975) are eligible. There will be a registration fee of $5 to provide equipment, uniforms, and insurance coverage.

League games are scheduled to be played twice a week, beginning June 9. Players will be divided into two groups, 9-10 year olds, who will play on Monday and Wednesday evenings; and 11-12 year olds, who will play their games on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

The bulk of the Ponytail Softball will be played at Muny Field starting at 5 p.m.

Growers Win Partial Victory In Sugar Suit

Denver (AP) — Sugar belt growers won a partial victory in their federal court battle against Great Western United Corp. Tuesday.

U.S. District Court Judge Fred Winner ruled that the initial payment to growers should have averaged $51.02 instead of the $26.25 paid by the company last December.

But Winner did not rule on the growers' request for damages and attorneys' fees. He set a hearing for March 24 on that issue.

The class action lawsuit was filed by William A. Davis of Goodland, Kan., on behalf of himself and 4,000 other growers who sell beets to the company.

The suit sought a total of $246 million in damages and back payments.

Winner ruled the growers should have received 70% of the net return realized on the sugar crop, instead of the 40% figure used by the company. The growers had asked that the payments be based on a 85% figure.

Downturn Continues In Market

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street's current downturn, fueled by profit taking and new signs of economic weakness, moved into its second day Wednesday as prices dropped across a broad front in active trading.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down over 13 points midway through the session, closed down 9.93 at 769.48, the sharpest one-day decline since Feb. 25 when the index fell over 17 points.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange fell to 19.03 million shares, the lowest in a week, and declining issues swamped advances 1,008 to 395 among the 1,798 issues traded.

The Standard and Poor's 500-stock index dropped .79 to 84.34 while the Big Board's own composite index dipped .41 to 44.69.

"The market has now reached an area where there is a larger supply of shares. More and more people are thinking that the rally has gone about long and far enough," said Lucien Hooper of Thompson & McKinnon Auchincloss kohlmeyer.

Prior to Tuesday's session, when the Dow lost 7.12, the index had risen 28 points in three months with hardly a significant correction.

"Prices are bending under the weight of financial and political problems," said Robert Stovall of Reynolds Securities.

The problems, which Stovall said were being used as an excuse for profit taking, included the continued weak housing market, the devaluation of the dollar overseas, political uncertainties in Southeast Asia, and government reports Wednesday showing a large balance of payments deficit in the final three months of 1974.

Most groups on the Big Board were lower, with only intermittent strength among the glamors. Digital Equipment gained 1⅞ to 88⅞, Polaroid rose ½ to 24⅜, and Fairchild Camera advanced ¾ to 32¾.

Commodities Turn Stronger

Chicago (AP) — A flurry of new buying set off waves of short covering and turned most farm commodity futures stronger on the close of the Chicago Board of Trade Wednesday.

Virtually all of the midsession declines were eliminated.

There appeared to be no other reason for the turnaround. The new buying appeared to begin in soybeans where two of the major export houses bought deferred, or new crop, options. It was assumed by the trade that the houses had sold soybeans for future delivery.

Growers Win Partial Victory In Sugar Suit

Denver (AP) — Sugar belt growers won a partial victory in their federal court battle against Great Western United Corp. Tuesday.

U.S. District Court Judge Fred Winner ruled that the initial payment to growers should have averaged $51.02 instead of the $26.25 paid by the company last December.

But Winner did not rule on the growers' request for damages and attorneys' fees. He set a hearing for March 24 on that issue.

The class action lawsuit was filed by William A. Davis of Goodland, Kan., on behalf of himself and 4,000 other growers who sell beets to the company.

The suit sought a total of $246 million in damages and back payments.

Winner ruled the growers should have received 70% of the net return realized on the sugar crop, instead of the 40% figure used by the company. The growers had asked that the payments be based on a 85% figure.

Downturn Continues In Market

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street's current downturn, fueled by profit taking and new signs of economic weakness, moved into its second day Wednesday as prices dropped across a broad front in active trading.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down over 13 points midway through the session, closed down 9.93 at 769.48, the sharpest one-day decline since Feb. 25 when the index fell over 17 points.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange fell to 19.03 million shares, the lowest in a week, and declining issues swamped advances 1,008 to 395 among the 1,798 issues traded.

The Standard and Poor's 500-stock index dropped .79 to 84.34 while the Big Board's own composite index dipped .41 to 44.69.

"The market has now reached an area where there is a larger supply of shares. More and more people are thinking that the rally has gone about long and far enough," said Lucien Hooper of Thompson & McKinnon Auchincloss kohlmeyer.

Prior to Tuesday's session, when the Dow lost 7.12, the index had risen 208 points in three months with hardly a significant correction.

"Prices are bending under the weight of financial and political problems," said Robert Stovall of Reynolds Securities.

The problems, which Stovall said were being used as an excuse for profit taking, included the continued weak housing market, the devaluation of the dollar overseas, political uncertainties in Southeast Asia, and government reports Wednesday showing a large balance of payments deficit in the final three months of 1974.

Most groups on the Big Board were lower, with only intermittent strength among the glamors. Digital Equipment gained 1⅞ to 88⅞, Polaroid rose ½ to 24⅜, and Fairchild Camera advanced ¾ to 32¾.

Commodities Turn Stronger

Chicago (AP) — A flurry of new buying set off waves of short covering and turned most farm commodity futures stronger on the close of the Chicago Board of Trade Wednesday.

Virtually all of the midsession declines were eliminated.

There appeared to be no other reason for the turnaround. The new buying appeared to begin in soybeans where two of the major export houses bought deferred, or new crop, options. It was assumed by the trade that the houses had sold soybeans for future delivery.

Fritz Given Two Years In Prison

Robert Earl Fritz a prison escapee accused of numerous felonies during a two-state crime spree one year ago was sentenced to two years in the Nebraska Prison Complex by Judge Samuel Van Pelt

Fritz 35 pleaded guilty March 5 in Lancaster District Court to escaping from prison and stealing an automobile

Fritz 35 pleaded guilty March 5 in Lancaster District Court to escaping from prison and stealing an automobile In sentencing Fritz to two years on each count Van Pelt said the prison sentences would run concurrently but consecutive to other time Fritz is serving

Fritz is currently serving a 13 to 50-year sentence in Kansas for aggravated burglary rape and felony theft and Monday was sentenced to a concurrent 50-year term for robbery and shooting with intent to kill wound or maim, in Nemaha County Court

Standing before Van Pelt wearing handcuffs and leg chains Fritz said You mean after Kansas time is done I gotta come back here and serve two years ridiculous

According to Kansas prison records Fritz is not eligible for parole there until at least 1981 A more likely 'conditional release date' is 1999

Fritz has also been charged with six felony counts in Garden County

Fritz escaped from the Nebraska Penal Complex in Lincoln Jan 31, 1974 where he was serving a five-year term for armed robbery

Barton To Head Epilepsy Council

The directors of the Epilepsy Council Of Lincoln have re-elected Ann Barton president

New officers elected were Barbara Hull, vice president David Caudy, secretary and Gary McCutchen, treasurer

The council re-elected Kay Lutman Janet Jensen and Ralph Garner, and elected Bill Wood and Rev Roger Casteel to the board of directors

County Judge Appointed To National Panel

Lancaster County Juvenile Court Judge W W Nuernberger was appointed Wednesday to a two-year term on the Advisory Committee for Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention

Nuernberger is one of 21 persons named to the advisory board by President Gerald Ford

Omaha insurance executive J D Anderson was designated chairman of the committee

The Lincoln judge has served on several other national commissions including the National Advisory Commission on Juvenile Justice Standards and Gaols, the Council of Judges of the National Council on Crime and Delinquency, and the Commission on Accreditation, responsible for accrediting corrections institutions across the county

He has also been president of both the State and National Council of Juvenile Court Judges and chairman of the Juvenile Delinquency Task Force for the National Advisory Commission on Criminal Justice Standards and Goals

Burglary Probed

Police Wednesday were investigating a burglary of an apartment at 1223 H occupied by Safdar Ali Lilak in which a radio color television and camera valued at about $530 were taken

Fritz Given Two Years In Prison

Robert Earl Fritz, a prison escapee accused of numerous felonies during a two-state crime spree one year ago, was sentenced to two years in the Nebraska Prison Complex by Judge Samuel Van Pelt.

Fritz, 35, pleaded guilty March 5 in Lancaster District Court to escaping from prison and stealing an automobile.

Fritz, 35, pleaded guilty March 5 in Lancaster District Court to escaping from prison and stealing an automobile. In sentencing Fritz to two years on each count, Van Pelt said the prison sentences would run concurrently, but consecutive to other time Fritz is serving.

Fritz is currently serving a 13 to 50-year sentence in Kansas for aggravated burglary, rape and feliny theft, and Monday was sentenced to a concurrent 50-year term for robbery and shooting with intent to kill, wound or maim, in Nemaha County Court.

Standing before Van Pelt, wearing handcuffs and leg chains, Fritz said, "You mean after Kansas time is done I gotta come back here and serve two years. . . ridiculous."

According to Kansas prison records Fritz is not eligible for parole there until at least 1981. A more likely "conditional release date" is 1999.

Fritz has also been charged with six felony counts in Garden County

Fritz escaped from the Nebraska Penal Complex in Lincoln Jan. 31, 1974, where he was serving a five-year term for armed robbery.

County Judge Appointed To National Panel

Lancaster County Juvenile Court Judge W.W. Nuernberger was appointed Wednesday to a two-year term on the Advisory Committee for Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention.

Nuernberger is one of 21 persons named to the advisory board by President Gerald Ford.

Omaha insurance executive J.D. Anderson was designated chairman of the committee.

The Lincoln judge has served on several other national commissions, including the National Advisory Commission on Juvenile Justice Standards and Gaols, the Council of Judges of the National Council on Crime and Delinquency, and the Commission on Accreditation, responsible for accrediting corrections institutions across the county.

He has also been president of both the State and National Council of Juvenile Court Judges and chairman of the Juvenile Delinquency Task Force for the National Advisory Commission on Criminal Justice Standards and Goals.

Burglary Probed

Police Wednesday were investigating a burglary of an apartment at 1223 H, occupied by Safdar Ali Lilak in which a radio, color television and camera valued at about $530 were taken.

PUBLIC NOTICE
AVAILABILITY OF DRAFT COUNTY PLANNING STUDY REPORT TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

Notice is hereby given that Lancaster County has completed the Draft County Planning Study Report for a proposed county-city highway improvement project consisting of grading, culverts and surfacing The location of the proposed project is

C 55-802 in Waverly, Nebraska, beginning on 21st Avenue at the North line of 22nd Street, thence running South to 17th Street, thence East on 17th Street to the Southeast corner of Section 16, T11N, R8E, 6th P M

This report, as required by the County Compliance Addendum to Nebraska's Action Plan, contains certain data needed for a study of a highway project prior to the start of the planning period Since not all highway improvements are of the same magnitude, nor will they have similar economic, social and environmental effects, a project level will be assigned to each project to indicate the complexity of the project and the detail of the required study procedure The above listed project has been tentatively classified as "Non major" and "Level G " Such classification indicates a minimum degree of study and does not require an Environmental Impact Statement or a Negative Declaration

Copies of this report have been sent to agencies and local officials having an interest in the project The report is available for public inspection at the office of the Lancaster County Engineer, County-City Building, Lincoln, Nebraska

Comments relative to the report may be submitted to the above address until April 16, 1975 Following that date, all comments received will be reviewed and the Final Planning Study Report will be prepared

PUBLIC NOTICE
AVAILABILITY OF DRAFT COUNTY PLANNING STUDY REPORT
TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Notice is hereby given that Lancaster County has completed the Draft County Planning Study Report for a proposed county-city highway improvement project consisting of grading, culverts and surfacing. The location of the proposed project is:

C-55-802 in Waverly, Nebraska, beginning on 21st Avenue at the North line of 22nd Street; thence running South to 17th Street; thence East on 17th Street to the Southeast corner of Section 16, T11N, R8E, 6th P.M.

This report, as required by the County Compliance Addendum to Nebraska's Action Plan, contains certain data needed for a study of a highway project prior to the start of the planning period. Since not all highway improvements are of the same magnitude, nor will they have similar economic, social and environmental effects, a project level will be assigned to each project to indicate the complexity of the project and the detail of the required study procedure. The above listed project has been tentatively classified as "Non-major" and "Level G." Such classification indicates a minimum degree of study and does not require an Environmental Impact Statement or a Negative Declaration.

Copies of this report have been sent to agencies and local officials having an interest in the project. The report is available for public inspection at the office of the Lancaster County Engineer, County-City Building, Lincoln, Nebraska.

Comments relative to the report may be submitted to the above address until April 16, 1975. Following that date, all comments received will be reviewed and the Final Planning Study Report will be prepared.

Marvin L. Nuernberger
Lancaster County Engineer

NOTICE OF HEARING ON SPECIAL ASSESSMENTS IN SANITARY SEWER EXTENSION DISTRICT NO. 3
Notice is hereby given to all persons owning, occupying or interested in lots or parcels of land abutting upon the streets improved in and the land included in Sanitary Sewer Extension District No. 3 within the Village of Hickman, Nebraska, that on April 22, 1975 at 7:30 P.M., a special meeting of the Chairman and Board of Trustees sitting as a Board of Equalization and Assessment will equalize, levy and assess the costs of the construction of improvements and extensions in said District. The property subject to assessment in said Districts is set forth in the following ordinances of said Village:

DISTRICT	ORDINANCE NO.
Sanitary Sewer Extension District No. 3	120

A tentative schedule of the assessments in each of said Districts is available, upon request, at the office of the Village Clerk.
At such meeting all persons interested may appear and make objections with respect to such assessments. Said meeting to be held in the Hickman Community Hall.
Dated this 11th day of March, 1975.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Forecast for Thursday

Best audience for a comedian is one made up of a Gemini majority. Gemini laughs while Scorpio could be envious. Comedians, familiar with astrology, tell me: "Give me Gemini and Aquarius for an audience." Aquarius laughs at the slightest hint and Gemini will gesticulate and laugh at the same time. The Earth signs are more reserved: Taurus, Virgo and Capricorn. Libra will appear to be sitting on his (or her) hands — and then there is an outburst of emotion. The Fire signs — Aries, Leo, Sagittarius — are loyal and will "follow" and promote a performer. The Water signs — Cancer, Scorpio, Pisces — get emotional and will laugh and cry at one and the same time. Comedy is tough and is the essence of drama, the stuff of life, the ying and the yang, the crying and laughing mask.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on short trips, ideas, original concepts and versatility. Leo, Aquarius persons figure prominently. You break new ground. Spirit of adventure is featured. A relative, with definite ideas, could attempt to impose will on you. Stick to principles!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You could strike pay dirt. Old debts are collected. You are compensated for past services. Spotlight is on money and how it gets that way. Aquarian figures prominently. Unorthodox procedures are most likely to succeed.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Lunar cycle is such that your confidence builds — you say what you mean and mean what you say. Social activity accelerates. Personal magnetism draws fascinating people to your side. Ride with tide. Make appointments. Make room for yourself at top.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Deal in specifics. Avoid temptation to hide from facts. The more truthful you are, the greater your degree of freedom. Message will become increasingly clear. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio persons could be in picture.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Emphasis is on creativity, intensified relationship. Change of scenery occurs and you will benefit. Friend helps fulfill "special ambition." You could win popularity contest. Be analytical. Find reasons.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You are "eased" into special situation. Means someone sweet-talks you. Overtime assignment is due. Be diplomatic. If you do a favor, it will be repaid. Gemini, Sagittarius and Virgo could play significant roles.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Philosophical concepts come into focus. Spirituality replaces cold confusion. You regain sense of direction. Open lines which enable you to communicate. Gain shown through written word. Pisces person helps show the way.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): One close to you makes clear that you are responsible for your actions. If you insist on playing a game, the stakes will be for keeps. Cash flow is temporarily impaired. Gain co-operation of partner, mate. Tax, insurance situations are spotlighted.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Strive for universal truth. Don't attempt to duck, bob or weave through labyrinth of false notes. Get finger on pulse of what means most to you. Complete, finish — don't fall into trap of premature action. Study Libra message.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): One who cares for you will perform special service. Show that you are not immune to affection. Means open up and express yourself. Accept gesture of reconciliation. Permit your heart to rule your head — this time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Creative urge dominates. Imprint your style. Be sensitive to emotions of loved one. Personality conflict easily resolved if you toss off tendency to be fixed, stubborn. You can be lenient without abandoning principles.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Some family members may express doubts, confusion. Sense of humor helps you retain balance. Be flexible. If you perceive potential, you win. Be sure of solid base. Then spread emotional wings. Message will be clarified.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you can be moody, psychic and sensitive. Your digestion is a problem — but represents no disaster, only warning signals. August will be a significant month. Cancer, Capricorn persons are drawn to you. You are due for wider recognition. Your ideas, products will gain wider distribution in 1975.
